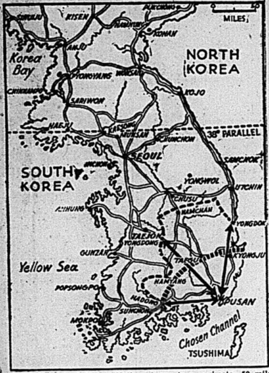
N. KOREAN FORCES WITHIN 40 MILES OF PUSAN

MAY HOLD SMALL AREA AT PUSAN



Withdrawal of United Nations forces to a perimeter 50 miles from the port of Pusan is forecast by some observers. The defence perimeter, shown here as a dark, dotted line, would be held until sufficient power for a counter offensive has been accumulated. In the meantime red advances have been reported close to Taegu and Yongdok. The Northern forces are believed to be running short of tanks and are known to be suffering tremendous losses in every assault. — Central Press Canadian.

Many Expressions of Regret Over Death of Labor Minister

Ottawa, Aug. 1 (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent said today the death of Labor Minister Mitchell is a great loss to the government and to the Canadian people.

The prime minister, holidaying at St. Patrice, Que., when Mr. Mitchell died here today, paid tribute in a statement issued through his office.

He said Mr. Mitchell bore the heavy responsibility for the wartime mobilization of manpower and the government's employment policies of the post-war period.

"For the past year his friends have been aware that the strain was telling upon him and we have all been concerned about his health. It was hoped that the few weeks rest Mr. Mitchell was obliged to take during the winter had put him on the road to recovery, and there was great rejoicing in all quarters of the House of Commons when he returned to resume his seat during the session. Everyone was pleased to see him looking so well at Mr. Mackenzie King's funeral just a few days ago, and his sudden

Armed Robbery Charge Brings 10-Year Term

Brantford, Aug. 1—(CP)—Roy Cunningham, 28, was sentenced Monday to 10 years in Kingston Penitentiary for armed robbery and for shooting at a service-station attendant.

Police said a note found in Cunningham's wallet indicated that he and an accomplice were planning a bank hold-up.

Red Drive Against Rail and Road Centre of Taegu Halted in Tracks

By HAL BOYLE

With U.S. Troops Outside Kochang, South Korea, Aug. 1 — (AP) — American forces beat back a North Korean thrust toward the rail and road centre of Taegu today.

South Korean soldiers fighting alongside the Americans then chased the invaders back into the hills.

The attack appeared to be the spearhead of an enemy force of division size or larger probing American defence lines for an all out drive toward Taegu. It is one of the two communist columns seeking to sweep in from the west and envelop the bulk of United Nations troops before they can grow too powerful.

The blunted red attack moving eastward from the Kochang area along the road to Taegu was a relatively small-size enlargement

But the fact it was halted in its tracks and thrown back sent a thrill of pride through the 24th American Division which previously had been forced to make a series of nine straight withdrawals.

Describing the attack, Col. Richard W. Stephens of Pierre, S.D., said:

"We broke it up with our 60-mm. mortars. They took off through the hills and our South Koreans took off right after them.

"Our trouble is we can't run up these hills the way the Koreans do. We aren't used to it.

"They've shot more artillery in this thing than I've seen to date. But we put some artillery on the area where we think they are building up. An observer said a lot of the enemy came running out naked."

Col. Setphens had high praise for the South Koreans protecting his flanks.

"We have had a tendency to low-rate the fighting ability of the South Koreans," he said. "The more I see of them in action the better I like them. They haven't given ground until we forced them to."

Just before dawn a battlefront mixup caused American machine gunners to open fire on six or seven trucks full of South Korean police pulling northeast out of Hyopchon. Twenty were killed and between 20 and 30 wounded.

LEOPOLD OFFERS SLOW-MOTION ABDICATION

Would Delegate Powers Of Throne Until Son 21

Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 1 (CP)—King Leopold III bowed to the threat of civil war today and offered a slow-motion abdication which threw the thorny royal question back into the lap of parliament.

Leopold, in a broadcast statement early today, said he would ask parliament to vote a delegation of his powers to his son, 19-year-old Prince Baudouin. Leopold would remain king in name only.

Peace-minded Belgians hoped the king's offer would ease the critical tension which had mounted in recent weeks. Many Brussels citizens feared, though, that Socialist leaders of the anti-Leopold movement might not be able to control their forces.

Promise Implied

The king implied a promise of abdication with these words:

"This attribution of royal powers to Prince Baudouin seems to me a necessary step towards the solution which ought to clear the way for accession of the Crown Prince to the throne when he reaches his civil majority (at 21) if, as I hope and desire, the reconciliation promised about my son takes place."

Baudouin will be 21 Sept. 7, 1951.

Some anti-Leopold Socialist leaders termed the king's offer "satisfactory". However, the trade union federation, which had sponsored widespread strikes demanding abdication, called for its regional committees to meet for a fresh evaluation of the new situation.

Belgium has been torn by civil dissension, strikes and riots since Leopold III returned July 22 from his exile in Switzerland.

The violence was capped last night with the death of three anti-Leopoldists in Liege.

The premier declined to say whether the hoped for solution will be the King's formal abdication or a milder delegation of his powers to crown Prince Baudouin.

GIRL OPERATORS

Hamilton, Aug. 1—(CP)—Females have taken over the central police station switchboard. The last male operators leave to take over other duties next week, and three girls will take their place.

Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Canada's Labor Minister, Dies in Ottawa Hospital

Ottawa, Aug. 1 (CP) — Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, 55, the genial, burly Briton who has been Canada's Labor Minister for almost eight years, died unexpectedly early today.

Mr. Mitchell, Minister of Labor longer than any holder of that portfolio in Commonwealth history, died at 2.25 a.m. EDT, little more than two days after entering hospital here for a checkup.

A series of internal haemorrhages caused the minister's death the first of them developed Saturday morning, and shortly after that Mr. Mitchell went to hospital for an examination.

Specific cause of death was not made known immediately.

He had been in indifferent health for several months and had been forced to miss the opening part of the last parliamentary session because he was on a health-seeking trip to the south.

Despite this, his death struck the capital with sudden shock, for only last Wednesday and Thursday the bronzed trade unionist-parliamentarian had acted as an honorary pallbearer at funeral services for Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King here and in Toronto.

Not in Good Health

At that time, he was noticeably not in the best of health. However, his condition did not appear to have deteriorated materially since close of the session, at which he carried out his annual job of piloting his department's estimates past the fire of the opposition.

The minister, a labor man for most of his years, guided Canada's Labor Department through the bulk of the Second World War and through the turmoil of post-war readjustment accompanied by major strikes, other disputes and far-reaching changes in labor relations matters.

That energy-sapping task undoubtedly made inroads on his vitality, though he brought to the ministry a powerful physique and a philosophical outlook that enabled him to shrug off criticisms that fall inevitably upon the minister charged with reconciling the differing outlooks of labor and management.

"This job is the graveyard of politicians," he used to tell friends.

Entered Cabinet in '41

Nevertheless, from the time he entered the cabinet in December, 1941, he remained with it through war and peace to outlast by a large margin his nearest Commonwealth competitor for length of service in the labor portfolio.

The previous record had been set by Hon. T. W. Crothers, who from 1911 to 1918 served seven years and 28 days as Sir Robert Borden's Conservative Labor Minister.

HON. HUMPHREY MITCHELL

Passed Record in 1949

Mr. Mitchell passed that record Jan. 14, 1949.

When he entered his mid-war job of heading the swiftly-developing labor department, he brought to it a wide background in federal, municipal and labor affairs.

He had been a member of the Commons—as a laborite—a Hamilton city alderman and had held some of the top administrative jobs in the labor department.

As wartime labor minister, he had the job of mobilizing manpower for war industries, channelling enough workers into other industries to meet civilian needs and heading the system of call-up for military service.

With the provinces yielding their jurisdiction over labor, all workers thus came under the authority of Mr. Mitchell, an electrical worker born in old Shoreham, Sussex, England.

The federal government retained control of labor-management relations until 1948, when the provinces reassumed jurisdiction over all except that involving railways, communications and other interprovincial enterprises.

With the transition, Mr. Mitchell obtained passage of a new industrial relations and disputes investigation act, overhauling legislation for those industries still under federal labor jurisdiction.

Still Under Controversy

It is still under controversy, with some large segments of labor contending its coverage is not broad enough.

"Reminds me of my trade union days back in England," he said with a smile.

The commons standing now is:

Liberals 185; progressive conservatives 43; C.C.F. 13; social credit 10; independent 5; independent-liberal 3; vacant 3.

Frost Urges Young Canadians To Serve Country

Gravenhurst, Aug. 1 — (CP) — Premier Frost of Ontario Monday urged young Canadians to dedicate themselves to the service of their country.

He told the opening session of the third annual summer conference of the Ontario Young Progressive Conservative Association that Canadians must "be prepared to give service, not just military service," to the strengthening and improvement of democracy.

The current international situation could seriously affect his government's plans and policies, Mr. Frost told the conference delegates, who represent Ontario's 90 constituencies. A number of other Young Progressive Conservative Provincial Associations have sent observers to the gathering.

Mr. Frost said that following the First World War young men found they still had to dedicate their lives to the country.

"Such is the case in 1950 and such, I dare say, will be the case in 1975 and in 2000. It is not enough to turn powers over to elected representatives. We all have to be a part of the government."

Auto Industry Had Biggest 7 Months in History

Deroit, Aug. 1 (AP) — The automobile industry Monday wound up the biggest seven months in its history both in production and sales.

Authoritative estimates put production from Jan. 1 through July 31 at approximately 4,500,000 cars and trucks. Indicates sales over the same period come close to 3,700,000.

While the figures suggest a substantial volume of field stocks, virtually all dealers have more orders on hand than they can fill for weeks ahead.

Yet, despite the uncertainties of the war stuation, the industry's August production may come close to the record the factories set in June of this year with a total output of 853,997 vehicles.

Automotive news estimates that for the week ended July 29 the total of cars and trucks produced in Canada was 9,440. The total produced in Canada from Jan. 1 to July 29 was estimated at 225,097.

U.S. ARMS AID ONLY FOR THOSE WILLING TO HELP

Senate Wants Allied Assistance for Korea

Washington, Aug. 1 — (AP) — Allies of the United States, apparently ticketed for another $4,000,000,000 in arms aid, had sharp notice from the Senate today that the time has come to stand up and be counted in the fight against communism.

With the support of administration leaders, the Senate yesterday wrote into the $34,765,000,000 one-package appropriations bill power for President Truman to cut off economic recovery funds from any country that refuses help for the United Nations fight in Korea.

This action was taken shortly after the Senate received word that Truman was preparing to request an additional $4,000,000,000 for rearming Western Europe. It came amid demands for arms and other aid to countries outside the Atlantic Pact as well.

Loan for Spain

Along that line, senators prepared for a vote today on an effort by Senator Pat McCarran (Dem. Nev.) to earmark $100,000,000 in recovery funds for a loan to Spain.

Any help offered Spain would put an official stamp of approval on a drive under way in Congress to enlist new anti-communist countries — including Germany and Japan — in the military and economic array against the Kremlin.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (Rep. Mass.) said former neutrals in the Second World War — as well as former enemies — "must help in this struggle for survival of human freedom."

Must Share Burden

Suggesting that Spain and the Republic of Ireland be admitted to the North Atlantic Security Alliance, Lodge said:

"It is only fair that they bear part of the burden since their own existence is also in danger."

Thus far Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Thailand have offered ground troops in Korea. Britain's Far Eastern fleet, including carriers, have been in action with American warships almost from start of the Korean war. Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and several other United Nations ships have joined the Korean blockade. Australian Mustang fighters have fought alongside the American Air Force almost from start of the conflict.

Canada, in contributing to the Tokyo air lift, has an RCAF transport squadron in operation.

Driver of Gasoline-Loaded Truck Narrowly Escapes Death at Crossing

London, Ont., Aug. 1 (CP) — William Wakeling, 26, was critically burned today when a gasoline tank truck turned over and burst into flames at a Canadian National Railways' level crossing on No. 7 highway, near Elginfield, 12 miles north of here.

Wakeling, driving the truck, was rushed to hospital here with gasoline burns to his head, arms and upper body. His condition was described as "critical."

Police said that as Wakeling approached the crossing he saw a diesel train coming. He applied the truck brakes but they didn't hold. The truck and gas trailer went into a ditch. The trailer jack-knifed and rolled over. The cab of the truck went onto the railway right of way just as the train passed.

As Wakeling leaped from the cab a series of seven gasoline explosions ripped the area, and were followed by a fire which sent flames as high as 100 feet into the air.

Several hydro poles were burned and Hydro Electric Power Commission officials said the power supply from Elginfield to Grand Bend on Lake Huron was cut. Power supply had only been restored late last night after a severe electrical and rain storm.

Engineer of the locomotive was A. Jackson of Sarnia. The conductor was W. Urquhart, also of Sarnia.

Vital American Seaport Object Of All-Out Drive

Strong Communist Column Repulsed Outside Kochang

Tokyo, Aug. 1 — (CP) — North Korean forces moved tonight to within 40 miles of Pusan, vital American seaport base in southeastern Korea.

The communist gain was made as more fresh United States troops poured ashore to bolster the Allied defences.

A dispatch from Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent in Korea, said the communists were 15 miles west of Masan, which is 25 air miles west of Pusan.

This represented a gain of about 10 miles since Monday.

Other red thrusts were developing around Kochang and flaming Hyopchon in the southern sector and at Adong in the north. But no serious gains had been reported made at these three points.

The spearhead of a probing North Korean column, which appeared to be in division strength or greater, was turned back outside Kochang, field dispatches reported.

Some Withdrawals

A midnight communique from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said some planned withdrawals had taken place during the day along the defence line, but added that Yongdok on the east coast might again be in allied hands. Communist forces were observed in positions almost a mile north of the city.

The reds apparently hoped to push United Nations troops off the Korean peninsula before sufficient U. S. reinforcements could arrive.

But hour by hour anxiously-awaited American troops stepped ashore at a South Korean port. Some rushed to the front to brace battered American and South Koreans who have been shoved back for days by the red hordes from the north.

The red thrusts around Kochang and Hyopchon headed toward Taegu, rail hub on the main central frontline supply route from Pusan. Hyopchon was set ablaze Tuesday morning by American fire bombs. U. S. planes sought out and bombed red troops in villages, hamlets and rice paddies.

Keep Steady Pressure

Plane pilots reported the reds kept steady pressure on the northern front where South Korean troops abandoned Yechon Monday. Yechon is an important link on the east-west highway route across the Hamchang-Andong front.

There was fighting in the streets of Andong at sunset but the city was still reported in South Korean hands at that time.

On the central front the First Cavalry Division reported it was under heavy pressure all Tuesday and made a short withdrawal on its north flank. It claimed the destruction of 16 enemy tanks during the fighting.

The U.S. 25th Infantry Division also made a planned withdrawal to stabilize its central north sector lines.

A. U. S. Eighth Army communique issued in Korea at 8 p.m. Tuesday (6 a.m. EDT) said:

"The South Koreans co-ordinated with United States forces in making a planned withdrawal to stronger, more easily defended terrain. The line has been smoothed and consolidated reducing the danger of having salients and of permitting penetration. Contact has been made with the enemy and there has been no pressure from the enemy."

Thrusts Gain Strength

The eighth Army reported a buildup of communist twin trusts through narrow valleys toward Taegu from Kochang and Hyopchon.

It said the Americans and South Koreans generally fell back on the north and central fronts.

The Kochang-Hyopchon spearheads joined with a companion movement through red-held Chiyre, south of Kumchong, would imperil the First Cavalry front now established a few miles west of Kunchon.

A general adjustment of American and South Korean lines in an arc from Kunchon through Hamchang, and Andong followed the red capture of Yechon, key highway city on the northern front.

A pilot who flew over the fronts said the communist drive on Andong seemed to have stopped after some fighting in the streets.

Pilots claimed the destruction of between 20 and 24 communist vehicles. In addition B-26 pilots said they set four hangars afire near Pudae, eight miles southwest of Ansong, in the south.

Reinforcements Identified

Fresh troops arriving included elements of the U.S. second Infantry Division, which landed Monday, and two additional army units not otherwise identified. An advance administrative unit of the U.S. First Marine Division has arrived in Korea from the United States to prepare for the division's arrival, still awaited at 10 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT).

Fifty Bombers Blast Hungnam In North Korea

Tokyo, Aug. 1 — (AP) — About 50 B-29 bombers struck with a new attack today on Hungnam, chemical and explosives centre on North Korea's east coast. Explosions rocked the area, a Korean air release said, and "thick, greasy smoke" billowed up to 15,000 feet.

The target was the chemical and metal plant of the Chosen (Korean) Nitro Fertilizer Company, two miles east of the plant hit hard by B-29s two days ago The planes dropped 400 tons of bombs on the plant on today's run.

The thick smoke and flames kicked up by the first squadron forced later planes to bomb by radar.

The intermittent rains that have fallen during the past few days have been of great benefit to garden truck, later hoe crops etc., according to farmers on the city market today. New Insurance Plan Inaugurated Northern Electric

A new group insurance plan was inaugurated at the local Northern Electric plant Monday. More than 325 hourly - rated employees are taking part in a scheme sponsored by the Northern Electric Employees' Association. The deal was arranged by the local association following installation of a similar plan at the Montreal plant.

Regional group supervisor of the insurance company, George T. Cook, met with Northern Electric employees yesterday afternoon for a final briefing before the plan went into effect.

The project provides for $1,000 life insurance for males and $500 for females, hospital coverage up to a semi-private room for 70 days. The hospital coverage is repeatable during a year. Children up to the age of 19 are covered as dependents, and up to 24 if they are continuing school studies. For every operation, $200 is provided, and poliomyelitis is covered to the extent of $1,500 for each person insured.

Provides Doctor's Visits

Doctor's hospital visits are provided for 50 days at $3.00 per visit, one each day. Maternity benefits are included in the plan. No medical examination is required for the plan, and it may be maintained while the employee is on pension. It is convertible into term insurance, when the employee is retired.

The company will deduct premiums from employees' cheques, and in the whole deal, they have been "very co-operative", James McRobert, chairman of the association said. Cost to the employee is $2.20 per month for a male member, $6.00 per month for an employee and his family, $1.90 for a female employee, and $5.70 for a female employee with dependents.

Employees are free to carry this and any other plan at the same time, officials said.

Present at the Monday meeting, and spearheads of the movement within the Employees Association were James McRobert, chairman, Jack Sproule, secretary-treasurer of the association, and G. Stubbert, Don Locke and Al Hughes, group representatives.

Pleads Guilty To Assaulting Police Constable

A Picton man, Earl Pike, pleaded guilty to assaulting a police constable while under the influence of liquor paid a total of $136.50 in fines, restitution and costs in police court this morning.

There he attempted to get out of the police cruiser, and was forcibly restrained by PC McDonald.

A second attempt was made, and Pike wound up on the ground. When PC McDonald attempted to get him back into the cruiser the man kicked the constable in the stomach, damaged the car door, ruined the constable's shirt, tie and pants, and scratched him.

The accused was fined $50 and $19.50 costs with the alternative of one month in jail. He had already paid $54 restitution for damages he caused. On the liquor count he was fined $13.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills before sentence was pronounced, commented that "he was very lucky he didn't seriously injure the constable."

Racing Yachts Spend Night In Lee of Government Dock

"Circe" and "Valhalal" summon up memories of mythology but the sleek craft bearing those names were no myth this morning as they rolled lazily on the lee side of the government dock. And they were not alone either as seven trim racing craft lay over in the Belleville Harbor last evening on their way back to Toronto after competing in the Freeman Cup races, which were held last week at Chamount Bay, New York.

There was "Querida" from the Queen City Yacht Club, bearing homeward her owner Fred Waller, nationally known as the square dance caller on Hayloft Hoedown. Fred is plowing his way back home via the inland water route of the Bay of Quinte.

Other boats from the Queen City Yacht Club, were "Valhalla," "Silhouette," the "Lillian E," and the "Circe" while representing the National Yacht Club were the "Louise" and "The Keg."

All the boats had sailed down to Chamount Bay from Toronto and were on their return journey. They planned to pull away from Belleville late this morning for "Presqui'Ile" where they will lie over for a day or so depending on the weather.

Three other boats were sighted far down the bay while another craft sailed right through without so much as a how dee do.

Tied up alongside the coal ramp on the north side of the U shaped harbor in unlovely commercial contrast, was the tug "Salvage Prince" and a blunt molasses barge discharging its pungent cargo.

Beauty and the beasts went unnoticed however, by three tiny tots gamboling on the grass near the wading pool on Victoria Park.

Two Sleeping Innocents Find Themselves Locked in Dark Garage

Boyish pranks are not confined to the young fellows. Occasionally the oldsters toss Old Man Time for a loss and blow off a little steam.

Take the case of the six gentlemen, well past voting age, who indulged in some horseplay at the expense of two of their fellows the other night.

The sextet had been to the north country on special business which took much more time than was anticipated. They drove home in the wee small hours. Two of the party, not accustomed to such late hours, promptly fell asleep in the back seat and were rending the air with cacaphonic snores when the party drove into the garage.

It seemed a shame to wake the sleeping innocents at that hour so, being in jocular mood, the remainder of the party crept silently out of the car, and the garage, locked the door and melted in the shadows to await developments.

It wasn't long before the sleepers bestirred themselves. A sleepy voice drifted into the night air.

"Where are we?" it demanded.

The other, quickly rubbing the sleep from his eyes, took a quick stock of the surroundings and murmured "Looks as though we're in the city cell block."

Now, thoroughly awake, the pair soon realized they were locked in. They tried doors and other methods of egress. Windows were too high to reach. So they resolved to signal for help.

They remembered the horn of the car, and the early morning air was rent with the hoarse shrieks of the mechanical voice.

Outside, the remainder of the party was hugely enjoying the joke. Finally, irate householders in the neighborhood got curious, and the plotters decided to call the joke off.

What was said after the force reunited cannot be printed here.

RECRUITS FOR AIR LIFT

London, July 31 — (CP) — A Canadian navigator who flew with the RAF Pathfinder force during the Second World War was back in London today trying to interest some wartime buddies in the Pacific air lift to Japan.

John Chislett, D.F.C., formerly a squadron leader, said he has been asked by United States charter companies to recruit at least 100 ex-RAF navigators for the Pacific airlift, which transports supplies to Korea from bases in California and Alaska.

Tonight he makes his last flight as a crew member of Trans-Canada Air Lines, with which he has been for four years.

Chislett was born in Port Hope, Ont., and now lives in Montreal. He said he flew "60-something" trips during the war.

Windsor Police Investigating Home Condition

Windsor, Aug. 1 — (CP) — Windsor police and J. Herbert Dawson, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, today began investigation into alleged neglect by parents that almost resulted in the drowing of a one-year-old child in a tub of water last night.

Mr. Dawson said the parents of the child, and of seven other children ranging to 13 years of age, had left their family and had gone a trip during the weekend.

The child apparently crawled into a tub of wash water in the kitchen and was rescued only when neighbors heard its cries.

Mr. Dawson said the eight children would be cared for by the Children's Aid Society. He said that evidences of neglect and the condition of the home, led to the investigation.

Three Injured In Car Crash Near Bayside

An accident at 7 p.m. last night involving a local car and one from Grand Rapids Michigan injured three persons, none of them seriously, just outside of Trenton. Damage to the vehicles amounted to approximately $450.

Police said that cars driven by Charles Haw, of Charles Street, Belleville and by Mrs. Mildred Burr, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, came into collision near Bayside. Mr. Haw was accompanied by his wife and daughter, and Mrs. Burr had as a passenger in her car, Charlotte Eckert, also of Grand Rapids.

All occupants suffered from shock, and in addition, Miss Haw had small lacerations. Mr. Haw received a severe bruise on the forehead, and Mrs. Burr a sprained right ankle.

The Haw car was proceeding west on No. 2 highway and police said that the Burr car, eastbound, pulled out into the westbound lane, coming into collision with the other vehicle.

Provincial constable Williamson investigated.

Pet Squirrel Stands for No Nonsense

You might fool some of the squirrels some of the time and a few of them all the time but there is one in the city that is not to be fooled at any time.

The furry nut collector is a pet of Major Owen Atkins, and daily takes its meals from his hands or more comfortably from his lap or a perch on his shoulder.

The other day a neighbor dropped in to see the squirrel. He held out his hand as if to offer a nut or another kind of squirrel food.

The squirrel found no "eats" in the empty hand, but it wasn't fooled. Rather it got somewhat annoyed for it promptly sunk its teeth in a fleshy part of a finger.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 1 (CP) —Business dropped to a trickle as the session progressed on the Toronto stock exchange and prices settled into a narrow path. A handful of leading industrial and based metal stocks brightened slightly in the very dull dealings.

Volume for the first three hours was 332,000 shares.

In industrials, several utilities, agricultures, textiles and refining oils chalked up small gains. Papers weakened slightly from previous session advances and steels and foods were balanced. Ford A, a leading gainer yesterday, clumped 1 1-4 at 45 1-2.

Advances by Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting, United Keno Hill, Waite Amulet, Quemont and International Nickel pulled base metals into plus territory. Falconbridge and Steep Rock Iron Mines encountered pressure following recent strong gains.

Golds started higher but dipped into minus territory. Western oils also eased from early firmness.

British Aircrew Members Inquire About Positions

London, Aug. 1. (CP)—Busy signals blocked incoming calls today at London's Pathfinder Club.

The telephone lines worked overtime handling calls from ex-R.A.F. men about a United States plan to recruit British aircrew for an airlift ferrying war supplies to Korea.

The Pathfinder Club is an "informal" headquarters established by John Chislett, of Port Hope, Ont., and Montreal, a wartime squadron leader with the R.A.F. Pathfinder force.

Chislett told The Canadian Press here yesterday that the airlift needs skilled navigators and that he hopes to round up some of the men he flew with during the war.

FRACTURES HIP IN FALL ON STREET

Yesterday's rain and slippery pavements resulted in a hospital trip for a 79-year-old woman. The woman, Mrs. S. Godden, of 373 Bleecker Ave., slipped and fell on Front St. and suffered a fractured left hip.

Mrs. Godden, who was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. D. G. Brunton, of the same address, was treated by Dr. A. E. Miles.

SIGNS REMINISCENT OF OTHER YEARS

Signs of the time disturbingly reminiscent of other years and best forgotten, are again making their appearance in the city.

Bravely gazing out at the intersection of Pinnacle and Bridge Streets today, from the cool greenness of the Armouries lawn is a large sign reading "Recruits Wanted". Below this unlovely request are the equally disliked particulars as to the method of becoming a serial number.

SMALLER CARS ALWAYS FULL

One of the more evident paradoxes of this most unusual summer is emphasized daily on our highways. Why is it that the huge, expensive, gleaming automobiles that cost a small fortune carry only one or two passengers while the tiny little English cars are always crammed to the roof with three and four children and their baggage?

Poll Shows Retail Merchants In Favor of Closing Stores On Air Force Day, Aug. 19

Trenton—(Special) — A poll conducted by the Chamber of Commerce among Trenton retail merchants shows that a majority of 3 to 1 are in favor of closing on Air Force Day, Friday, August 18, and remaining closed on Wednesday of that week, T. L. McNeill, president of the Chamber of Commerce told council Monday night.

Mr. McNeill and Chamber of Commerce secretary E. W. Smith appeared before council in order to try and clarify the position of the chamber and council in regard to declaring holidays. Both bodies said they were anxious to avoid any more patchwork holidays such as Dominion Day, when some independent merchants remained open while the majority closed.

"The small independent merchant is a real problem with us," said Mr. McNeill. While we respect their right to their own opinion, we find they are not always too consistent."

Mayor Couch speaking for council said, "We would like to see as many as possible to fall in line with the Friday closing because it is a great opportunity for Trentonians to enjoy themselves for the afternoon and Sports Day only takes place once a year. The declaration would probably meet with less opposition if it came from the Chamber of Commerce."

Only Polling Merchants

"We are really only polling the retail merchants and we may be criticized to some extent for not having full coverage", said Mr. McNeill. "Barbers, beauty parlors and druggists will not give any opinion on these questions until they have had a meeting of their associations. It is ridiculous for us to take polls and try to get opinions and then find they do not mean anything," said Mr. McNeill.

Mayor Couch said that council "would like to see the Chamber of Commerce settle all these holidays, because council has enough other municipal business to keep it busy."

Turning to the question of by-laws affecting store hours, Mr. McNeill said "I have never been able to find out how many by-laws there are about closing." Clerk-treasurer O. W. Larry replied that "most of the by - laws passed in the 30's were backed up by petitions of the respective trades." Mayor Couch said that in order to pass a by-law affecting hours of closing, it would be necessary to get a petition signed by two-thirds of those affected by the question.

Must Have Master Plan

The Chamber of Commerce and council agreed to act together to remedy the haphazard house numbering situation. After discussing the matter, it was agreed that nothing could be done until a "master plan of the town is completed". Since this cannot be obtained until early in the winter action was deferred until the plan is available.

"We appreciate the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce because council, the Chamber of Commerce and all other civic bodies can go a long way together," said Mayor Couch.

Council Limits Numbers of Bus Stops of Dundas Street to Two To Aid Traffic Conditions

Trenton—"Traffic condition in this town are terrible," said Councillor Charles Allore at Monday night's council meeting "And they are getting worse," added Mayor Couch when the question of bus stops on Dundas Street came up for discussion.

After looking into the problem, council decided to limit the number of stops on Dundas Street West to two, one for west-bound passengers at the northeast corner of Front and Dundas Street West and another for east-bound passengers at the Singer Sewing Machine Centre.

Gingras Construction Company was awarded the contract to widen Dundas Street East and straighten the curve on Gilmour Hill. The company has agreed to made the improvements for $5,940.

The Downs Coulter Company was given permission to install a fire alarm in the Fire Hall, in connection with the company's sprinkler system.

A statement of the cost of garbage collection revealed that the estimated budget for this department will be overspent by "two to three thousand dollars." Mayor Couch said that there would be no reduction in collections, however, as "Sanitation is essential and we will just have to get the money some place else."

Complaints of crowded and unsanitary conditions in several Trenton rooming houses were also discussed.

Matter Enlarged

After discussing the possibility of licensing rooming houses and inspecting them to see that sanitation requirements are being met, it was decided to "enlarge" the matter until next meeting.

Clerk-treasurer O. W. Larry said that 3 businessmen had so far failed to pay their business license. He said that he had sent letters to everyone who had neglected to buy 1950 license and had received replies from only 17. Council decided to ask the police to complete the collection. "They are in the same category as we would be if we did not pay our taxes," said councillor Burtt.

Highway Signs Being Replaced By Police

Toronto, Aug. 1—(CP) — Removal of 20 to 25 signs forbidding building of fruit stands along the Queen Elizabeth Way is being investigated by Ontario Provincial Police.

The signs, put up by the Ontario Highways Department, will be replaced.

A department spokesman said the large signs apparently were taken down during "an organized raid" last Friday or Saturday night. He added:

"Trucks must have been used to carry them away and several men must have been engaged in the undertaking."

The removal of the signs is believed linked with department efforts to enforce the section of the Highways Act which forbids erection of fruit or vegetable stands or gasoline pumps on such limited access highways as the Queen Elizabeth Way. The department has started court action against owners of six fruit stands built in the Grimsby area.

Charges of Rape, Robbery Face Toronto Youths

Huntsville, Aug. 1 — (CP) — Two Toronto youths, charged with rape of a woman taxi driver, will be arraigned in magistrate's court here Thursday for preliminary hearing.

They and a companion also face two joint charges of armed robbery.

Inspector Harold Graham, of the Ontario Provincial Police said Douglas Davies and Orval Penrose, both 17, are charged with the rape of Mrs. Jessie Phillips, 36, of Huntsville on a deserted sideroad near here July 19.

Police said the woman was forced at gunpoint into the bush at the side of the road, attacked and robbed.

Davies, Penrose and William Drysdale, 18, of Toronto are charged with armed robbery of Mrs. Phillips. The trio face a second armed robbery charge in connection with the holdup of Klaus Gortmaker, a Dwight, Ont., service-station owner, later the same night.

The three were captured by Provincial Constable J. H. Jones on a tip from a United States tourist that an automobile resembling the one sought was in an accident on a Muskoka sideroad.

The charges were laid following a 10-day investigation by Inspector Graham.

Emancipation Celebration Ends In Riots, Looting

Windsor, Aug. 1. (CP)—Windsor's emancipation day celebrations broke up early today in rioting and looting when a power failure plunged the grounds at Jackson Park into darkness.

Under cover of darkness, looters ran from one concession booth to another. Fights broke out, one man was seriously injured and a riot call was sent in for police help.

A Detroiter, Raymond Graham, 19, may lose the sight of one eye from injuries received in a brawl before the lights went out. He was badly cut about the face.

Police said extensive damage was caused to booths and minor injuries were suffered in fights.

Emergency lights on fire trucks were used in offices where money was being counted and were kept on until power was restored.

At least two men are being held in connection with the rioting and looting. Their names were not released.

Walter L. Perry, secretary-treasurer of the British American Association of Colored Brothers which sponsored the three-day celebrations, said it was the first trouble encountered in the 16-year history of the celebration.

Several thousand persons were on the grounds when the lights went out—the last of a crowd of about 30,000.

50 CENT DIVIDEND

death is therefore a great shock."

Mr. St. Laurent said the labor minister's interest in public affairs was not confined to his department, nor even to those matters of special interest to labor.

"He was concerned that the government should follow policies which would constantly increase the opportunities in life for the ordinary men and women and particularly for young people, the prime minister said.

"For me personally, Mr. Mitchell's death is a special loss ...I know how faithfully he served this country...and what a great gap his passing will leave in parliament and the public life of Canada."

Montreal (CP)—Donald Gordon, chairman and president of Canadian National Railways paid the folowing tribute to Labor Minister Mitchell.

It is with deep regret I have learned of the untimely death of the Hon. Humphrey Mitchell. His rugged and vivid personality will be sadly missed by all who knew him during his long period of responsible and difficult public service, and his homely wisdom will be hard to replace."

Ottawa — (CP) — Percy Bengough, president of the 480,000 - member Trades and Labor Congress, said that the death of Labor Minister Mitchell "comes as a great shock to all workers in Canada."

"Humphrey Mitchell's long record of useful and faithful service to Canadian labor is no happen-chance," Mr. Bengough said.

"His heredity and environment combined to equip him with the character, ability and experience to serve working people both within their own organizations and as Minister of Labor. He has held his ministerial position with distinction for nine years."

The T. L. C. president added that there were times when the Congress disagreed with Mr. Mitchell, "but those were differences over government policies."

"Humphrey Mitchell never forgot his trade union background and the needs of working people."

Ottawa — (CP)—A. R. Mosher, president of the 350,000 - member Canadian Congress of Labor, expressed "deepest regrets" in the death of Labor Minister Mitchell.

"The news this morning of the untimely death of Mr. Humphrey Mitchell came as a great shock," he said in a statement.

"I knew for some months that he had not been in good health but it did not occur to me that his condition was so serious.

"On behalf of the C. C. L. and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and other transport workers and myself, personally, I wish to express deepest regrets and convey to the bereaved family sincere sympathy.

"J. E. McGuire, executive committee member of the Congress and National Secretary - Treasurer of the Brotherhood, joins with me in this public expression of sorrow and sympathy."

Verdun, Que.—(CP) — P. E. Cote, parliamentary assistant to the late Labor Minister Mitchell, paid tribute to the minister as "one of the most ardent defenders" of the world of labor.

Mr. Cote, Liberal member of the Commons for Montreal Verdun-Lasalle, spoke of Mr. Mitchell as one whose work contributed powerfully to making Canada in wartime one of the chief suppliers of the allied forces.

"In these last years, he was particularly consecrated to the maintenance and development of good relations and a spirit of collaboration between workers and employers."

Montreal, Aug. 1—(CP)—Officials of International Railway Brotherhoods headed by Frank H. Hall vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks (A.F.L.), sent a telegram to Prime Minister St. Laurent expressing regret at the death of Labor Minister Mitchell.

Text of the telegram signed by Mr. Hall as chairman of the Union group (75).

The members of the negotiating committee of the International Railways Unions now in session at Montreal were deeply shocked to hear of the untimely death of the Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labor, for whom they had the highest esteem and respect.

Please accept on behalf of yourself and the government our deepest regrets and sympathy. Humphrey Mitchell was an able and conscientious public servant and government officer and his passing is to be deeply deplored.

HAVE DAIRY FARMS STARTED A NEW MARKETING ERA?

Farmers in other branches of agriculture are apparently beginning to see the advantages of the advertising and publicity campaign being carried on by organized dairy farmers to promote the sale of their products.

During the last two weeks, two letters to the editor have appeared on this page praising this "sales promotion" program. Both these letters have expressed the opinion that this aggressive policy to acquaint consumers with the facts about dairy products should be copied by all farmers, whether they are "grain growers, livestock, fruit or wool producers."

Actually, the dairy farmers of Canada are following the lead of British Columbia fruit growers who have made use of newspaper, magazine and billboard advertising to boost the sale of their products for several years. By using the latest marketing techniques, coupled with attractive display packaging, B. C. apple producers are able to sell their apples in Ontario cities and towns that are located in the heart of this province's largest apple producing areas.

In June, the dairy farmers of Canada raised an estimated $250,000 by a one cent a pound deduction on butterfat and the milk equivalent during the month. Similarly, a two-cent-per-bushel levy on grain delivered to the elevators has been collected in the prairie provinces for many years.

To compete successfully on the highly competitive consumer market, Canadian farmers will have to convince the buying public that home grown food products are the best. The best way to do this, is to adopt the selling methods used so successfully by other industries. The modern methods being used by Canadian dairy farmers, B.C. fruit growers and Western grain growers may well mark the beginning of a new era in the marketing of farm products.

MORE HUMANE TRAPS OBTAINABLE

Many people will welcome the news that the Lands and Forests Department of Ontario has purchased a supply of the new Sawyer traps from an English source for use against small ground animals. The virtue of the trap is that it kills the moment the animal steps onto it, comments the Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Few people in cities, or in the country for that matter, realize the amount of cruelty that is involved in the trapping of fur-bearing animals. Trappers see it daily, and they must steel themselves, or grow callous to what they see. Yet it is well-known that when animals are trapped they suffer terribly unless the trapper visits his traps soon and kills the animals if they are not already dead. They die of injuries or hunger, or they may chew off the foot or leg by which they are caught and limp their way through whatever life may be left to them. It is unpleasant to think that if a lone trapper is sick or dies, and nobody visits his traplines, his catches die slow, agonizing deaths.

Having devised a humane trap for small animals, it is to be hoped the principle can be applied to traps for bigger game. For even a killer is entitled to be killed without being subjected to days, or weeks, of suffering.

Many a woman proudly wearing a fur coat for which she may have saved up for months or a year to buy, would experience a feeling of revulsion if she could but know the amount of cruelty involved in obtaining the requisite number of skins to make it.

DOGS AND TEMPERAMENT

Many dogs are sensitive and temperamental, particularly when they get very far from their home environment. They become ridden with the fear that they are being abandoned or parted from those whom they love most. That is why dogs so often disappear from automobiles when touring strange country, or from the baggage cars of trains while in transit, or from the baggage rooms of railway stations. The lost and found columns provide frequent instances of such happenings notes Hamilton Spectator.

Give Rover or Butch a break these hot days by making sure that he is either safe at home or riding in the family car — not chasing it in grievous frustration.

THE DANGEROUS SLOW DRIVER

On Sunday last a Thunder Bay resident drove his car along the Nipigon highway at 20 miles an hour. Behind him was an ancient car. These two cars soon headed a procession — and all forced to travel at 20 miles per hour.

Along came an impatient American who had about 250 miles of driving to do before the day was out. He stepped on the gas when he thought he had a chance to get past the procession. From around a curve ahead came a speeding car. The American was trapped. Fortunately one in the procession gave way and he got out of the road of the oncoming car in the nick of time.

The American was to blame, certainly. But we do not think he should be blamed so much as the two who blocked highway traffic by driving a steady 20 miles per hour. The man at the head of the procession was a selfish driver, a most dangerous driver. — Fort William Times-Journal.

FLOWERS AND PEOPLE

The flowers are people in disguise.
The orchids are the proud.
So haughty they, of them I'd say:
They scorn the common crowd.

The single rose upon a stem
Is beautiful to see,
But every rose the garden grows
Seems friendlier to me.

The sunflower tall of stature stands
Arrayed in bronze and gold.
A doorman he, who waits to see
And welcome young or old.

The little flowers are children gay.
Some love to climb the wall,
And there are those who, I suppose,
Prefer to creep and crawl.

Oh, there is beauty that is rare
And costly to maintain;
But there is grace, thought common place,
Unspoiled by motives vain.
And that may be why daisies grow
Within the reach of all.
Good neighbors they, who seem to say:
"We're glad to have you call."

Japan Beginning To Turn Towards Things Spiritual

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Japan, seeking ideological rehabilitation amidst the ruins of her defeated military oligarchy, is beginning to turn towards things spiritual.

This fact is emphasized by the current visit in the United States of some 60 Japanese leaders—political, business and labor — who are on their way home after attending a moral rearmament conference in Caix, Switzerland. Chojiro Kuriyama, member of the Japanese Diet, addressed the U. S. Senate.

I had a chat with Kuriyama in New York and he confirmed a spiritual movement was under way in his country.

Japan has been suffering from a low wave of morality. She lost her old ideology in military defeat and the post-war years found her with nothing to take its place.

The result of this ideological vacuum was that communism rushed in and took advantage of the situation and many Japanese students turned to the red-ism, lacking anything better.

This provided a potent challenge to Japanese leaders who had no use for communism and saw that they must arm themselves with new ideals if they were to compete with communism. That was the position when the ideology of moral rearmament began to register in Japan.

Find Something New

M. R. A. stands for absolute moral standards of honesty, purity, unselfishness and love; obedience to the guidance of God, and adequate time daily to find out what it is; the fight for sound, honest, clean business and politics; and management-labor teamwork to produce an abundant economy for all. One of the cardinal tenets of M. R. A. is that one can get specific guidance from God if it is sought.

Kuriyama said that when the party of 60 departed for Switzerland, the Japanese Prime Minister told them to bring back something new. They think they found "something new" in this spiritiual ideology, and Kuriyama told me they were going to encourage its spread, and to build a new leadership through the universities.

"It is our sincere regret that Japan has broken almost a century-old friendship between the two countries. In spite of this big mistake on our part, the magnanimous forgiveness and generosity of America not only allowed Japan to survive but is helping our recovery."

Letter to the Editor

Owner Grateful For Return of Wallet.

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

In last night's Ontario Intelligencer was a letter of appreciation for the return of a wallet. Well, here is another letter of appreciation for only those who have lost those valuable things can imagine the anxiety, especially anyone who is hundreds of miles from home and in a strange city. My home is in Brandon, Man., and I lost my wallet here in Belleville so you can imagine the spot I was in and the anxiety it caused me, but many, many thanks to the police, the manager of Woolworth's store, and especially to Mrs. E. Rouse of Brighton Ontario, R.R. 4, for turning it in to the manager of Woolworth's store. When I read the letter in last night's issue of a wallet having been turned in, I had just been called by the police to come to Belleville to identify a wallet that had been turned in. I began to realize Belleville should be proud of such honest, honorable people. Again thanking one and all who really helped to locate my wallet. It is something I'll always remember with very great gratitude. Thanking you for space in your paper.

OUR TOWN

LUNCH WITH D.B.

Regina, Sask.—I had lunch today with D. B. Rogers, editor of the Regina Leader-Post. He is a stocky, mild-mannered man, one of the most respected newspapermen in the country, president of the Managing Editors' Conference and a good fellow to have lunch with if you're troubled by international affairs.

Most Canadians have Koreaitis, the new chronic mental disease, and I found Rogers' answers to my questions a temporary aspirin for a troubled mind.

I guess most of us are searching around as individuals, to feel right about what's going on these days. In this luncheon dialogue you may possibly find an inch of firm ground in the swamp:

"Darn few of the people we've met seem to have a real grasp of the situation," I suggested.

"We've talked to quite a few Canadians on our trip who are all for stopping the Russians cold, even if we have to use the atom bomb, or our troops, yet (like the family of the first United States) don't know where Korea is, much less what the issue there is all about."

"I wouldn't worry too much on that score," Rogers said. "I'll agree that Canadian interest was certainly limited before the situation came to a head. And that happened so suddenly I suppose a lot of people were confused about what was going on. But it seems to me most people are now making an effort to find out the facts and satisfy themselves in their own minds, that what we're doing is right."

"Then you think that public opinion is sound, that we aren't too apt simply to go along with 'our side'?"

"Not entirely. I question your estimate of Canadian disinterest in the facts. But I seriously doubt if people are doing enough hard thinking about the facts which could, of course, lead to a general war."

"Seems to me there are a lot of complexities that tend to leave you confused," I said. "You probably saw the statement by an U.S. observer in Korea that a great many South Koreans hate the Americans—all 'whites' for that matter, as much as the North Koreans. How do you reach a tidy decision in your own mind when there are such untidy factors?"

"Well," Rogers said, "I think you have to look at it in broader terms. You believe in the United Nations. You believe in the principle of collective security. You subscribe to the idea of resisting armed aggression by collective action. It then simply comes down to what constitutes armed aggression and, in Korea, who is the guilty party."

"And on that there are no doubts in your mind?"

"None whatever," Rogers said "I accept the conclusion of the Security Council, based on evidence submitted by a UN commission on the spot. You must accept it. If you reject it, then you toss overboard the whole concept of collective security. And, remember, the UN was set up precisely to deal with situations of this sort. The machinery worked just exactly as it was built to work."

"How do you feel about the effect of this on the average person?" I asked. "It seems to me there's a good deal of restlessness in everybody. How can a man feel a sense of purpose or direction in his personal life with this cloud of possible world war over him?"

"It's difficult, all right," Rogers said. "A sense of personal aim is rather meaningless until it's possible to establish a peaceful world. Still, it seems to me that what we're doing now adds real purpose to a man's personal life, even though it may lead to a general war."

"Do you think it will?"

"It's too soon to know. Only one thing is sure: the Korean war is either the first step towards a third world war or the first step away from it. Could be either."

"What's your own personal opinion?"

"Let's put it this way," Rogers said. "I'm convinced that if the positive action of the United Nations and the stand taken by the United States hadn't developed, the conquest of South Korea would certainly have been a definite step toward World War III. The lessons we'll learn in this emergency may at least delay a general war."

"Although, of course, there's always the chance this, in itself, could start a world war?"

"Yes," Rogers said, "but it was a chance worth taking. I don't believe permanent peace can be achieved in our generation. Possibly not in the next. But our generation may be able to find out how it can be done and the next may be able to find the final answer from our mistakes and successes. In this gradual and painful process of trial and error the Korean experience could be of great value."

"Do you think the UN as the result of this is stronger or weaker? Is a UN without Russia actively on the team a real instrument for lasting peace?"

"I think the UN is stronger than ever," Rogers said. "In some respects it was dying on its feet without its real power being put to a test. People were losing faith in it. I think that's changed now, even if we fail to hold the line in Korea. The Korean affair is perhaps only the first battle in a continuing series of local wars. UN may lose the second skirmish, too. But there's surely encouragement in the fact that the risk of providing armed resistance on a collective basis has at last been taken."

"And what effect do you think this will have on Russia?" I asked.

"Well," Rogers said, "the Kremlin has now discovered that aggressive force will be met by collective force. At least they know now that it's a real force and not just an imaginary threat I presume they'll govern themselves accordingly."

"And what can the average Canadian do about all this?"

"The best thing he can do is to keep himself well informed. We desperately need an intelligent public opinion to back up the difficult decisions our government will have to make to meet this and succeeding threats to world peace."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE NIGHT IS FOR HUMILITY

The night is for gratitude, for an overhauling of the mind, for a spiritual appraisal in deep humility, and in recognition of our frail mortality. Closed in, like the falling of a dark curtain we see no more of the day and its light. Silence under the stars is what we are bequeathed.

Beauty and its memories are transferred to the night, for silent meditation, and for a personal stock taking of the day's activities. We are more one with ourselves, as the night closes in upon us, than at any time during the 24 hours of the full space of day. One half of our world has ceased to toil. It's then that God walks noiselessly into our presence, to explain some of the mysteries of the day, give us counsel, and tell us not to fear.

Walk out into the night. Listen to its many whispers. Many of them are no more than echoes from the songs of the day. Select a favorite star from the canopy of the earth that you call your home, then resolve to shine before men as that star shines before all creation upon the earth.

What a closing in of space is this night of ours! We are most alone at such a time, and most dependent upon a Superior Power to give us untroubled rest and pleasant dreams. The night is no time for unpleasant happenings, no time for vain regrets, but a time in which to tie to hope and faith.

The night gathers its brood to itself, as the hen its chicks, hovering about us all. Said Henry Beston, the New England poet and nature writer: "Learn to reverence the night and put away the vulgar fear of it for, with the banishment of night from the experience of man, there vanishes as well a religious emotion, a poetic mood, which gives depth to the adventures of humanity."

The night is for humility and accord with the mysteries of the universe. A time for willing and complete surrender to the heavenly Father of us all, who gave us life and this earth and all that there is in it, for our adventurous good and enjoyment.

COST OF CHILDBIRTH IN ENGLAND

A recent survey of the costs of pregnancy and the uses of maternity services under socialized medicine in England (for the year 1946, conditions which prevailed then being unchanged now) revealed some interesting facts.

The survey showed that 72.9 per cent of the women delivered in England, Scotland and Wales received supervision provided by the local authorities at clinics, through general practitioners' schemes or through home visits by municipal midwives and health visitors: 26.2 per cent of them received antenatal care, instruction, advice or treatment through private "specialists," practitioners and midwives; and 0.9 per cent of them received no care, advice or treatment prior to their confinement.

Although the Ministry of Health has encouraged institutional confinement only 54 per cent of the women were confined in public asistance hospitals, general hospitals, maternity homes or nursing homes. Of these who chose institutional confinement 56 per cent did so because of unsuitable home conditions or need for medical treatment, and only 17 per cent entered the institution through preference.

Among the women confined in institutions the chief complaints about the care they received there were (1) lack of privacy during labor and delivery, (2) limitation of visiting hours, (3) unnecessarily early waking hours and (4) lack of individual attention. Humph, those English women ought to see how American women and their wishy-washy husbands are pushed around and cowed by the hospital "rules and regulations" — even when they pay their own hospital bills.

Only 52 per cent of the women delivered in institutions and 20 per cent of those delivered at home received any kind of analgesia or anesthesia. They were more likely to receive such painrelievers if it was a first birth, if they lived in rural areas or if they were attended by physician. Shortage of trained midwives, defective equipment and lack of transportation were factors limiting the use of analgesia or anesthesia.

Many of the differences between social classes or levels—differences still precariously sustained against the trend of democracy — were minimized by price control and rationing. Well-to-do wives spent $159.60 and the wives of manual workers spent $86.80 on first births. Women of both classes spent less for subsequent births. National Insurance Act maternity allowances covered only a small part of the costs of childbirth, barely enough for free confinement but not enough for necessary clothing and other equipment for the baby.

A significant note in connection with the survey is that although private practitioners were in charge of 32 per cent of home confinements, in many cases they did not actually carry out delivery. But don't jump to the conclusion that the attendance of the doctor is assured if delivery is in an institution. Actually the survey showed that in hospitals delivery by physicians was even less frequent than among women confined at home.

As I always say, home is the best place to have a baby.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Allergy

Daughter, 11, has summer-long allergy, no eye redness or irritation, but just constant stuffed up nose, sneezing and often thin watery dripping. (Mrs. C. F.)

Answer—If the trouble comes on with or following change of residence for summer your cure is to search for the allergin responsible. She should boop her calcium intake. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope for booklet The Calcium Shortage. Or send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet Relief for Allergy.

Osteomyelitis Not Heritable

As a child I had osteomyelitis and part of the hip bone was removed. One leg is left shorter than the other. I am now 24. If I should marry would my children be deformed? (I. S. J.)

Answer—No.

Varicocele

I was told some time ago that I have varicocele. The specialist said that unless it was removed it would cause sterility. My family doctor says it requires no treatment and it is not a cause of sterility. (B. W.)

Answer—Your family doctor is right—better give trick "specialists' a wide berth. Varicocele is no more serious that varicose vein in the leg.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Times must still be pretty good. You can tell this by the way the clerks in the big stores behave. And in the little stores, too. You would think the war, with all its shortages, was still on, the way the girls and boys behind the counters assume that condescending air when finally you catch their attention.

By and large, they still spend a lot of time in gossip with one another; and they devote quite a lot of time to fiddling down under the counter, stock-taking or something. When I was a store clerk, this arranging and sorting of stock under the counter had to be done before the store opened in the morning and after the store closed at night. Never, never was it to be done while a dollar, in the person of a customer, was poised on the far side of the counter.

A lady writes me that she was much amused, recently, in one of the big department stores, to see one man rebel against this indifference to the customer. She and the rebel had both been waiting a good ten minutes, while clerks darted purposely about, joined in earnest converse, or vanished under counters — anything but attend the customer.

Suddenly the man emitted a shrill, fierce whistle. The whole department froze in startled silence. The customer, looking bland and innocent, held up his finger and connected immediately with one of the astonished clerks. Rather, numbed, the rest of the staff resumed their mysterious affairs.

"I am unable to whistle," writes my lady correspondent. "So I went immediately to the sporting goods department and bought a small metal whistle. I returned to the wicker furniture department, where I had witnessed the miracle, and let go a short, sharp blast from the whistle concealed in my cupped hand. I think that department believes it is haunted. I got waited on instantly. Do you suppose this little idea might spread?"

If it does, we can soon determine the quality of the service in a store by the number of whistles blowing.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

OUT OF THE CLOUDS

It is always hard for us to learn the great lesson that trouble, disappointment, and contradiction often come to us carrying blessings in both hands. We can be conscious of nothing but the pain. But often great benefits accrue to our lives as the result of distressing experiences through which we have to pass.

The Bible sets forth this truth in a quite dramatic fashion. You will find that in Bible teaching, the presence of God is generally represented by a cloud. It was out of the cloud that God spoke to the Israelites at Mt. Sinai. At the time of Jesus' baptism, the voice came out of the cloud declaring Him to be the Son of God. Later, when Jesus was transfigured, the voice of God spoke out of the cloud. Throughout the New Testament it is asserted that when Christ comes again, he will come in the clouds. All through the Bible clouds indicate the presence of God.

Let us think about this the next time we are overwhelmed with trouble. God is in the clouds. He speaks to humanity out of the clouds. These clouds bespeak His presence. Translated into everyday language, this means that if you will only listen, we will hear sounding through some of life's most distressing experiences the loving voice of God, guiding, consoling, encouraging and teaching us.

R.C.A.F. Probing Crash of Plane Which Kills Nine

Ottawa, Aug. 1 — (CP) — The R.C.A.F. moved today to probe the crash of one of its northern ice reconnaissance planes, a big Lancaster, which dived to earth at Canada's most distant Arctic weather station and exploded, killing all nine men aboard.

Word of the crash at weather station Alert, just 600 miles from the pole, came out of the north last night by radio.

Eight airmen died—one believed American—and a civilian employee of the Department of Transport.

The plane was dropping supplies to the station on the northern tip of Ellesmere Island on the shore of the Arctic Ocean. A radio report from Alert said a supply parachute jammed in its tail assembly and the four-motored aircraft plunged to the ground, then exploded and burned. All aboard were killed instantly.

The Air Force said identity of those aboard would not be announced until checks have been made and next-of-kin informed.

Two United States icebreakers, now in the Arctic Ocean—the U.S. navy icebreaker Edisto and the U.S. coastguard icebreaker Eastwind—are en route to the scene. With favorable ice conditions they hope to reach Alert within three days.

May Bring Out Dead

The Air Force said an R.C.A.F. plane might be sent to Alert to bring out the bodies.

The crashed Lancaster was one of two ice reconnaissance planes which left the R.C.A.F. station at Greenwood, N.S., recently for a northern patrol.

Alert, the most northerly of the chain of weather observation posts strung across the Arctic, is staffed by four Canadians and three Americans and was established last April. It was the ultimate objective of the U.S. naval force of two icebreakers and two cargo ships which sailed into the Arctic Ocean early this month carrying supplies.

Recently an R.C.A.F. Canso plane carrying nine men including two scientists on a tour to check the north magnetic pole, sank in a lake 50 miles north of Edmonton. All were rescued.

Worst R.C.A.F. crash on record occurred last April when a Canso bringing Eskimos south for hospital treatment, went down between Churchill, Man. ,and Winnipeg. All 21 persons aboard were killed.

CONDUCT CAMPAIGN

Hamilton, Aug. 1—(CP)—Members of the Hamilton Municipal Employees Association are conducting a campaign to discourage citizens coming to civic departments on Saturday, Mayor Lloyd Jackson said yesterday. The workers now maintain only a skeleton staff on Saturdays, and claim people will receive better service if they come on other days. Terming the campaign "insubordination," the mayor said he would endeavor to have it stopped.

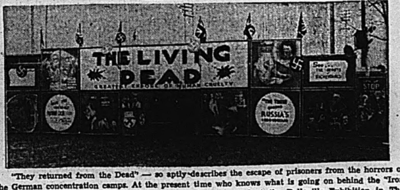
"THE LIVING DEAD"



"They returned from the Dead" — so aptly describes the escape of prisoners from the horrors of the German concentration camps. Parking Problem Main Discussion At Council Meeting

Stirling—The parking problem in Stirling was the main item of discussion at a special meeting of council held in the council chambers last Tuesday evening.

Reeve Wells presided and councillors Bailey, Bradshaw and Montgomery were in attendance.

It was pointed out that the Streets have recently been marked off for angle parking and any parking on the south side of these streets make it impossible for two motor vehicles to pass. It was also pointed out that council has expended considerable money and time in providing public parking lots at the corner of Church and Emily Streets and at the rear of Hatton Hardware and Charles Davidson's feed store and motorists should use them.

Close to Shopping Centre

All three are close to the shopping area and if they are used the parking problem should be eliminated. Chief Constable S. Eggleton has been notified to prosecute all offenders after Friday, July 28th.

The resignation of S. Armstrong as caretaker of the community hall Price Hall and dam was tabled and accepted and Clifford Cain was appointed to fill the position for the balance of the year at the same salary.

The matter of fill for the sewage disposal tank at the wartime housing project on North Street was discussed and left in the hands of Reeve Wells.

Probe Ordered By Premier Frost

Penetanguishene, Aug. 1 (CP) —A provincial government probe into conditions at the Ontario Hospital for the Criminally Insane here opens today.

The investigation was ordered by Premier Frost after complaints by Mayor E. C. Sargent of Owen Sound about the escape of two prisoners sent to the hospital after murder cases. One of the prisoners, Melville Wilkie, is still at large. It is his fifth escape. The other, George Herman Woodcox, has been recaptured.

The investigation will be conducted by Welfare Minister Goodfellow; his deputy, B. W. Heise; W. E. Hamilton, Minister of Reform Institutions, and his deputy, C. F. Neelands.

They will conduct the inquiry behind closed doors. But they are expected to issue a statement after the probe.

Says Submarine Is Chief Threat To Democracy

Halifax, Aug. 1 — (CP) — Dr. J. E. Keystone, superintendent of the Naval research establishment here, told a service club yesterday the submarine and not the atom bomb was the chief threat to democracy.

"The number one problem of the democracies is to see we have adequate naval strength backed by all the resources science can bring out to cope with submarines," he said. "The defence of Western Europe depends on control of the North Atlantic."

He said the industrial potential of North America is unlikely to be directly injured by atom bomb attack.

"If Europe should fall," said Dr. Keystone, "our chance of defending this country depends on our having command of the sea."

Possible technical developments in undersea craft made the problem of coping with submarines in another war more difficult than in the last one.

Would Use Money To Put Factories Into Production

Washington, Aug. 1 — (AP) — Part of the $4,000,000,000 President Truman is requesting for foreign arms aid would be used to put Western European munition factories into production, officials said today.

While they said the lion's share of new arms orders would go to American industry, Canadian factories also would share in the fund. Most of the money would be spent for heavy equipment such as tanks, artillery and other weapons which take up to two years to manufacture.

Officials gave two reasons for the plan:

1. To relieve the burden on American industry, which will be turning out at least $10,000,000,000 in supplies for the U. S. armed forces.

2. To quicken the rearmament pace of the 11 countries now allied with the United States in the Atlantic Pact.

Under the stepped-up arms program, U. S. dollars would be used to pay not only for U. S. raw materials and machinery, but also for purchases in other world markets which have materials needed by Atlantic - Pact countries.

Most of the arms produced would go to nine Atlantic - Pact powers — Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, Italy and Portugal. Iceland and Canada have not requested American arms assistance.

Other countries eligible include Turkey, Greece, Iran, the Philippines, Korea and countries "in the general area of China."

A GREAT CANADIAN

He loved his native land, and nobly played
His part as statesman, patriot and friend,
He had a vision of his country's needs
And faith he kept unto the very end.
His name shall stand in Canada's Hall of Fame
And with her elder statesmen be enrolled
With Laurier, Macdonald—lasting names
That in our country's annals ne'er grow old.
A great Canadian, who for twenty years
Guided the ship of state in calm and strife
And 'mid a nation's wartime woes and fears
Kept faith in God and lived a Christian life.
God sends us men in times of stress and strain
Men to fulfill their country's destiny—
May Canada, our own, our native land
E'er hold their names in grateful memory.

—Helen B. Anderson.

"He was a great Canadian, a world figure, and a very human figure as well. He was Mackenzie King of Canada, and we shall not see his like again"—The Ottawa Journal.

Atlantic Pact Nations Call Board Meeting

London, Aug. 1. (AP)—The 12 Atlantic Pact nations called the pact's fulltime Military Board here for special talks today.

American, French and British military men flew here from Washington to meet with the Atlantic Pact Council deputies.

The deputies are beginning their second week of work on plans to speed rearmament of the west against aggression.

A brief announcement issued by the U.S. Navy office here said the member of the military experts are "in London at the request of the North Atlantic Treaty organization council deputies to meet briefly with that body during the current session."

"The standing group is the full time military planning agency of the military committee and will confer with the council deputies on matters of the North Atlantic Treaty organization planning with which the standing group is concerned," the announcement said.

After four days of secret sessions last week, the council deputies announced they had decided on ways to step up defence production in Western Europe.

Gen. MacArthur Returns to Japan From Formosa

Tokyo, Aug. 1 (AP)—Gen. MacArthur returned to Japan today from Formosa where he talked with Chiang Kai-Shek on defence of that nationalist island fortress. He left the airfield immediately for home without commenting on the talks.

His plane stopped briefly at Okinawa on the return flight.

The Shin Sheng Pao, Taipei newspaper which reflects the views of the Formosan provincial government, said:

"Gen. MacArthur's visit has brought hope and light to free China and all people anxious for its survival. Formosa today is more important...than ever before but at the same time has additional responsibilities."

WEDDINGS

GREEN—EADY

A pretty wedding took place in St. Agnes' Anglican Church, Long Branch, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion with Regal lilies and gladioli, when Gladys Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Eady, became the bride of Vernon Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Green, of Marmora.

The Rev. E. A. Slemin, of Bala, Ont., who as a former pastor had christened the bride, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Jack Eady was organist and Mr. Norman Nuttall as soloist sang "Thine Alone", and "The Lord's Prayer".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white slipper satin with train and bodice of French lace. Her full-length veil of nylon net and French lace was held in place by a tiara of rhinestones and seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white gardenias, stephanotis and maidenhair fern.

Little Miss Lynda Eady, niece of the bride, was very dainty in a junior gown similar to the bridesmaids', carrying a nosegay of carnations, as flower girl.

Mr. Maxwell Green was his brother's groomsman, and the ushers were, Ralph Green, Gordon Eady and Ivan Eaton.

The reception was held at "Lynn Arms", Mimico, where the guests were received by the bride's mother, wearing grey lace with navy accessories assisted by the groom's mother in navy sheer with white accessories, also the groom's grandmother, Mrs. Theodore Reid, of Stirling, wearing grey crepe and black accessories. All three wore corsages of carnations and roses.

For the wedding trip to Ottawa and Crowe Lake, the bride chose a white gabardine suit with navy accessories. On their return they will reside in Long Branch.

Guests were present from Marmora, Bala, Stirling, Deloro, Campbellford, Bonarlaw, Peterborough, Port Hope and Georgetown.

MORRISON—JOHNSON

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized in the parsonage of St. Paul's Church, Stirling, on Saturday July 22nd., when Eleanor Doris, daughter of Mr. Harold Johnson, of Stirling, and the late Mrs. Johnson, became the bride of Gerald Robert Morrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Morrison, of Stirling. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. E. Baker and the wedding music was played by Mrs. Baker, who also sang, "I'll Walk Beside Thee", during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a street length dress of pale blue sheer with white accessories. Her corsage was of Sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Her only attendant was her sister, Joan, who wore pink sheer with white accessories and a corsage of Rapture roses and cornflowers.

Following the ceremony, the wedding party motored to the home of the bride's father, where a buffet luncheon was served to approximately 33 guests. The brides' aunt, Mrs. Henry Farrell, of Trenton, received attired in a grey flowered dress with grey accessories and a corsage of red roses. The groom's mother assisted, wearing a navy flowered dress with navy accessories and a corsage of Sweetheart Pinnochio roses.

The dining room was decorated with pink and white streamers and bells with baskets of snowballs and mixed flowers. The wedding cake centred a small table with bowls of sweetpeas.

Out-of-town guests were present from Trenton, Hamilton and Bonarlaw.

Amid showers of confetti, rice and good wishes the happy couple left on a motor trip. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Morrison will reside in Stirling.

Girl May be Heir Of Dead 'Pen Pal'

Johannesburg — (CP) — Miss Jean Botha, of Oudtshoorn, South Africa, is heiress to £10,000 ($31,000) from a man she has never seen—unless somebody is hoaxing her.

She corresponded with a Mr. R. McCormick, of Eiffel Flats, Southern Rhodesia, through a pen friend club, and they were to have met at Oudtshoorn on June 30.

Somebody telegraphed that Mr. McCormick had died of snakebite on May 10, and later wrote that the body was being sent to London for burial and that the writer understood that McCormick had left Miss Botha £10,000.

Miss Botha, who works in a cafe and as a shop assistant, dislikes publicity and says that she has made no plans concerning the supposed inheritance.

She understands that correspondence is passing between Oudtshoorn and London with regard to the matter.

Glamorous Eyes Sign of Health

To blend her eye shadow, Singer Martha Lipton likes to use a tiny brush. And if you want your eyes to look lovely, don't abuse them, she cautions.

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS who are clever with the items in the make-up box realize that a touch of mascara on the lashes, and a faint film of blue shadows on the eyelids, impart the charming, mysterious touch. But they may have noticed that the effect is glamorous only when the eyes are bright and sparkling, in a healthy state. If they are tired, look listless, the toilet table aids fall far short of their purpose.

What about your eyes? Do they tire after a short period of reading or sewing? Does the type blur or the stitches jump around? Well, you know what, don't you? The time has come when you need medical attention; maybe you need glasses.

Even in your outdoor pastimes you need good vision. Some of us use our eyes more arduously in our leisure-time activities than on the jobs—depending on what the job may be.

Many a lady golfer may go off her game, wonder what has happened. Her eyes aren't right. In fact, they are very wrong, poor abused peepers.

Headaches at the movies drive some women to see optometrists. The movies merely make the woman conscious of the fact that she is suffering from eye strain.

Strong sunlight is a menace. Glare from sun-lit water may create a visual disturbance that may jeopardize one's safety for some time. And, of course, it has been known to contribute to automobile accidents.

Don't forget to wear your dark glasses when going on a motor trip or when sun-bathing on the beach. If you neglect to do that little thing you will not be justified in bawling and complaining about squint lines, because that is how you get them.

Canadian Guests Get Fashion Nod at Garden Party

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London — (CP) — Fashion bouquets at this year's Buckingham Palace garden party went to overseas guests.

Newspapers picked dominion visitors wearing the most eye-catching styles. Feda Northrop of Canada, in a yellow dress edged with white pique, introduced cotton to garden party styles.

Another Australian, Margaret Croker, wore what was described as the cheapest hat ever worn at the garden party, and one of the prettiest. It was a small, pale blue grosgrain cloche which cost £1 ($3.10.)

A French guest chose an elegant silver-grey lace dress with fantail of pleated lace cascading down one side, worn with a huge picture hat.

The longest dresses were ankle-length, in lace, georgette and organdie, worn mostly by older women. The younger set favored long calf-lengths, in everything from froths of candy-striped muslin to severely-tailored dove-grey grosgrain.

Queen's Costume

The queen wore rose pink printed chiffon with cross-over neckline and straight skirt. A long panelled caps flowed from the shoulders almost to the ankles, and a stiffened pink tulle hat swept sideways in gigantic "mothwings."

Princess Margaret wore a rainbow organdie skirt with short, ice-blue silk jacket, and a huge halo picture hat with transparent brim.

Parasols are again becoming garden-party style. In place of big picture hats they give glamor without trouble in a high wind, and are frothy and fluffy as they were in grandmother's day.

Pancakes are rich or poor, depending on where you eat them. If they are thin delicate pancakes served with a few ounces of burning liquer, you may pay two or three dollars a portion in an expensive restaurant. If you ask for pancakes in a roadside stand in Arizona they maygive you a stack free in place of bread and butter.

The French call their thin pancakes crepes suzette. According to one story, they were named after a certain Suzette who served them to Louis XV with whom she was in love. Another version has it that they were named after a little tot staying with her mother at a hotel in the Riviera in 1892.

The Russians called their thin pancakes, served with caviar and sour cream, blinis. These are sometimes known as blintzes—thin pancakes rolled with cottage cheese and served with sugar and cinnamon.

Blintzes are an easy light summer dish. The can be prepared hours beforehand, and then pan fried or popped into the oven just before meal time. The combination of cold sour cream, and hot pancakes is pleasing and refreshing.

Measure 1 cup sifted all purpose flour. Sift flour with 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder and 1 teaspoon sugar.

Beat 2 eggs slightly. Combine with 1 cup water and mix well.

Add liquid to dry ingredients beating well.

Heat enough shortening or oil in a small frying pan to merely coat the surface. Pour enough batter to cover bottom of pan. Tip pan to spread batter evenly. Brown on one side only. Continue cooking pancakes until batter is used up.

Combine 1 1-2 cups creamed cottage cheese with 1-4 cup raisins. If raisins are dry, place in hot water for 5 minutes, then drain and add to cottage cheese. Add 1 tablespoon sugar to cheese and 1-4 teaspoon salt. Mix well.

Place a small amount of cottage cheese on the browned side of each pancake. Roll up pancakes, folding in sides, to enclose cottage cheese mixture. When ready to serve melt butter or margarine in a heavy frying pan. Add blintzes and brown well, turning once to brown on both sides.

Only Sincere Desire to Stop Drinking Can Help Alcoholics Rotary Told

"A man stops drinking only when he gets no more pleasure out of it," stated W. J. Binkley, chairman of the Kingston Branch of Alcoholics Anonymous is an address to the weekly luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club held Monday noon in the Hotel Quinte.

"Alcoholism is something you never get over," said the speaker. "It is a disease, and though a man stops drinking he is still an alcoholic. I have been an alcoholic, I am now, and I always will be. Only a sincere desire to stop drinking will ever cause an alcoholic to stop.

"The first step in the reclaiming of an alcoholic is the man's recognition that he is an alcoholic. And an alcoholic knows he is one. Heavy drinkers, drunkards, and social drinkers are not alcoholics necessarily. An alcoholic is a man who has no limit to his drinking and who cannot stop until he is too drunk to go any further.

'Cures' Do Not Work

"An alcoholic comes to Alcoholics Anonymous because he has no where else to go. 'Cures' do not work. There is nothing that medical science can do to halt his drinking. The clergy can do nothing for him for the simple reason that they are not alcoholics. In Alcoholics Anonymous are men who have suffered as he has suffered; who have exhausted all the excuses for their drinking; who know all the lies that the alcoholic can tell them. You can't fool an alcoholic about alcoholism. In AA the drunk is on his own. He receives no sympathy because the men in AA received no sympathy. They are too concerned with the problem of their own alcoholism and how to remain sober to nurse along an alcoholic.

"All that a member of AA can do is tell the alcoholic what AA has done for him. A man is on his own as far as AA is concerned. Alcoholics Anonymous does not solicit members. It is self supporting and asks for nothing from anyone. All it wants to do is to tell everyone that it is available to those who need its support.

"For those who wish to join AA they should first be sure that they are alcoholics because AA can do nothing for you unless you are one. Ask any policeman on the street how to get in touch with AA because usually those who come to AA have been through police hands. They are men who have been on the bottom and finally realizing that there is no fun to drinking have started on the long road back.

"No one in AA knows who the other members are. They are Jim or Bill or Bob. No one identifies the members in AA but themselves. We in Kingston do not know the members of the Belleville group.

Personal Problem

"One of the problems always confronting a member of AA is the thought that perhaps he could start drinking again and control it. 'Is this abstinence the thing I really want to do?' he asks himself. If a man has not had a drink for a year at least and wants to settle the problem for himself he should test himself in circumstances where he can be reclaimed without injury. I, personally, got drunk three weeks ago after abstaining for three years and found out that there is no fun in it at all. Now I do not want to drink again, ever. This is a problem that every man in AA has to solve for himself.

"There is a branch of AA in Belleville which will help any alcoholic male or female, who cannot handle the problem for themselves."

The speaker was introduced by Jamieson Bone and received the thanks of the club as expressed by Dr. George Stobie.

SPECIAL SESSION

Manila, Aug. 1 — (AP)— The Philippine Congress met in special session today to consider emergency questions linked with the Korean War. Top priority items for the 10-day session were preparedness measures, taxes and the question of sending a Filipino Expeditionary Force to Korea.

MORE INFORMATION

New York, Aug. 1 — (AP) — The government is reported turning up "more information every hour" about a Russian atom spy ring in which six Americans already are accused. United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol said yesterday the inquiry into the ring's activities is "far from completed."

Import Control Machine of Govt. On Way Out

Ottawa, Aug. 1—(CP)—The big government import control machine, which for three years helped steer Canada over the economic dangers of a dollar crisis, is on its way out.

With the wind knocked out of the crisis and Canada's reserves steadily mounting, three of the top officials in the trade department's emergency import control branch will step out of harness today, back to jobs in private industry.

J. S. Irvin, 40, of Ottawa, the branch's director, will join the Steel Equipment Company Ltd.

W. E. McDermott, 48, of Oakville, Ont., director of the import allotment division, assumes an appointment with the Reo Motor Company, as assistant to the vice-president and general manager at Leaside, Ont.

G. B. Greene, 34, of Westboro, Ont., the allotment division's assistant director, becomes Ottawa representative of the Sheridan Equipment Company.

The branch, first created late in 1947 when Canada's dollar reserves hit a low ebb, will continue for some months to come, with tapering administrative control over the flow into Canada of United States capital goods and some consumer items.

Some time next spring, or possibly earlier, the branch will issue its last permit and make its last decontrol, bringing Canada's import policy in relation to U.S. goods back to the fairly free position it held before the 1947 crisis.

Meanwhile, W. F. Bull, 47, of Weston, Ont., the department's create the import control branch, commodity chief who helped will take over its administration in addition to his own work.

Assisting him will be E. J. McWilliams, 33, of Toronto, Mr. Irvin's associate, who will become assistant director, and A. F. Cunningham, 57, of Owen Sound who, in addition to his work as projects chief, will become director of the allotment division.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

There is more behind that rhubarb that featured the Smiths Falls Royals - Picton McFarlands game on Saturday evening than the mere collision at second base between MacDonald of the Picton team and second baseman Smith of the Royals.

That in itself is enough to start hot-tempered players throwing punches, but not enough to send an incensed crowd of spectators roaring to the scene of conflict.

We are informed that what rankled the Picton team and its fans is a piece that appeared in the Smiths Falls sheet, written by its sports scribe and which was reprinted in the Friday edition of the Picton Gazette. Here is what the Falls reporter wrote:—"THOSE IRREGULARS AGAIN — Picton Athletics, who have annoyed Royals' management and fans in the past, because of their informal habits, pulled all the stops of disorder in their game here Saturday afternoon. The first Picton players drifted to the field at the o'clock — game time— and it was not until 50 minutes later that their manager and umpire arrived. During the game, a vagrant from the Picton bench clowned around near the playing field, taunting umpires and players and distracting the attention of the fans. The whole performance added up, in our opinion, to an insult to baseball. It is also a dangerous practice in a league where other teams are striving to maintain a high standard of play and fair play. Such tactics can be factors in inducing the better teams in the league to play with a different organization in the following season."

Just whom the "vagrant" he refers to is we can but guess and that is big Vern Goyer. Apparently Jumbo was up to his old tricks and raising the ire of the fans with his antics along the base lines. As for being "an insult to baseball" that statement is a bit far-fetched. The Falls reporter should have been around in the good old days when Ron Church was in his heyday. The fans, rabid and otherwise of such teams as Oshawa, Peterborough, in fact any team against which Church played took the horseplay good naturedly and as a matter of fact got as much "kick" out of the clowning as did Church.

And from what we have seen during some of these Central Ontario Baseball League games, the fans should have had some "clowning" along the base paths to take their attention away from the sorry spectacle that was being dished up on the diamond.

The Falls reporter has a justifiable gripe in the late appearance of the Picton team, manager and umpire, but that is a matter which should have been reported to the loop executive. If our memory serves us correctly the executive laid down a fine for teams being tardy in appearing for a game.

THAT MAN'S HERE AGAIN!

Flinty Freddie, the hard-boiled Atkins from Australia whose temper was shredded to such an extent last Friday night when he was disqualified in two falls against Yukon Eric will be back again come next fish-day and this time his opponent is the popular colored sensation from Africa Seli Samara. Atkins gave a display of temper last week seldom seen in a wrestling ring here and it did not enhance his popularity, if he has any, with fandom here. His inability to cope with the rock-like Eric and the fact that Referee Bunny Dunlop did not stand for his sometimes crude methods "riled" the Aussie no end and he vented his spleen on the official in no uncertain manner. However he will meet a sturdy foeman in Samara and the clash should prove interesting. Warren Bockwinkle is back again and the popular wrestler will meet roughie Abe Zvonkin in the semi final. And look what's here. Another Masked Marvel. The hooded gent in his first Belleville appearance will open proceedings in a bout against tough Jack Moore.

SOCCER COMING UP!

The draw for the Trenton Challenge Cup has been announced as follows:—

1st Round

(a) Batawa vs Vets to be played at Batawa on Wednesday 2nd August.

(b) Belleville United vs 6 R D to be played at the Fairgrounds (Belleville) on Tuesday 1st August.

Semifinals

Trenton Flyers vs Winner of (a).

Trenton Merchants vs Winner of (b).

Dates and grounds for semifinals will be announced later.

On Civic Holiday, Monday August 7th, the Bay of Quinte All Stars will play an Exhibition Soccer match against East York United of the Toronto Senior League at the Belleville Fairgrounds. The kick-off is scheduled for 6 p. m. The local boys will be out to avenge their defeat on Dominion Day by other Toronto Senior League visitors, Toronto Celtic. East York and the Celtic are of about equal strength this year so a good game is assured.

NO COBL GAMES THIS WEEK

No Central Ontario Baseball League games are scheduled until Saturday night of this week when the Brockville Memos will be the guests of the Batawa Shoemen at the Exhibition Grounds. Reason for the no games is the Eastern Ontario Baseball Tournament is being played in Kingston this week or until Thursday night. Don Thomas and Eddie Schreider, Belleville's diamondese twins, are handling the entire tournament series, a job which they were requested to do after a fine performane during last year's tournament.

Rising New York Yankees And Slumping Detroit Tigers Begin Battle for First Place

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

First place is the prize tonight as the rising New York Yankees and the slumping Detroit Tigers clash in the first of an important three game series.

A capacity crowd of 55,000 is expected at Briggs Stadium to watch the mound duel between southpaw Tommy Byrne of the Yankees and righthander Art Houtteman of the Tigers.

A Yankee victory would put Casey Stengel's men back at the top of the American League for the first time since June 9, the day the Tigers wrested the lead from New York.

Byrne has beaten the Bengals four times without a defeat this season and holds a lifetime 12-3 mark against them.

Houtteman, steadiest Tiger hurler, has a 3-2 mark against New York for the year. His lifetime Yankee mark is 8-5.

Wednesday, Allie Reynolds will face Dizzy Trout. In the final game Thursday, Eddie Lopat will pitch against Ted Gray. Thus far the Yankees lead the Tigers, seven victories to six.

No Changes in loop

There were no games in the American League yesterday but the National League picture changed somewhat when Boston Braves defeated St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 and Chicago Cubs whipped Brooklyn Dodgers 8-5.

Walker Cooper's single off Tommy Glaviano's glove in the last of the ninth drove in Earl Torgeson with the run that gave Boston the victory and moved the Braves into second place past the Cardinals. The Braves now trail the pace-setting Philadelphia Phils by three games. The Cards are 3 1-2 games behind and the fourth place Dodgers lag by 4 1-2.

Went the Route

Warren Spahn, who went the route for his 13th victory, gave up six hits and fanned four to increase his league - leading strikeout total of 132. Max Lanier was the loser.

After the Cards had fought back three times to tie, Lanier walked Sam Jethroe to open the last of the ninth. Torgeson, hitless in four previous times at bat, singled Jethroe to third.

After an intentional walk to Bob Elliott loaded the bases, Sid Gordon hit into a force play at the plate, but Cooper came through with his game-winning hits.

The Cubs overcame a 5-1 deficit. They tallied three times in the sixth to kayo starter Dan Bankhead. Two straight hits finished Chris Van Cuyk in the seventh. Rex Barney relieved, gave up three bases on balls and uncorked a wild pitch to set up a four run inning for Chicago. That was the game.

Branch Rickey To Take Erskine From the Royals

(By The Associated Press)

Branch Rickey, President of Brooklyn Dodgers, flew to Montreal last night to see if Carl Erskine, righthanded ace of Montreal's Royals, was ready to return to the big leagues. He saw plenty.

The 23-year-old Erskine came up with a 3-1 victory over Jersey City Giants for his sixth straight victory. He now has an over-all 9-6 mark with Montreal.

The league-leading Rochester Red Wings opened a 14-game home stand with a 4-2 victory over Syracuse Chiefs. Jack Faszholz, rookie righthander, went the distance. Don Bolweg and Ed Mierkowicz helped him with a home run apiece.

Springfield Cubs swept a doubleheader frm Buffalo 5-3 and 6-3. Al Ihde scattered six Bison hits in the opener, while his mates clubbed Sandy Silverstein and Al Carrasquel for 13 safeties, including a homer by Ransom Jackson.

In the second game, Bob Spicer scattered eight hits. Big Jack Wallaesa connected for his 21st homer, a triple and double, to ease Spicer's eighth triumph.

Babe Barna hit two home runs, good for five runs, to lead Baltimore to a 6-5 victory over Toronto. Irv Medlinger, although he needed aid from Ray Shore, notched his ninth victory.

Game Postponed Because of Rain

The exhibition softball game between the Brewers' Warehouse team of the Commercial Softball League and the All-Stars aggregation of the CNR Interdepartmental League scheduled for the CNRAA Recreation Grounds last night was called off due to wet grounds The game, it is expected, will be played on Friday night.

Beshore Ready For Louis if He Beats Charles

By JACK HAND

New York, Aug. 1 — (AP) — Want to fight Joe Louis?

Freddie Beshore's head jerked up at the words.

"Who wouldn't?" came his quick reply. "Everybody would like to fight him. You're a cinch for a good pay day.

Beshore was "cooling out" after a workout at Stillman's gym for his Aug. 15 title bout at Buffalo with Ezzard Charles, National Boxing heavyweight champion.

"Everybody talks about how I'm going to lose to Charles," he said, "let them talk. I don't care what people say. If I do what Ralph (Ralph Gold, his manager) tells me, I'm going to win.

"And if I beat him, I'll fight Louis. I have no fear for either of them. The only thing that makes you lose is to make mistakes. If I beat Charles, they'd have to give me Louis. I've got to win."

Nobody ever heard of Beshore around here until he signed for the Charles match last winter. Now, due to three postponements, and hunks of publicity, he is well known.

"I've been training on and off for seven months," he said. "If I'm ever ready, this ought to be it.

Between postponements and wars, Freddie spends his time at his home town of Harrisburg, Pa.

"So far my biggest purse, I guess, was about $3,200. I won't get much for this one, either. But it's my big chance. I don't care about the money this time. I want to be champion."

Beshore describes his style as "aggressive, crouch, bob and weave."

"At least I think it's aggressive," he said, "I'm a pretty good body puncher. It always looks like I'm getting hit a lot but I'm usually slipping the punch."

By JIM HOLTON

Pittsburgh, Aug. 1 — (AP) — Check those tears of pity for "poor old" Joe Louis, fight fans. Jake Mintz says you've got it all wrong.

Jabbering Jake — the excitable ex-dancer who handles the affairs of Ezzard Charles, National Boxing Association heavyweight champion—wants a little sympathy for his boy, who's due to face the former fight king in the fall.

"The way everybody talks you'd thing Louis will have a tougher time fighting his condition than fighting Charles," sputtered Jake.

"In fact," Mintz went on, "it's the other way around. Ezzard's got a lot tougher training problem than Louis."

Then he lauched into his argument:

"Louis never really retired.

"Lee Oma ran out on Louis in Detroit and his manager, Tex Sullivan, said that billing the fight as an exhibition was ridiculous.

"Louis kayoed Pat Valentino in the eighth—the same round Charles did in a legitimate title fight—but he gave him a worse lacing, and with 16-ounce gloves - - -

Boxed Every Day

"He boxed nearly every day in that 'exhibition tour,' then he went to South America where he did the same thing. He came home, joined a circus and fought, sometimes twice a day.

"Louis in the last year has been the most active heavyweight in the history of the game."

Then Mintz turned to Charles' troubles. Said he:

"As everybody knows, Ezzard has been doing nothing for the last four months because of his heart injury. He's off his timing and out of practice. He should be okay for the Freddie Beshore fight (in Buffalo Aug. 15), but he'll have lots of work to do on himself after that."

Charles now weighs about 185.

"We still think Louis is the best man in the game today but we want a chance to prove that Charles is no phony champ. We want a chance to lick the 'old man.'"

Cleveland Front Office Refuses To Name Man

(By The Canadian Press)

Embarrassed executives of Cleveland Indians humbly apologized Monday for the public "humiliation" of the Boston Red Sox manager, Steve O'Neill.

But they refused to name the Cleveland front office man who got stout Steve, a normally placid man, so hopping mad that the "spy glass affair" was taken to Will Barridge, president of the American League.

What happened was this:

Friday night, in a Cleveland-Boston ball game, O'Neill accused the Indians of employing a man at the scoreboard to steal signals through a spyglass.

Then, before the game Saturday, a package was handed O'Neill in a public ceremony before some 47,000 fans. It was supposedly a gift from some Erie Pa., admirers. Steve made a solemn acceptance speech and sent the package to the clubhouse.

When he opened it, he found two telephone books, a toy pair of binoculars and a note suggesting they be left in Cleveland for further use.

Steve dashed over to the Cleveland club house and charged inside demanding to know who did it. Everybody looked innocent.

"Day or night," exploded O'Neill, "winter or summer, I'll catch up with the man who did that to me.

"It was the most disgraceful thing I've ever known to happen in a big league ball park."

Boston's general manager, Joe Cronin, filed a complaint with Harridge. Harridge asked the Indians for an explanation.

Harridge said Monday he has not yet decided what action he will take since all the facts are not yet in.

"I talked today with Harridge," said Ellis Ryan, Cleveland's president, "and he feels that I have taken the proper stand in withholding the guilty person's name. . .

"This is a serious thing. Cleveland is O'Neill's home town. I have apologized to Steve and Tom Yawkey, president of the Red Sox. The man will be severely reprimanded.

"As far as I'm concerned, the incident is closed."

Cimarron Chief, pacing star of the Cimarron Ranch Stable being groomed for the $65,000 Little Brown Jug, died Sunday of an intestinal disturbance in his stall at Baltimore Raceway.

An Ontario Hockey Association executive committee in Toronto Monday night refused to grant forward Al Buchanan a release from Toronto Marlboros to play with Edmonton Flyers of the Western Canada Senior League.

The committee said Edmonton should have made overtures to Marlboros and not the player. Buchanan said he was dissatisfied with Marlboros and wanted to move west.

The committee suggested he ask Edmonton to approach the club to arrange the transfer.

Alan McFater, 19-year-old Toronto lightweight boxer, will fight his first 10-rounder tonight against an old enemy, Jean Richard of Montreal, in a main bout in Montreal.

The young boxer has only fought eight-rounders since he turned professional a year ago and has won nine of his 11 fights, all main bouts.

Rain Monday forced postponement of all matches in the Ontario tennis championships at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club. The tournament started Saturday.

21 No-Hit Games In 11 Minor Loops This Season

New York, Aug. 1 (AP) —Note to major league managers seeking pitching strength: There has been 21 no-hit games in 11 minor leagues so far this season. Against that, the last big league no-hitter was Sept. 9, 1948, when Brooklyn Dodgers' Rex Barney blanked New York Giants 2-0.

Marlin Stuart, who pitched a perfect game for Toledo of the American Association (class AAA) in beating Indianapolis, 1-0, on June 27, already has been recalled by the Detroit Tigers.

Two others in the American Associaiton hurled no-hitters — Kirby Higbe, who had 11 years service in the majors, and Bob Alexander.

Others include:

Canadian - American League (class C): July 20, Fred Belinsky, Quebec, beat Pittsfield, 8-1, nine innings.

Tough Pigeon

Fraser, Ia., Aug. 1 (AP) — A pigeon that survived 500-degree heat of a large smokestack apparently was well on the way to recovery today.

The pigeon was found by workmen when they opened the steel door at the base of the smokestack at a power plant Saturday.

The bird was somewhat singed and blinded in one eye, but otherwise appeared still in good health.

B. H. Bryson, plant superintendent, said the only way the bird could have got into the combustion deposit trap at the base of the 212-foot stack was through the top opening. How long the pigeon had been there was not known. The door had not been opened for about seven weeks, Bryson said.

Junior 'A' Clubs Will be Allowed Four Imports

Toronto, Aug. 1 (CP)—Junior A clubs in the Ontario Hockey Association will be allowed four imports—two of their own and two from their affiliated Junior "B" clubs—this season, the O.H.A. executive committee decided Monday night.

Under present regulations, each category is allowed two imports. But imports to "B" teams can not jump up to "A" clubs.

The proposal was carried over the objections of Guelph delegates. It was suggested by Staff Smythe of Toronto Marlboros, Lloyd Pollock of Windsor Spitfires and Hap Emms of Barrie Flyers.

George Dudley, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association secretary, opposed the move. He said it was prohibited by C.A.H.A. regulations and added: "It would be a sad commentary on the O.H.A. if Ontario teams took the lead in securing additional imports."

Lacrosse May Have to Change Its Environment

Vancouver, Aug. 1 (CP)—Lacrosse has changed its environment and now may have to change its season—if it hopes to survive.

Lacrosse was first played outside in the summertime. Now it is played indoors, mut still during the summer.

On the west coast, hot summer nights are keeping sports fans outdoors.

"We would like to move the game outdoors," says Oscar Rand, dean of lacrosse at New Westminster. "But what with the rain and changing style of game, it would make matters worse. The only solution is to turn to the winter season.

"Sure, we would have to buck hockey, but basketball seems to be doing all right.' '

Old timers around here will tell you the game once drew as many as 20,000 customers a game. In New Westminster now, the average gate runs between 200 and 300.

Before the First World War, lacrosse was booming. A professional league existed in Canada with player deals running as high as $5,000 for one man. Today a club is considered lucky if it draws that much for a full season's gate.

Lacrosse lost ground through the '20s and it was a dying field game that the late Dan McKenzie of New Westminster brought indoors in the early '30s.

"Lacrosse will run in cycles," McKenzie used to say. The game proved him right.

McKenzie's new seven-man indoor game put new life into lacrosse. now it needs something else.

Today, there are no team feuds or legendary figures. Officials are crowding schedules with more and more games and sending teams out of town for home games—because they draw better away from home.

O.H.A. to Decide Operator of Brantford Team

Toronto, Aug. 1 (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association was asked Monday night to decide whether Abe Yampolsky or Bob Brown will operate Brantford Nationals, provincial senior 'B' champions, this winter.

Yampolsky was president last year. Brown was vice-president.

At an executive meeting Monday night, Yampolsky claimed Brown was elected this year at an illegal meeting. Brown said Yampolsky operated on a "hit-and-miss" financial system last year and was antagonistic towards the players.

It appeared likely that the OHA would call a meeting of the players and the executive to try to reach a solution.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There is a definite choice of leads from every hand in bridge. Differences of opinion will arise as to which is best. But for my dough, the one to prefer is that which has the best reason.

Leads come in three groups. Starting with the most desirable, the order of choice is as follows: Tops, first; long suits, second; short suits, third. From shorts lead the highest.

Short suits are three carders (tripletons), two carders (known as doubletons), one carders (singletons). Of these three types of shorts, a singleton lead is clearly preferred.

But as between a doubleton and a tripleton, which is the best? Many will say the doubleton. The reason they offer is that there is a quicker chance to ruff that suit. Something in its favor.

My preference, however, is for the tripleton lead rather than the doubleton. To me it has a decided point in its favor when my partner is dependable. Such as it is, the reason sounds good.

If partner assumes you have a singleton, he returns that suit fast. If it happens that your lead was not a singleton, his return loses timing in defence. Which is bad defence medicine.

With a doubleton lead, partner may not discover in time whether such it is. With a tripleton lead his rule of 11 more quickly tells him that it is not a singleton. He then defends differently.

South is in four hearts after he and his partner had bid only hearts. It is your opening lead from the west hand shown here:

♣ K J 6 4 3

Lead your doubleton diamond and partner may think it is a singleton. Lead your tripleton spade and he knows it is not a singleton. He will then switch to another suit.

This may not be a good enough reason to convince you of the desirability of my choice. If not, keep happy in your guessing contest.

Movie Column

By GENE HANDSAKER

Hollywood, Aug. 1—(AP) — Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis swear they're the best of friends and angrily deny a rumor they might split up. Jerry vows, "we're just the happiest duo in show business."

Martin and Lewis are professional screwballs from the nightclubs. They're extremely funny fellows if you like your comedy seasoned with insanity. Jerry Lewis, 24, wears a crew cut and, sometimes, a simian expression. Dean Martin, 33, is the dark, good-looking crooner of the pair.

They were featured in "My Friend Irma" and "My Friend Irma Goes West." Now they're stars and investors in an independent production called "at war with the army," based on a play that ran four months on Broadway last year.

Agile Charcter-man

Jerry spontaneously assumes any character that comes to his agile mind. Suddenly he was a she salesman examining my oxford: "We can give you a 9½-B if you prefer."

Next he was a doctor, tapping my knee with a pencil and fingering my eyes and ears.

Jerry: "When we work, we really go to town." Dean: "We don't get back, but we go to town." Jerry flicked his cigaret ashes into Dean's hair. Dean, morosely: "How much can I take?"

I asked about that rumor of a possible break-up. Jerry: "Where'd you hear that? The happy people. We get mad when we hear something that's not true."

17 Sidewheelers Will Start in Two-Mile Race

Westbury, N.Y., Aug. 1 — (AP) — Seventeen of the country's fastest sidewheelers are scheduled to start Thursday night in a wide-open $50,000 Nassau two-mile pace at Roosevelt raceway.

The winner nets $22,500 as the purse is split six ways.

Jerry the First, owned by Burdick and Cobb of Washington Court House, Ohio, is a 3-to-1 favorite. But heavy backing also will go to Grattan McKlyo, from the stable of Ben F. Owen, Omaha Neb., which won the Nassau last year, setting a world record of 4:16 4-5.

A Canadian horse — Dr. Stanton, owned by Lindy Fraser of Forest, Ont.— has been entered.

Jerry the First won here over the mile-and-one-half rout recently, and has copped the $50,000 Golden West Pace in California for the last two years. He will be an entry with Gene Abbe, another noted distance pacer.

Three tiers will be on the line behind the mobile starting gate.

Other outstanding pacers such as Good Time, Scottish Pence and Indian Land were not so fortunate. They also will be in the second tier but on the outside.

Dr. Stanton drew the No. 17 position and will be the only horse in the third tier.

Good Time won the $25,000 National Pacing Derby here last month, while Scottish Pence has won 11 of 13 starts.

St. Catharines In Second-Place Tie With Brampton

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP) — If there were two second halves in each lacrosse game, St. Catharines Athletics would be unbeatable.

Athletics staged their customary terrific last half drive Monday to wallop Brampton Excelsiors 15-5. The win moved St. Kitts into a second-place tie with Brampton in the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior series.

The winners, minus six regulars, brought Leo Teatro back into action after a three-week layoff due to a leg injury and dressed big Bill Nelson, making his first appearance in St. Kitts colors. Both played a key part in the win.

Teatro shared scoring honors with Jim McMahon, each scoring four times. Nelson played brilliantly on defence and kicked in with two goals. Harvey Madgett scored twice for Bramps.

St. Kitts held a 2-1 lead at the end of the quarter, and stretched it to 6-2 by the half. They poured in five straight tallies in the third quarter, and outscored Excelsiors 4-3 in the fourth.

CONVICTED OF MURDER

Halifax, Va., Aug. 1 — (AP) — A judge last night convicted George Thomas Halley of murder in the Feb. 3 rape-slaying of 12-year-old Marion Lloyd and sentenced him to the electric chair. The verdict climaxed a tumultuous day in the courtroom. Earlier, in which a state psychiatrist termed "a deliberate tantrum," Halley had severely bitten both his wrists.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was downtown shopping today, and after supper she said to pop, William, the most common, ordnerry woman sat next to me in the bus all the way home. She chewed gum absilutely audibly, and her fingers were covered with big vulger rings. Not that I ever judge other peeple by appearances, or even by sounds, but when she dropped off to sleep she gave absilute proof of her vulgarity, ma said.

Do you mean she used unmentionable language in her sleep? pop said, and ma said, Well, no, although I must say I wouldn't answer for her dreems. But what I meen is, she had been reeding a gawdy looking magazine, and she left it open on her lap. The name of it was uncensored Stories, and when I was sure she was asleep I couldn't resist the naturel temtation to pick it up and glance at the story she had been reeding. You'll never even guess the title of the story, William, ma said.

I'll never even try, pop said, and ma said, It was called "Always a Secreterry and Never a Wife." and my ferst impression was vindicated, because nobody of any taist or refinement could possible reed sutch unadulterated trash. It was about a girl secreterry named Mertle who flitted from office to office because she couldn't learn to hold her employers off at arms length. In fact she was little Miss Gullibility in person, with the intelligents of a 10 year old moron. The end was even trashier than the beginning, and I put it back on her sleeping lap with a sigh of relief when I got off the bus, ma said.

Did you say you only glanced at the story? pop said, and ma said, Well, in a way, I meen I'm a quick reeder, especially when a thing isn't werth reeding. And kindly stop laffing, she said.

Which pop didn't.

Ottawa, Aug. 1. (CP)—Canada's Korean contribution is raising a need for United States funds running into thousands of dollars a day.

Financial experts say it could become a big drain on the country's U.S. dollar reserves, but they hope arrangements can be made with Washington to prevent it.

Roughly 1,000 Canadian sailors and airmen are being paid in American funds. Three destroyers—they each cost about $4,000 a day to operate—and eight four-engined North Star transport planes are operating from American bases, using American fuel.

A Conservative estimate of daily dollar needs might be at least $20,000 all told.

There are hopes, however, that when the financial side is worked out, some of the cost will be made up by balancing credits arising from the presence of U.S. troops in Canada.

When the three destroyers left Canada they took thousands of U.S. dollars with them to pay their 800 men.

Consideration is being given to paying them dollar for dollar instead of at the existing 10 per cent discount, officials say. Any such gesture would probably be extended to the 250-odd airmen of No. 426 transport squpadron based at Tacoma, Wash.

Operations in Korea require American, instead of Canadian, money. When the destroyers refuel, the bill ultimately lands in Ottawa.

The new drain comes at a time when Canada's dollar reserves position is the best it has been since the danger point was reached and the government took emergency action in November, 1947. At last report they totalled more than $1,200,000,000 or well past the danger point.

Dollar Position Greatly Improved Says Minister

Bathurst, N.B., Aug. 1. (CP)—Canada's dollar position is greatly improved, and her reserves are at the highest level since about the end of 1946, Finance Minister Abbott said in an address Monday when he received the freedom of Bathurst.

He was guest speaker following tributes paid by the town to some of the men who have been prominent in Bathurst's development. The freedom of the town was conferred upon Mr. Abbott in appreciation of his services to Canada.

Mr. Abbott said the improvement in Canada's dollar position has been the result of many factors—some internal, some external.

"In some respects we have been fortunate," he said. "In other respects the improvement is due to the efforts of the Canadian people to produce goods that could be sold for American dollars, and the acceptance by the Canadian people of temporary restrictions necessary to conserve American dollars."

The Canadian Pulp and Paper industry was by far the largest earner of American dollars and could take a share of the credit for what had been accomplished.

KRIC & KROC

The long and short of it will be the comedy team of Kric & Kroc, who will be appearing at the Belleville Fair during the week of August 14-15-15-17.

This brand new European importation from France will be another added sensation on the program at the Fair where they will present to the delight of the audiences their unusual acrobatic knockabout offerings.

Their slap-stick comedy is a little different than done by acts of a similar nature. They are a very entertaining act.

London Blacked Out by Storm, Rain Soaks City

London, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP)—For 7½ hours Monday, Londoners learned what happens when electric power is suddenly cut off.

With few exceptions, houses were without current. There were no street or traffic lights, theatres or elevators. Factories were at a virtual standstill.

Meanwhile, a heavy rain soaked the city, flooding low-lying streets near the Thames River.

The blackout was caused when lightning started a fire in a hydro substation during an electrical storm that spread over western Ontario.

The power failure extended 30 miles northeast to Stratford, 25 miles northwest to Exeter and 19 miles west to Strathroy. More than 115,000 persons were affected.

Heavy rain and wind caused some crop and road damage in the area. Near Wingham, the barn of Wallace Conn was struck by lightning and burned. Damage was estimated at $8,000.

Near Blenheim, high winds and hail damaged tobacco plants while in other sections limbs were ripped from fruit trees by the wind. South of London, heavy rains washed out some country roads.

Only one section of the city escaped the blackout—when conversion of hydro-electric power from 25 to 60 cycles had been completed.

Blast Follows Hit

An explosion in the substation followed the lightning hit and within seconds some oil had been ignited and exploded, scattering the flames over the building. The station was so badly damaged that power had to be cut off in the whole area.

Power was cut off at 3:15 p.m. EDT. It was restored at 10:50 p.m.

The rain lasted for more than an hour. It flooded basement and sewers. With no traffic lights in the downtown area, traffic was snarled and directed manually by police.

It posed a threat for crops. W. K. Riddell, Middlesex county agricultural representative, predicted heavy losses. The storm was the climax of weeks of intermittent rainfall that might cause wheat still in the fields to "sprout". Some farmers said it would hinder harvest operations.

ACTRESS RECONCILED

Chicago, Aug. 1 — (AP)—Actress Betty Hutton and her former husband Ted Briskin, divorced five months ago after two separations since their 1945 marriage, have reconciled. "We are definitely back together as of right now" the blonde film star said last night. The couple, parents of two small daughters, did not announce any date for a remmarlage.

Marriage Deal Sold Girl, 17, to Elderly Farmer

Vancouver, Aug. 1 (CP)—The story of the "bartered" 17-year-old bride—sold into marriage for $700—broke Monday. And all because she and her 71-year-old "bridegroom" drove through a red light.

An elderly pig farmer from Edmonton, the girl's 18-year-old brother and a sister-in-law have been charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency. Police, who withheld the names of those involved, said the marriage was fraudulent because of false statements in the marriage licence.

Police said the marriage deal was completed in Edmonton, the farmer agreeing to pay $700. The mother, unaware of the plan, was to receive $500 and the brother $200. The girl was given $100 for travelling expenses.

The brother allegedly acted as bridegroom at the marriage and the sister-in-law as matron of honor. The farmer posed as her father. The brother is said to have arranged the marriage because he wanted to help his mother.

"The girl was sold," said a police officer "so the mother could benefit by the money."

The girl came here to await her brother and the prospective bridegroom. The marriage was performed last Friday.

It came to light when a traffic officer halted an old model car, driven by the girl, as it went through a red light. The girl and the farmer were in the car.

"Where's your driver's licence?" asked the traffic officer.

"I haven't one."

"How about your father?"

"He's not my father," the girl replied. "He's my husband."

The pair were taken to police headquarters, where questioning brought out the marriage story.

Police said the farmer owned a three-acre farm in the Edmonton district. They said further charges may be laid.

COMMANDER SHOT

Damascus, Syria, Aug. 1 — (AP) — Lt.-Col. Mohammad Nasser, commander of the Syrian Air Force, last night was shot and severely wounded by unknown persons as he was driving home from the airport here. A friend with him was killed. Nasser was one of Syria's negotiators of the Armistice with Israel last year.

Council Passes Motion Criticizing Highways Dept.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 1. — (CP)—A motion criticizing the Ontario Highways Department was passed by City Council Monday.

The motion, stating the department is getting "too much power for comfort," was addressed to the Ontario Municipal Association. It proposed that the legislature be requested to review powers given the department under the Highways Improvement Act.

Specifically mentioned was a clause giving the department power to control building of roads, stands and other structures with a certain distance of controlled access highways.

Members expressed fear that the regulations would be extended to take in highways other than the Queen Elizabeth Way, which now comes under the clause Ald. George R. Inglis, sponsor of the motion, said control of the regulations would tend to slip into the hands of paid officials and not elected representatives.

The resolution was supported by Mayor William Houck, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Niagara Falls.

Bogota, Colombia, Aug. 1 (AP) — El Tiempo, Colombia's largest newspaper, was prohibited from publishing yesterday's edition because it ran a commercial advertisement in the space usually devoted to editorials. The order banning the edition was made by the government censorship office which said El Tiempo had been warned it may not devote the regular editorial space to matter other than editorials.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

Diane had said, with great unwillingness, "I couldn't afford them, of course. I told you I haven't a cent! Jack staked me to them. Naturally, I'll pay him back as soon as I get a job," she had added before her sisters could voice their objections. "But it was absolutely necessary to have some thing good. Pruitt thinks they're splendid."

And apparently they were largely responsible for the first job she got posing for an ad for shampoo. The color camera made the most of her vivid hair and dark eyes, and Tyson told her privately that Pruitt had said she could go places if she really wanted to .

What Diane had not yet admitted, even to herself, was that she didn't really want to. Just that one job had shown her how much effort, how little glamor there was to the working side of being a model. But her pride held her to it. Besides, the good times and the flattery did pay for the drudgery and the boredom in some measure. And so she had only smiled and looked pleased at Tyson's comment.

Jenny sighed, sitting at her desk in the living room. It was the middle of October, and she was going over her accounts, but the faces of her two sisters constantly intruded between her and the column of figures. When she heard a footstep on the porch, she turned in her chair with a feeling of dread. Fred again! What could she say to him now?

He came in, as always his eyes questioning her hopefully. "Di here?" he asked.

For a wonder, Di was. But Jenny doubted if she would consent to see him. She had grown apart from them all these past two weeks, spending her time in town, or, when she was at home, working over her appearance and her clothes. Almost every evening she went out with Jack Tyson or one of the gay, metropolitan crowd which congregated at his house.

Jenny went slowly up the stairs. How could she persuade Diane to see Fred? How make her see that her place was at her husband's side? She knocked once on Diane's door and went in.

Her sister lay on the bed, a jersey housecoat wrapped closely around her long, slim figure, a light wool afghan thrown over her. She had had her eyes closed, but she opened them when Jenny came in.

"I'm sorry. Were you taking a nap?"

"I'm trying to relax, but I'm as tense as a fiddle string," Diane said, sitting up. "What did you want?"

"Fred is here." Oh, she shouldn't have said it so bluntly. Jenny winced at her error as she saw Diane shrink away from the announcement. She added quickly. "Please Di, go down and see him, He's so unhappy. He looks wretched, thin and haggard. How can you be so cruel to him?"

Diane did not answer. She had turned away, her legs swung over the side of the bed, and one hand stretched behind her.

Jenny pressed her point. "He loves you so—you know he does Di. And you—I thought you loved him! You seemed to."

"I did. I do!" Diane protested vehemently, then caught her lip between her teeth as if she were sorry she had said so much. "That is why I don't want to see him. It —it hurts too much."

Jenny's heart bounded with relief. She did love Fred, then And if she loved him, things would surely work out somehow. She went over to her sister, sat down on the bed beside her and put her arm around her.

"Di," she said softly, "don't you know that love is the most wonderful thing in the whole world? How can you throw it away like this? How can you play with Fred's deepest feelings? And with your own?" She held her close. "Please see him, Di. And don't be bitter. Remember all the nice things, all the beauty and happiness of your marriage, not the other part. Try it again."

Diane pulled away, but there had been a moment when she had relaxed against Jenny's shoulder, when Jenny had felt her momentary surrender to the idea. She got up, pulled Diane to her feet. "Go down," she said. "Now."

Diane's eyes widened. "But I'm not— I look dreadful," she protested. "I can't—Tell him to wait a little."

"No," Jenny declared firmly, "it must be now. He's your husband, silly, and he won't care if you look a little mussed up. He'll only love you the more for it." She gave Diane a push, watched her go slowly from the room, even more slowly down the stairs. Jenny looked down at her hands and saw that they were clenched tightly together, almost in an attitude of prayer. She held her breath until she heard Fred cry, "Diane!" There was a word of longing and love in that cry, and Jenny's heart was filled with hope.

She did not know how long she stood there, but at last she came back to the present. She went down the back steps quietly and stood a moment in her kitchen, looking about her blankly. It was too early in the day. The breakfast things were all washed and put away, the luncheon dish prepared and ready. There was nothing for her to do.

She went out into the garden, picked a few early chrysanthemums aimlessly. There was such a feeling of suspense within her that it was almost a physical sensation. "Hi, there," a voice said from the other side of the hedge, and she looked up.

"Hi, yourself," she said to Faith. "What's new?"

"Come over and chat awhile," her neighbor said. "You hardly ever do any more, and I miss it. Just because you have a family to take care of, and I'm a lone woman, is all the more reason for you to take pity on me."

Jenny felt slightly guilty. She had neglected her neighbors this past six weeks or more. In fact, she told herself sternly, she was all too apt, even in normal times, to build a world for herself in her home She went through the gap in the hedge and smiled at Faith.

"You won't be a lone woman long, I imagine. When are you and Max getting married?"

"That's one of the things I want to talk to you about," Faith said. "Come in and share a cup of coffee with me."

They sat in the cosy dinette and talked. "Max wants to get married right away," Faith confided. "And so do I really, but something has come up which makes me think we ought to postpone it for a while.

"You see," she leaned across the table toward Jenny, " I was just about to write Ken's mother and tell her about my engagement, when I got a letter from her." Ken Owen was Faith's dead husband. "To tell you the truth, I had spent several days over that letter, trying to tell her in such a way that she wouldn't be hurt by my news. Because, you see," she said slowly, "Ken's mother idolized him. He was her only child, and his death was a terrible blow to her."

"To you, too," Jenny murmured remembering how long Faith had immured herself with her grief.

"Yes, that's true," Faith confessed. "For a long time. I thought I would never get over it. I hated the older people who told me that time would bring peace to my heart. We had been so happy, and I was bitter at losing him." She sighed briefly, then went on. "But I truly believe his death was worse for Mother Owen than for me. He war he entire life, and had been for years."

"I see." Jenny understood what a difficult thing it would be to break the news of Faith's engagement to another man to Ken's mother. "How did she take it?"

"That's it, she doesn't know yet," Faith confessed. "Before I could compose a letter which I felt wouldn't hurt her too much, I got this letter from her, saying she was coming to visit me this month for a bref stay." She fluttered her hands helplessly. "She's never visited me before, so I don't know how long a "brief stay" will be, but I told Max that of course I couldn't answer that letter with the announcement of our engagement. He saw exactly what I meant."

"Then you are going to tell her when she's here?" Jenny asked. "It would be much easier, I think, than doing it by letter."

"Oh, I'm so glad you see it that way, too. I wanted the opinion of someone else—someone who was not as closely concerned as Max and I. She's coming tomorrow."

"Why didn't you tell me before?" Jenny demanded. "We shall have to entertain her for a little—that is, if she'd like it. Nothing gay, of course, but a couple of family partes. And we'd have Max."

"You're an angel," Faith breathed. "That's just what I was going to ask you. Naturally, he won't be coming over here, while Mother Owen is staying, as often as he has been. And I shall miss him so! But if I can see him at your house, or get her to know him better, so that she'll realize what a darling he is—"

They left the discussion of Mrs. Owen's approaching visit and went on to talk of other things. Jenny told Faith that Brent was well established in the studio now and working hard. She said Diane has given him several posing sessions, and that he had finished one of his magazine covers and had sold it. "In fact," she laughed, "the editor said to him, 'If there's really a girl that good-looking, I want to meet her!' "

Diane is definitely going in for this modelling business, then?" Faith said, with a little frown between her slender brows. "Isn't she—what does Fred—"she broke off, embsrrassed.

Jenny said, as she had said so often the past two weeks. "Diane can't manage her household and the posing jobs too, so she's staying with us to make things easier." But she felt as she said it, that it sounded too glib, and knew in her heart that she would never be able to lie gracefully or with conviction.

"But does she intend to keep this up? What about her dear little house?"

"Diane's not like I am," Jenny said quietly. "A house doesn't mean as much to her."

Prime Minister Calls on Britons To Tighten Belts

London, July 31 (AP) —Prime Minister Attlee called on Britons last night to tighten their belts once again while their country arms against red aggression.

In a blunt-spoken radio chat from his official country residence at Chequers, Attlee warned his countrymen that this rearmament will mean sacrifices in their standard of living, which has just begun recovering from the ravages of the Second World War.

The Prime Minister, whose speech was carried to the Commonwealth countries overseas, warned that "the fire which has been started in distant Korea may burn down your house."

He blasted communism as a "world-wide conspiracy against the way of life of the free democracies," and accused Russia of talking peace while maintaining huge armed forces.

He called for vigilance against domestic sabotage and urged greater enlistments in Britain's armed forces and civil defence organizations.

"Aggression has started again in the Far East," Attlee said "The attack by the armed forces of North Korea on South Korea has been denounced as an act of aggression by the United Nations. No excuse, no propaganda by communists of other questions can get over this fact. Here is a case of aggression.

"If the aggressor gets away with it, aggressors all over the world will be encouraged. The same results which led to the Second World War will follow, and another world war may result."

Attlee said he hoped some day Russia would "change its policy and. . join wholeheartedly with the rest of the world in the great tasks of preserving peace and promoting the happiness of all peoples."

"But," he added, "because of the growth of evil forces in the world we now have no option but to increase our defences."

$96,000 in Gold Bricks Stolen From Mine

Hooded Bandits Bind Watchman, Steal His Truck

Coniaurum Mines Office Near Timmins Scene of Theft

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 2 —(CP)— Three gold bars worth $100,000, stolen early today from Coniaurum Mines Ltd., were found about seven hours later near an abandoned, fire-blackened automobile about 25 miles east of here.

Timmins, Aug. 2 — (CP) — Two hooded bandits slugged a 60-year-old watchman today, blasted open a vault at Coniaurum Mines Ltd., and fled with almost $100,000 in gold.

The automobile in which they escaped was found shortly before noon on Highway 101 about 20 miles east of here. It apparently had been set afire in an effort to eliminate fingerprints and other clues.

Mine officials and police said it was probably the biggest gold robbery in Canadian history.

Charles McInnis, chief of police in Tisdale township, said the smooth operation of the robbery is "proof that these two men are definitely professionals."

Police leaves were cancelled as the hunt was launched. Investigators started a check of the many small lakes in this section of Northern Ontario. If the bandits fled by plane after abandoning the car, police said, chances are they would have had it waiting in some small isolated lake.

The bandits had about a half-hour jump on the police. It took watchman Bill Edwards that long to wriggle free of the rope with which they tied him.

Thought Men Armed

Edwards wasn't sure but he said he thought the men were armed. They wrapped a curtain around his face and themselves were disguised with grey hoods. They stooped — Edwards said they looked like "apes" — in a further attempt to keep him from getting a good look at them.

The men approached the mine, 2½ miles east of here, about 3.30 a.m., slugged and bound Edwards and took from him keys which opened the mine gates.

Used Dynamite

A Coniaurum spokesman said the men drove to the rear of the mine office, used dynamite to smash through a wall and get at the vault, then cut through an inner safe with an acetylene torch.

Hon. H. Mitchell To be Buried With State Honors

Ottawa, Aug. 2 (CP) — Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, 55, Labor Minister, arbiter of industry and champion of the common man, will be buried in Ottawa Friday with a full state funeral.

Chief of the labor department through nine hectic years of war and peace—longer than any labor minister in Commonwealth history—Mr. Mitchell died suddenly in hospital early yesterday.

In indifferent health for some time, he entered hospital last Saturday for what was described as a medical checkup. He died at 2:25 a.m. EDT Monday from acute massive gastric hemorrhage.

His body will lie in state Friday in Parliament's Hall of Fame to which he himself went only last week to pay last respects at the bier of former Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Plans for the capital's second state funeral in as many weeks have not yet been completed and will depend on the time of arrival in Ottawa of Mr. Mitchell's youngest son, John. He is flying from Vienna where he is attached to the International Refugee Organization.

Will Lie in State

It is planned that the minister's body will lie in state from Friday morning until Friday afternoon. A state funeral procession —on the same formal basis but perhaps not as elaborate as that for the late prime minister—will leave Parliament Hill for St. Barnabas Anglican Church.

Rev. W. H. Browne, rector of St. Barnabas, will conduct the service and burial will be in Beechwood Cemetery in suburban Ottawa.

The funeral will be attended by all Mr. Mitchell's cabinet colleagues who are in Ottawa, headed by Prime Minister St. Laurent who is coming here from his summer home at St. Patrice, Que.

With indications pointing to a climax in the rail dispute this month, it is expected the government will appoint an acting minister of labor. Health Minister Martin is currently mentioned for the job.

Mr. Mitchell represented the Ontario riding of Welland in the House of Commons and his death raised the number of vacancies there to three.

NOTED HORSE JUDGE DIES

Ormstown, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP) — Albert James Ness, 70, one of North America's top authorities on draft horses, died here Monday after a long illness. He successfully took part in such shows as the Chicago International Exhibition, Royal Winter Fair at Toronto and Guelph, Ont., and Ottawa Winter Fairs. For several years he was inspector of stallions of all breeds for the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Excited Father Forgot Address

Durango, Colo., Aug. 2 — AP) — A young man hurried into the Western Union office, scribbled a message, slapped a handful of change on the counter and hastened out again.

The telegram read: 'Mrs. Cornelius. It's a boy. (signed) Johnny.'

Western Union decided regretfully Mrs. Cornelius would have to get the news some other way. Nobody in the office had any idea who or where Mrs. Cornelius of Johnny are.

MALIK DEFEATED IN FIRST ATTEMPT TO OUST CHINA

Trades Bitter Words With U.N. Delegates

By A. I. GOLDBERG

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 2—(AP) — Beaten in his first attempt as Security Council President to oust Nationalist China, Russian delegate Jakob A. Malik comes back for another try today.

He was defeated decisively — by a vote of 8 to 3 — but he did not walk out yesterday.

Instead, he remained to trade bitter words with United States and Chinese delegates in a three-hour, wrangling council session, and to accuse the United States of leading "naked aggression" against Asian peoples in Korea, China, Indo-China and the Philippines.

The fact that he stayed, instead of walking out on the Chinese question as he did when he was beaten last January, strengthened a belief that Russia is back in the U. N., at least for the rest of Malik's August term as president.

He called another meeting today (at 3 p. m. EDT) to continue a wrangle over what should be on the agenda. Yesterday's session was devoted entirely to jousting over the unseating of the Chinese Nationalists and over what subjects should be discussed, and in what order.

Trial Witness Pleads Guilty To $4,000 Theft

St. Hyacinthe Que., Aug. 2—(CP) — Charles-Emile Poliquin, 29-year-old ex-salesman who is key witness in the conspiracy trial of three Quebec provincial policemen, today pleaded guilty to the $4,000 robbery last Dec. 2 of the St. Hugues, Que., branch of the Banque Canadienne Nationale. Sentence was deferred until Sept. 12.

The slickly-dressed Poliquin claimed in court in Montreal two weeks ago that he carried out the robbery to pay off three provincial police officers who helped him plan it so he could split the loot with them.

The trial of the three, Lieut. Marcel Patenaude, Sgt. Gaston Archambault and former detective Paul Hervieux, was adjourned in Montreal yesterday so Poliquin could appear in court here.

The three are charged with plotting robberies in country banks and with inciting others to commit them.

Also in court today was Berthe Gallipeault Poliquin's attractive 25-year-old girl friend, who is alleged to have been his accomplice in the St. Hugues robbery. She pleaded not guilty and her case was postponed until Sept. 6.

U.S. Soldiers Forced to Shoot Down Civilians in Battle for Survival

With American Troops in Korea, Aug. 2 (AP) — American soldiers must harden their hearts and coldly shoot down anyone wearing civilian clothes in the combat area if they are to protect their own lives in this war.

That is a coldblooded, ruthless thing to do. But there is no other way out in this battle for survival.

"Refugees" are the big problem. They have been coming through the American lines for days in droves.

Some of them are South Koreans fleeing before the reds. But among them are guerrillas.

The U.S. army has tried to solve the problem by creating a so-called "security belt" from which all natives are evacuated. Presumably anyone found in this area would be an enemy. But it hasn't worked out that way. American troops still hesitate to fire on civilians.

Sgt. James Haskins of Mesa, Calif., sized up the situation this way as a veteran of two wars:

"We were trained to fight in the European style of position and manoeuvre. The enemy fought the same way and used pretty much the same tactics we used. But this is a guerrilla war and we haven't been trained for it."

AMPHIBIAN TRUCK PASSES TRIAL

Cruising in Chesapeake Bay, Maryland, is the new and versatile U.S. army truck built for high speed on and off the highway and designed to operate in sub zero cold, blistering heat, or with its engine completely submerged in water. With two extension pipes for underwater operation — one known as the "snorkel" for air intake to the engine, and the other, the "snorter" for exhaust — it is only necessary for the driver to keep one foot on the accelerator, his hands on the wheel and his head out of water in order to drive the truck as if he were on dry land. — Central Press Canadian.

Tokyo, Aug. 3 — (Thursday) — (CP) — United States troops recaptured hill positions northeast of Chinju and held on today in a furious battle 40 miles from the main port of Pusan.

The arching battleline was marked by burning villages all the way from the southern coast to abandoned Kumchon, which was also in flames.

Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said U. S. troops and the North Korean Sixth Division were locked in a grim battle east of Chinju at the western approaches to Pusan.

"No gains by the enemy have been made in this fighting in the last 12 hours," the war summary said. It was released at 12:55 a.m. (10:55 a.m. EDT Wednesday.)

For 18 hours or more the battle between tanks, artillery and men raged on the heights just eight miles northeast of Chinju.

On the central front Kumchon ablaze and abandoned by the U.S. first cavalry division, scorched in ruins as the Reds moved into its outskirts.

A No-Man's Land

Disputed Yongdok, east coast anchor town which has changed hands frequently, was a No-Man's land.

But the hardest fighting was just north of Chinju, about 40 miles west of Pusan.

Battle-weary U.S. 24th division troops were almost surrounded when they counter-attacked. They suffered many casualties and lost some tanks.

Help for the Americans was near. Marines in force were at a southeastern port only 40 miles from the battle-zone. The marines came equipped with 45-ton tanks, tank-killing bazookas and other weapons new to the Korean war.

American planes set fire at Kumchon after it had been abandoned by their troops.

O. H. P. King, Associated Press correspondent in the hills near Chinju, reported both Chinju and the nearby village of Suchan were fired by U.S. planes in a five-hour raid.

Gordon Warns Democracies They Must be Ready to Fight And Also be Able to Win

Ottawa, Aug. 2 (CP) —Donald Gordon, chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, said today the democracies must not only be willing to fight, but must be prepared to beat "the living daylights" out of any "group of evil men" who profess a philosophy aimed at the destruction of the democratic heritage.

In an address prepared for delivery to the 56th annual meeting of the accounting division of the Association of American Railroads, Mr. Gordon said "the paradox which is constantly before us is that those who love peace must be ready to fight and those who love freedom must accept discipline."

Today, he said, young Canadians are serving with young Americans under the flag of the United Nations in the battle "that has been forced upon us in Korea by the deliberate acts of power-mad and unscrupulous men."

Canada and the United States were "grass roots" democracies, the greatest the world had ever known. Canadians had shaped their own character and their own institutions and had recognized the truth of statement "that envy is ignorance and imitation is suicide."

"Frequently, it is true, we have borrowed from the British or American example, and sometimes we have blended the two for our own purposes, but in almost all these instances we have added a liberal sprinkling of our own ideas and poured the mixture into a Canadian mould."

Mr. Gordon said he now found himself caught in the "squeeze" he used to warn about as wartime price controller. Railroading was a field where rising costs seemed uncontrollable yet there was governmental control on raising the prices.

He added, however, that he would "resist the temptation to warn you that under present conditions the inflationary threat is again with us, first because it is no longer my job to do so and, second, because the influence of steadily rising wage and other costs upon the purchasing value of the dollar has become painfully obvious."

U.S. CONSIDERING REVERSING POLICY ON NO-ARMS AID

May Help Strengthen Defences in Formosa

By JOHN M HIGHTOWER

Washington, Aug. 2 (AP) — The United States government is considering reversing its policy of no-arms aid to the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa in order to strengthen defences of that anti-communist stronghold.

A final decision by the State and Defence Departments and the White House is understood to await recommendations from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who conferred Monday with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek at Taipeh, Formosan capital.

The government has already taken one step designed to ease the flow of American arms to the Chinese Nationalists. An order issued last week permits them to buy weapons through the defence department instead of having to go to the manufacturers directly as they had done for many months.

Responsible officials said today Chiang has an adequate basic supply of weapons for the defence of the Island but that he undoubtedly needs spare parts for repairs and also additional ammunition.

Says Speculators Profiting at Nation's Expense

Washington, Aug. 2 (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Brannan today accused speculators in farm and food products of trying to cash in even at the expense of the United States' economy and war effort.

Such trading on futures markets by a "considerable" number of speculators, Brannan said, has contributed to recent sharp price advances. He called the speculation "excessive and unrestrained" and said it is threatening the country's economic stability and the war effort.

It is obvious he said in a formal statement, that some means must be set up to stop, or at least curb, excessive speculation if the futures markets are to provide price insurance to merchandisers and processors.

President Truman, in a recent message to Congress, urged the government be authorized to control speculation to prevent undue price fluctuations.

Bills have been introduced which would give the government power to set trading margins in the trading market. The margin is the amount a trader must deposit when he buys and sells futures' delivery contracts.

The markets themselves now set the margins. In contrast, the Federal Reserve Board set margins for the security markets.

Four Canadian Ships Chartered By U.S. Govt., Ten More Sought

Ottawa, Aug. 2. (CP)— The United States government, seeking 14 freighters from the New York shipping market to transport supplies to Korea, has already obtained four Canadian freighters and may charter more, a government transport official said today.

He added that the transaction is "purely a commercial one, in which the Canadian government has not been consulted."

The four Canadian freighters will fly the Canadian flag, will employ about 140 Canadian seamen and likely will move in the Korean danger area, the official said.

He was commenting on a report from Montreal last night that four Canadian ships have been chartered to transport supplies from the west coast of the United States to the Korean battle area.

The Montreal report identified two of the ships as the Islandside and the Digby County. The official added the name of a third, the Lake Sicamous.

He said the vessels have been offered a "premium" by the U.S. government for being made available immediately to undertake the shuttle service.

Only Non-Operating Workers Affected By Strike Action

Demand 5-Day, 40-Hour Week and Wage Increase

Montreal, Aug. 2 — (CP) — Unions numbering 125,000 men today set Aug. 22 as the date for a strike which could hamstring Canada's railway operations.

Two union groups of non-operating workers announced they would embark on "a concerted and peaceful withdrawal" from service on that date unless there was "a satisfactory agreement."

Although the unions involved in a wage-hours dispute with the railroads do not include the men who operate trains, they could tie up work in repair shops, telegraph companies and hotels.

There was no immediate statement from the railways on the union's announcement.

An announcement by Frank Hall, chairman of the Brotherhoods' negotiating committee, said the membership has voted to "go on strike unless there is settlement in their demands for the five-day, 40-hour week and a wage increase.

"Date for withdrawal from the service of Canada's railways has been set for Tuesday, Aug. 22, at 6 a.m., regional standard time."

Series of Meetings

The announcement was made following a series of meetings by spokesmen for the international Brotherhoods. Earlier this month spokesmen for 30,000 members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees (C.C.L.) and the Brotherhood of Express Employees (C.C.L.) announced their unions had voted "over-whelmingly" in favor of a strike.

At the same time the two Canadian brotherhoods announced they would join the international brotherhoods in a strike Aug. 22 unless there is a settlement.

"The setting of this particular date indicates collaboration between these organizations and the international group of 15 unions," T. McGregor, chairman of the Canadian Unions' Negotiating Committee said in a statement.

Mr. McGregor said arrangements for "making the strike effective in accordance with the mandate from the membership are being carried out by the unions' committee which is still in session at Montreal."

Four Lines Affected

The railways involved are Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways and their subsidiaries; the Ontario Northland and the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railways.

The workers involved are all in non-operating categories, that is they do not operate trains but fall into classes such as hotel employees, clerks and telegraphers.

Mr. Hall said the railways have been advised of the strike decision in a letter signed by himself.

Copies of the letter went to Prime Minister St. Laurent and Arthur MacNamara, Deputy Labor Minister.

Mr. Hall said the percentage vote favoring strike action was so high as to make it for all intents and purposes practically unanimous.

This, he said, "well reflects how strong the employees fell on the subject, and their determination to remedy what they feel to be a great injustice. Moreover, the practicability of applying the five-day week to the railway industry has been well demonstrated in New Zealand and Australia where it has been in effect for

Bush Rangers Prospectors Join In Hunt for Man

Val D'Or, Que., Aug. 2—(CP)— Prospectors and veteran bush rangers of this northwestern Quebec district were mobilized today to search for Martin Strauss III of New York City, who may have drowned near Lake Dozois.

The 26-year-old man's father, Martin Strauss II, came from New York to aid in the search for his only son.

The Val D'Or search party is being flown into the area. It will operate out of Camp Dorval which Strauss, against advice, left on a solitary fishing excursion July 22. He was later reported by Indians as having stopped at Rapide de Lac Kanwaten. They tried to warn him of treacherous whirlpools.

Stolen Alligator Back in Zoo

Miami, Fla., Aug. 2 —(AP) — An eight-foot, 225-pound alligator is back in the North Miami Zoo, saved from a life of wrestling with Seminole Indians. It disappeared Saturday night.

The alligator was found in a wrestling pit near the home of an Indian couple at Dania. Some Seminoles earn their living by wrestling alligators and charging tourists admission.

The Indians agreed to return the alligator when zoo superintendent Hudson Thomas said he wouldn't press charges.

Workmen who will have the job of cleaning the front windows of the new Dominion store on Victoria Ave., won't have to exert too much energy, thanks to some citizens of Belleville. KEY CLUB PREXY HEARD ON AIR FROM HOLLYWOOD

A number of residents of the city heard the voice of Bill Babbitt, president of the Belleville Key Club, over the air from Hollywood this morning. Bill appeared as a guest of Tom McElrath on "Hollywood Breakfast Time." The speaker gave an outline of the Key Club, stating it was a junior branch of the Kiwanis Club, and he also described the aims and objects of this service club. Jimmy the Squirrel Again Proves He's No Stooge for Pesky Humans

"Jimmy" is in the news again.

He is the pet black squirrel of Major Owen Atkins, who for the second time in two days proved that he intends to be no stooge for pesky humans.

Perhaps, the taste of "finger-meat" Jimmy got the other day when he playfully nipped a digit of a well-meaning but prank-playing adult, whetted his appetite for such a dish.

Or maybe the price of meat in squirreldom has reached the same near prohibitive stage as that in human circles.

In any event, "Jimmy" proved two things yesterday. One that he stands for no fooling and second, any prankish person who lays hands on his furry body must pay this nut-gathering Shylock his pound of flesh or a part thereof.

It happened this way.

"Jimmy" was cavorting in his favorite haunts around the Atkins menage when a neighbor boy dropped around.

Now "Jimmy" is the soul of friendliness. He playfully romped with the youngster and as is his wont, jumped on his lap and climbed an arm to reach his favorite perch atop a shoulder.

He sniffed around the youth's ear, whereby the youngster became alarmed. Thinking, perhaps, that "Jimmy" had ideas of decapitation in mind, he reached up and gave the squirrel's tail a solid jerk.

Now "Jimmy" usually a mild-mannered cuss, but none-the-less wise, was outraged at this assault on his person.

So without more ado he clamped his razor-like teeth in the fleshy lobe of the boy's ear, nibbled for a while, then leaped for earth and safety of his favorite tree.

Over 100 Cubs representing five Belleville packs left the city by special train today for Cobourg where they held their first annual picnic this afternoon.

The train left Pinnacle Street shortly after one o'clock and will return to the city at 8.30 this evening. The Cubs were under the supervision of District Scout Commissioner Angus Duffy and five Cubmasters.

The Cubs in uniform were given free transportation, while parents and other youngsters were charged a nominal train fare. All carried box lunches. The picnic, which was arranged in lieu of the regular annual camp was sponsored by the Belleville Scout Association.

A varied program of sports, including races, baseball games, contests and swimming was enjoyed by the Cubs. During the afternoon they were given hot dogs and soft drinks provided by the Scout Association.

Corbin Gold Cup Prizes Displayed In Hydro Window

Those who are not lawn bowlers can see what they are missing this week in the window of the Public Utilities Building, Front Street.

There is more loot in the window than Sir Frances Drake stole from the Spanish Treasure Fleet, and enough silver to set the U.S. Treasury Department on edge. All the wonderful prizes have been donated by local firms and merchants for the Corbin Gold Trophy Lawn Bowling Tournament being staged all day Monday, August 7, and a goodly portion of the morning of August 8.

The Corbin Gold Trophy Tournament is the largest lawn bowling competition staged in Eastern Ontario and draws rinks from Quebec province to Detroit and other U. S. border points.

Kiwanian Outlines Mechanisms of Radio Broadcast

The mechanisms and technical details behind radio broadcasting were pointed out in an illustrated address to a weekly luncheon meeting of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, Tuesday noon by member Jim Jarvis.

Pointing out that the 110 available broadcasting channels established by the North American Radio Broadcasting Agreement drawn up in Havana, Cuba, in 1936 were hardly sufficient for the more than 2,100 stations in the United States and Canada, the speaker explained how by technical tricks and by classification of stations according to power, all these stations have been accommodated.

He went into the problems involved in the setting up of a station from the engineer's viewpoint illustrating his remarks with hightlights from his own experience in this field.

Following his explanatory remarks the speakers gave a running commentary on a series of pictures taken of the combined CBL-CJBC stations in Toronto.

The speaker was introduced by Ken Atwill and received the thanks of the club as expressed by Frank Creeggan.

President Taylor Franklin was chairman of the meeting.

Local Factories' Workers Enjoy Holiday Period

Holidays have hit the Belleville manufacturers. The mass holiday system, a comparatively new scheme, is affecting most of the Belleville plants these weeks.

Stewart - Warner - Alemite workers are back on the job after two weeks' holidays which ended Monday morning. At Stephens - Adamson, employees are taking their two weeks now, while the office staff, for the most part, remains on duty. The S-A plant still has a skeleton crew on in the plant, and a few shipments are being made.

At Corbin Lock, employees are enjoying their second week of holidays. They will return to work August 8, thus getting the benefit of Civic Holiday right at the end of their scheduled holidays. Mead Johnson workers are also on holidays, this being their first week of vacation. Their moving cancels out the Northern Electric, which resumed factory production Monday morning after two weeks layoff.

Fishermen Urge Use of Trap Nets In Lake Erie

Toronto, Aug. 2 — (CP)—Further experiments in the use of trap nets in Lake Erie were urged here yesterday by Kent and Essex county fishermen.

The request was made by a five-man delegation that met with Dr. W. J. K. Harkness, chief of the fish and wildlife branch of the Lands Department.

The delegation, which included L. V. Olmstead of Wheatley and Lloyd Crews of Merlin, asked that current experiments in the use of trap nets by Ontario fishermen be continued and extended.

Most fishermen on the Ontario side of Lake Erie use pound nets; trap nets are used extensively by United States fishermen. Pound nets are fixed to stakes in the lake and have a long funnel leading into a "trap" in which the fish are caught. Trap nets are similar but float free instead of being fastened to stakes.

Other members of the delegation included W. Krause of Pt. Pelee and M. Miller of the St. Thomas district.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP)—Leading industrials encountered mild selling pressure in mid-session on the Toronto stock exchange today and reduced earlier strong advances. Activity continued at the dull pace of previous sessions this week but generally prices climbed for a third straight session. Volume for the first three hours was 358,000 shares.

Gains ranged from fractions to about a point over a narrow list of key industrials. Papers, steels, agricultures, constructions, foods and a few utilities showed good gains.

Base metals also sagged from early gains. The list showed signs of continued recent steady climbs but profit-taking appeared in key issues and losses began to appear. Waite Amulet backed down and United Keno Hill, strong yesterday, lost part of a morning rise.

Golds settled into a narrow path at slightly lower levels. Junior producers showed a handful of penny losses and a few seniors slipped fractions.

Western oils also couldn't make headway. Piccadilly, a penny issue, traded briskly but was unchanged.

FOREST FIRES

Eighteen per cent of forest fires are attributed to lightning. 82 per cent are man-made and preventable.

Ask Jet Liner Be Placed on TCA Test Run

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP) — Officials of A.V. Roe (Canada) Ltd., builders of North America's first jetliner, said today they have asked that the big plane be put on a Trans-Canada Air Lines test run.

J. H. Morley, A. V. Roe sales manager, said the run would test the economics, serviceability and airport handling of the jet. He said T.C.A. has approved the deal in principle but government approval is awaited. If approved the run would start this fall. It would involve service trials rather than passenger or cargo carrying.

U.S. FORCES

King said 35-ton Sherman tanks went into action a few hours after the vital battle in the Chinju area started.

If the Americans lose there, the reds could move eastward to a steep ridge where an American tank-supported element is trying to hold the terrain that levels out in a flat coastal plain almost all the remaining way to Pusan. There is no river barrier beyond the steep ridge.

"This force is holding its own," said Maj.-Gen. John Church, new commander of the 24th Division.

Red Tanks Dug In

Church said the U.S. tanks met fire from red tanks in dug-in positions.

As the battle raged heavily-armed marines, brought direct from the United States by ship, pulled into a South Korean port, ready to move to the front.

The marines came loaded for heavy combat. They are going into battle behind hulking 45-ton tanks and carrying 90 millimetre guns. There has been nothing like that fighting on the American side thus far.

RUSSIANS DIDN'T WANT SOUVENIR

When an unexploded 1,100-pound R.A.F. bomb was discovered about 150 yards from the Soviet war memorial in the British sector of Berlin, the Russian authorities demanded that it should be removed and exploded at a safe distance from the memorial. R.A.F. bomb disposal experts dragged the bomb to a prepared site where it was exploded. Here, the bomb is blown up at a safe distance from the memorial and, at a safe distance, from the bomb are reporters and camera-

Predicts Gloomy Prospects For Cheese Industry

Members of the Belleville Cheese Board were in the dark about trading last evening when a transformer on Front Street burned out, plunging the board room into complete blackness. The 3,290 white cheese were finally sold at 27 11/16 as the buyers used burning matches and flashlights to complete their transactions.

Just prior to the blackout, members were put in a gloomy mood by buyer Wm. McCreary who stated that "the cheese industry has been seriously damaged this year by the shipment of cattle out of this country and the subsidy given to butter production. I don't know how the small factories are producing at all," he said.

"The harm done the cheese industry this year will not be overcome in a short time," he stated, "and until cheese is recognized for its food value the industry will continue to be hurt."

It was decided that the Cheese Board would meet again in four weeks subject to call by the president or secretary.

Boarder Admits Injuring Child

Hoboken, N.J., Aug. 2 (CP)—City prosecutor Albert J. Shea announced last night that William Harris, 34, admitted fatally injuring six-year-old Louise Robinson, whose nude body was found in a Linden, N.J., stream last Friday.

Harris, who had been living here at the home of the child's mother, Mrs. Ida Robinson, signed a statement that he struck the child in the stomach to punish her, Shea said.

Louise became ill the following day and died, Shea quoted Harris as saying.

The man told police he had become panicky, stripped off the child's clothes, put her body in a cardboard carton and dumped it into the Linden stream.

Bert Niosi To Appear At Club Commodore

Pictured above is Canada's most versatile musician, Bert Niosi, who, with his orchestra, comes to the colorful Club Commodore on Civic Holiday. Bert, who is a talented radio artist of the CBC and various other Canadian networks, comes from a large musical family originating in London, Ont. He attended school in London with the musically-famous Lombardo family, and to this day remains a very close friend of Guy Lombardo himself.

Bert's brother, "Johnnie" will be seen playing drums with the orchestra and brother "Joe" is a member of the "Happy Gang."

Terry Arlen, handsome male vocalist is now with the Niosi orchestra and has for the past two years had his own show over CKEY in Toronto.

Other artists featured with the orchestra are Jack Wachten on tenor saxophone, one of the top men with the Canadian Army Show, Art Oakley, on trumpet, and Frank Reynolds on trombone.

One of the outstanding points of the Niosi orchestra is its ability to play jazz, ballads, waltzes, polkas and various other forms of modern music.

PROTECTED STALIN FROM CZAR'S POLICE

Harry N. Venzer, Pittsburgh grocer, tells the story of how Joseph Stalin years ago hid under the bench on which Venzer, then a child, slept in his father's saloon in Odessa, Russia. Stalin, Venzer recalls, patted him on the head as he left saying, "Thanks, little one, I will never forget you." Secret police had searched the saloon in hunt for Stalin during a Socialist rebellion against the Czar. — Central Press Canadian.

several years and in the United States where it was made effective Sept. 1, 1949."

The international unions asked for the 40-hour week, instead of 48 hours, with no reduction in take-home pay, plus a wage increase of seven cents an hour.

The two Canadian unions asked for the 40-hour week, a 10-cent increase, and the check-off for union dues.

Conciliation boards, in both cases, recommended compromises—the 44-hour week and increases which would, in some cases, not be enough to give the same take-home pay as at present.

The union spokesman rejected the conciliation board reports but the railways accepted them estimating the cost of implementing the recommendations at between $19,000,000 and $27,000,000 a year.

"In Canada," Mr. Hall's statement said, "the five-day 40-hour week applies in a great many industries, and is becoming increasingly general. The railways are Canada's No. 1 industry, and railway workers should not suffer discrimination in such matters as shorter working hours, and wage increases made necessary by increasing living costs and economic pressure."

The negotiating committee of the unions is in session at Montreal, making the necessary arrangements for withdrawal from the service on the date set.

Union Statement

Mr. Hall released copies of the letter sent to the operating heads of the railways. It detailed union demands and added:

"Subsequent negotiations and proceedings have not brought about a settlement.

"Accordingly the matter was referred to the employees...the employees have voted almost unanimously to withdraw from the service is not satisfactory agreement is effected.

"The negotiating committee has considered the matter in the light of this expressed intention, and I am directed to advise you that in the absence of such a satisfactory agreement there will be a concerted and peaceful withdrawal from the service on Tuesday, Aug. 22, 1950, at 6 a.m. regional standard time."

Last Monday, Donald Gordon, C.N.R. president, expressed hope there would be further discussion before the employees embarked on a strike, if such was to be their course.

Demand Censorship Of Korean War News

Washington, Aug. 2. (AP)—Two Republican congressmen yesterday demanded censorship of news from the Korean war zone.

Representative Paul Shafer (Rep. Mich.) said Gen. Douglas MacArthur ought to be given authority to invoke censorship at any time on news and radio dispatches from Korea.

In a separate statement, Senator Styles Bridges (Rep. N.H.) proposed that the United Nations clamp censorship on troop movements in the fighting area.

Both said there have been instances where, because of lack of censorship, the North Korean invaders have received information of value.

Maj.-Gen. Floyd Parks, army information chief, has said that MacArthur has authority to institute censorship any time he chooses.

Railways 'Surprised, Disappointed,' At Announcement of Strike Action

Montreal, Aug. 2—(CP)—Canada's two biggest railways said in a joint statement today they are "surprised and disappointed" at the announcement of strike action by 17 railway brotherhoods.

The statement, issued by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways, said that "meetings designed to effect settlement of the labor differences between the companies and their employees have been taking place and have been arranged to continue. . .

"Before and since the recommendations of the two boards of conciliation were made known, the railways have sought a peaceful settlement of these differences. On May 1, they informed the Minister of Labor that "having weighed their responsibility to the employees and to the public the railways are willing to accept the findings contained in the majority reports and are ready to negotiate a settlement on this basis."

The statment said this undertaking would involve the railways in an additional expenditure of $19,225,000 a year when applied only to the employees concerned and that this cost would rise to approximately $27,000,000 a year when the benefits were applied to all employees.

The recommendations of the conciliation boards had been "summarily rejected" by the unions "but nonetheless the railways have continued to hold discussions with labor and have indicated their willingness to go farther than the recommendations of the board and give the dissident labor groups a deduction in working hours from 48 to 44 hours a week with no reduction in take-home pay, thus putting them in an advantageous position in relation to industrial labor generally in Canada.

"This offer would cost the railways $27,000,000 a year when applied to organized employees concerned and $37,000,000 a year when applied to all employees.

"As late as yesterday talks between the railways and the men were continuing and more are scheduled to take place later this week. Therefore, the out-of-hand announcement by the leaders of the labor groups that they have set a strike deadline for Aug. 22 comes not only as a shock and disappointment to the railways but seems to them to be an unfortunate method of conducting ameliatory negotiations and to show small concern for the welfare of the public or the workers, which have been, and continue to be, uppermost in the railways' mind.

"Despite this unexpected action of the labor groups and having regard both to the domestic and international situation, the railways are sincere in their belief that negotiations toward a peaceful settlement of this dispute should not be abandoned."

HUMPHREY MITCHELL . . . LABOR HAS LOST A GREAT FRIEND

Another statesman Canada could ill afford to lose is dead. While not a man in the class of W. L. Mackenzie King, the Honorable Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labor for almost eight years, commanded the respect of businessmen and laborers alike during his parliamentary life.

Mr. Mitchell, like Mr. King, set a record in the Commonwealth for the length of time in position. But it is not for that that he will be remembered. His fine job during the war years, when he mobilized what manpower was available and his work in the formation of government policies for post-war labor are the accomplishments for which the Canadian people are thankful.

It is significant to note that parliamentarians and labor men, on common ground, have seen fit to make public their sentiments with regard to Mr. Mitchell. Honorable Louis St. Laurent; Prime Minister of Canada, said Mr. Mitchell was concerned primarily with increasing "the opportunities . . . for the ordinary men and women and particularly for young people."

Within those words lies the secret, if there is any secret, of Mr. Mitchell's life. A working man born in Shoreham, Sussex, England, Mr. Mitchell retained his interest in the working man until the time of his death. He had been a member of the House of Commons, under the labor banner, had been city alderman in Hamilton, Ontario, and had occupied a number of positions in the department of labor before he rose to the top.

Officials of the two congresses of Canadian labor have expressed their deep regret over Mr. Mitchell's death. An able and conscientious man, the minister combined his traits with humility to do the job which eventually injured his health permanently. He, as much as any man, gave his life for Canada, even though it was his adopted country.

Possibly the finest thing that could be said about a parliamentarian in a labor post was that which issued from the Trades and Labor Congress, which said, in part: "Humphrey Mitchell never forgot his trade union background and the needs of the working people."

Labor has said it, and nothing we might say could add to such a tribute.

WHY NOT MORE TOURISTS?

There have been complaints about the size of the tourist trade in Central Canada this season. Volume, especially in resorts of the swankier type, is reported down from previous years.

For this disappointing trend most operators seem inclined to blame the sudden crisis in Korea and the weather. Undoubtedly those are real reasons but it would be unwise to discount all other possible causes, and higher costs is one of them, The Financial Post says.

Most summer resorts have made stiff boosts in rates since the war with the result that many former customers are seeking cheaper places or staying at home. This is borne out by reports that lower priced resorts are still well booked.

There has been too great a tendency in this country to regard the tourist and especially the one from the United States, as a source of easy money. Too many people seem to think that all that is necessary is to put up a sign and the cash would come rolling in.

That sort of thing cannot possibly last as conditions become more competitive. Certainly it will not produce repeat business.

To build up a big and permanent tourist trade we must give customers real value, even if it means sacrificing some immediate profits. In the cooking and serving of food, particularly, the Canadian industry has very much to learn.

DOWN-AT-THE-HEELS

It is the custom of our age to sneer at the person who is down-at-the-heels. We think of him as a sloppy fellow, or else feel sorry for his economic circumstances which prevent him from having the heels of his boots built up. But perhaps he is the smart chap, and we are simply silly, states a Windsor Star editorial.

Mr. Edwin Lloyd, The Windsor Star's correspondent in South Africa, writes of a conference of scientists in Southern Rhodesia. One of the scientists created a furore among shoe manufacturers by saying the boots being made aren't built to walk in. He cites heels as an example.

The natural way for a man to walk is to rock a bit on the heel and sole of his foot. His own heel is built so he can do so. But the heels of boots have a flat surface, preventing him from walking naturally. That many wear the backs or corners of their heels down is due to the conflict between their natural way of walking and the way shoe manufacturers want them to walk. If we were smart, goes this line of thought, we would wear down-at-the-heel shoes, so we could walk the way we were meant to walk.

We aren't a scientist, a chiropodist or a shoe manufacturer. But we do know the shape of our own heels is not the shape of the heels of our boots — until the shape of the heels of our boots is altered by walking on them.

COURTESY AND A COP

I heard him sound his siren, and I wondered could it be
The motorcycle copper had some cause for stopping me?
I was surely driving safely, but he waved me to the side.
When I asked him for the reason: "Just a wrong turn," he replied.

"There's a sign upon that corner, just as plain as it can be,
Which forbids all left hand turning." It was one I'd failed to see.
Not an angry word was spoken. He was courteous. I polite.
A policeman and a citizen. I was wrong and he was right.

Now anger leads to anger and a curse will bring a curse
And scorn for law and order often leads to something worse.
But policemen being human, treated fairly, will be fair,
And I merely got a warning for the turn forbidden there.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON DOING GOOD

We deserve no credit for doing good. That should be a part of the nature of a human being. If we do not do good, we make an enemy out of ourselves, and defeat the high purpose of life itself. When one goes about doing good, he goes about fulfilling his mission upon this earth, and is therefore happy, and healthy as well.

I have never liked the word charity—as though we were asked to give where we are reluctant to do so. We should keep giving out of our substance—and of our very selves—as though the subject of our kindness, or thoughtfulness, were a part of us. It isn't the big man with money to give who is the greatest philanthropist, but the poorest human who unconsciously gives of his nature, his joy, and his hope.

When we begrudge a gift, that gift is as though it had never been given. I like that word—together. It is then that we feel the pulse of all. When that impulse is broken, we have dissensions—and wars arise. Good must be proportioned to good, all of a piece. Then it is that the machinery of human hope and happy times gets its adequate oiling process.

In the Bible it is written that the Son of Man didn't even have a place to lay his head, yet he went about "doing good". That was his mission—and that is our happy mission as well. We can neither be successful nor happy in our doing from day to day unless we follow out this idea.

We only do good to ourselves when we do good to others. We keep living anew every time we dispense of ourselves. I recall that when a boy on the farm, when extra work was needed for harvesting, or other work, several farmers near by would welcome the opportunity to help out, and this custom was reversed from time to time. Nothing was ever thought about doing good in such circumstances. It was a natural process. All hands and all farms were benefited.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

THE RETICENT RAINMAKER

As an old hoopla and hurrah merchant, I've always figured that if you beat the drum loudly enough people will eventually start keeping time to it with their feet. Or, to put it another way: To make the world think you're Johnny Hotshot, you've got to mix a little neon with the name. But the modest behavior of Prof. Wallace E. Howell, the rainmaker hired by the city of New York, has shaken my faith in my theories and made me wonder whether understatement isn't sometimes the better part of lungpower.

I hadn't thought much about the climatologist until a couple of week ends ago when my missus and I were playing host to a group of theatre people in Mt. Kisco. Ordinarily, these weisenheimers wouldn't concede that God made green apples without first getting a certificate from Luther Burbank, but on the subject of Professor Howell they were as gullible as a farmer's daughter.

That Saturday afternoon and night it had rained cats and canines, but when we came down to breakfast the next morning a dazzle had replaced the drench and it looked as if we might finally get around to using a little suntan oil.

"It won't last," said Nicky Blair, the cabaret man. "The rainmaker don't let it."

"You mean," I said, "you really believe that this buttinsky from Boston is responsible for all the wet we've been having?"

"Who else?" said Nicky.

"He isn't making any such claims," I said. "According to the papers, he says he's not sure he had anything to do with the rain."

"He's playing it cagey," said Nicky as he hacked away at his hotcakes.

The rest of our guests agreed with him. And when I began to think of it, I remembered that so did the farmers in Jersey who thanked Howell for helping them with their crops—and so did the Westchester amusement park concessionaires who threatened to sue the city if it didn't call off the cloud-nudger.

I guess that it gets down to this: There's a persnickety perverseness in folks which makes them believe the opposite of anything you tell them. If Hopalong Howell had claimed credit for the rise in our reservoirs, chances are the newspapers would have ganged up on him and called him a double-domed phony. But seeing as how the prof has been playing it pianissimo, we poopoo his modesty and insist he did it all with his little bucket of cracked ice. Besides, a modest man in public life is such a novelty that the whole eight million of us are kind of stuck on him.

Water Commissioner Carney recently recommended that we keep Howell on the payroll for at least six months more, and the other day the New York Daily News pitched him a posey on its editorial page and opined it would be well worth the fifty grand it would cost to keep the rainmaker in our midst.

All of this has me a bit kerflumixed. Over the years I've spent a pretty peso hullabalooing what I had to sell. Could it be that I've been barking up the wrong axiom, and that the best way to make people think you've got diamonds in your teeth to keep your mouth shut?

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

WELL ENOUGH WITHOUT IT

A good lady once clutched Ralph Waldo Emerson by the arm and, in tones of great anxiety said: "Oh Mr. Emerson, the world's coming to an end." The sage patted her hand reassuringly and said, "Quite true, quite true; but we can get along well enough without it."

There are some people for whom the world is that position in society which they hold. For others the world is a good job and a good salary. For still others the world is the opportunity to attain certain great objectives. Others count of priceless value the opportunity to appease their appetites. The world, the world, the world — and when the prospect looms up of their world being destroyed, these people who put their trust in these lesser things are terrified, and rightly so. If their little world goes, everything goes.

But there are some people who get along well enough without the world. There have always been such people. Emerson was not the first of these. Even Jesus was not the first of these, although He is the leader of them all.

Don't worry about your world coming to an end. If it does, be well assured that if you have religious faith and a gallant heart, you can get along without the world.

HISTORY OF TONSIL DIATHERMY

Reader aged 37 years writes:

My mother has clipped your articles for years. I tease her that if she ever has a symptom it will be gone before she can find the particular clipping she wants! I can't truthfully say that I was a Brady book baby, but I have lived to the age of 37 with no illness except maybe half a dozen colds... (call it c-r-I. It is not too late to learn. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope Call It Cri.)

. . . and one attack of Vincent's angina. After I recovered from my one and only sore throat, occassioned by the Vincent's, our family doctor, who had turned surgeon during World War I examined my tonsils and pronounced them "bad." Of course I asked if he intended to remove them. He laughed and said, "Of course not. God gave them to you for a good reason. We're going to leave them there. However, we will remove the diseased portion, not by surgery, but by diathermy." He sent me to another doctor who was skilled in that method. I went two or three times a week for about four weeks. After that there was just a small hole or concavity in each tonsil, no pain and no further trouble of any kind. The healthy tonsil remains are still there, to function in the fight against invading germs, or whatever they do. That, Dr. Brady, is 20 years ago in conservative old New England!

By contrast, a surgeon we know in this city successfully treats hemorrhoids by the injection method (not mine) yet throws up his hands in horror at the idea of tonsil electrocoagulation (diathermy).

I am unable to find the first recommendation of electro-coagulation (diathermy) treatment of infected tonsils that appeared in this column.

But it was perhaps in 1928 that I discovered the diathermy method—you know, found a doctor using it with success and satisfaction to his patients. When I first heard about his work I branded him in my own mind as a charlatan. But repeated assurances from readers who had received his treatment, made me doubt my first opinion, and so I visited the doctor's office, saw him treat numerous patients and became his admirer. I followed that first visit with several more, to observe the progress of patients under treatment. I learned that electro-coagulation (diathermy) of infected tonsils was quite as effective as radical tonsillectomy and that this modern method, unlike radical tonsillestomy, involves no hospitalization and no risk to life.

What the reader says about the surgeon who uses the ambulant (office injection) method for internal hemorrhoids but rejects (as I did in 1926) tonsil diathermy is a significant commentary on the progress of medicine.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Keep Your Nose Closed

Is the use of the nose clamp or clip when swimming harmful? It is a rubber covered U-shape metal spring which you clamp on the outside of the nostrils. It is held in place by a rubber band around back of the neck. (L. B.)

Answer—No. If it is more comfortable than a plug of lamb's wool or oily cotton in each nostril it is OK. Swimmers should breathe only through the mouth when in the water, as a precaution against sinus and middle ear infection from poluted or contaminated water entering the nasal passages.

What! Hospital Sees the Light

Let me assure you that the —— Hospital in Toledo permits the prospective father to remain throughout delivery. I found it very comforting to have him talk to me and hold my hand. Please keep on urging husbands to be men, not mice, at this most precious time. (Mrs. ——.)

Answer—This is so sudden. There must be some catch in it. Has that hospital in Toledo gone crazy or something? Or is your husband the kind of man they can't push around?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In the life of a knowing soldier, there is one hour of dire peril which he watches for with eagle eye: and that is when the commanding officer takes ill, or is otherwise temporarily away from his command, and the second-in-command takes over.

The second-in-command is usually an officer who has come up from the platoon and company, and has been a fighting officer. But as second-in-command, he has been relegated perhaps for months past, to a life of relative inactivity. He serves as the housekeeper of the unit, so to speak.

He knows he will likely succeed to the lieutenant-colonelcy, if not of this unit, then of another; for the brass have him naturally in mind. He is being schooled to command. But month after month, he has had to sit by, chewing his mustache, noting all the errors, mistakes, stupidities of his commanding officer. And awaiting his chance.

Awaiting his chance! When it comes, the whole regiment should shiver in its boots. If the chance comes while the regiment is in action, the dilemma of the second-in-command is in the tragic tradition. Here is hi chance to show what is in him. He has waited months for it, eating out his heart. If he acts cautiously, he fears the regiment as well as his senior brass will think he lacks decision.

If the regiment is a good one, and contains some wise and well trained officers, they will recognize at once the classic shape of events, and rally round the second-in-command to lend him ballast, and help him avoid the classic tragedy.

But times without number in the history of war, the temporary commander falls victim to ambition and opportunity. He lacks the humble sense of responsibility for hundreds of lives that is the natural condition of the established commanding officer.

His purely personal opportunity outweighs everything else. The fateful orders are given. Tragedy strikes. Old soldiers ar very leery of seconds-in-command.

Would you like to know how they make many of the jellies on your grocer's shelf so beautifully crystal clear? Well, it's done with a Johns-Manville filter powder called Celite.

With Celite, fruit processors can filter out all of the impurities from their fruit juices, leaving only the purest clear product. Celite traps out the suspended impurities in sugar, wine, beer and other beverages, too. In fact, in almost every field, Celite is used to get clearer products, faster filtration, and lowered costs.

Brisk Legal Battle Develops Over Statements Secured From Accused in Assault Charge

Trenton—(Special) — Charged with indecently assaulting two small girls, Maitland Hutton, Leonard Street, Trenton, pleaded not guilty and was remanded for one week by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Police Court Tuesday afternoon.

Hutton's trial lasted over three hours, until court was adjourned at 6 p.m. After the accused and the police officers who carried out the investigation had testified, a brisk legal battle developed as to whether two statements obtained by the police from Huton were admissible as evidence.

Defence counsel Louis Maraskas cited several precedents set by previous judgments to back up his arguments that both statements were "inadmissible" becaue one Trenton police officer was alleged "to have used language that the accused might have interpreted as a threat."

Constable Ivan Jensen who obtained the first statement from Hutton refused to swear he had not "said something that Hutton might interpret as a threat." Hutton in his testimony stated that the officer at the typewriter (Constable Ivan Jensen) said, "If you do not talk we have ways of making you talk." Constable Ray Jensen, who was present during the interview said he did not remember his brother saying these words, but he also refused to testify under oath that his brother had not said something that Hutton might have thought was a threat.

Asked For Lawyer

After the first statement had been obtained, Police Chief Jack Taylor said that Hutton had been booked on a charge of vagrancy. The following day, another statement was obtained after Hutton had been warned he was going to be charged with indecent assault.

Hutton testified that he had asked several times to be allowed to use the telephone to obtain a lawyer while he was being held in Trenton and the county jail but each time he had made the request, the officers had replied, "We will see." Hutton obtained the services of Mr. Maraskas by asking a man, who left the jail to get a lawyer for him. Magistrate Wills commented that none of the police officers denied this statement during their testimony.

Terming the vagrancy charge that Hutton was held in custody until the second statement was obtained "a sham charge," defence counsel Maraskas referred to a Supreme Court judgment handed down in the famous Dick murder trials of three years ago to support his submission that the statements should not be admitted.

"Everything that has ever been done or not done in criminal cases was done in the Dick murder trials", replied Magistrate Wills. Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson admitted that "there might be some doubt about the first statement because Constable Ivan Jensen had refused to swear "that he had not used language that might be interpreted as a threat. However, the prosecuting attorney insisted that the magistrate "was bound in the face of the evidence to admit the second, because evidence can be admitted piecemeal."

Might Hold in Second

Magistrate Wills said that there was some doubt in his mind as to whether or not "if the first statement was inadmissible, the effect of the threat may still hold in the second."

Mr. Maraskas emphasized his contention that Chief Taylor had used the vagrancy charge as a means to obtain the necessary evidence to warrant the laying of the more serious charge. "I submit that the statements should not be admitted because the fundamental question is whether Hutton's statement were voluntary." He pointed out to the court that it is "a fundamental principle of English law that no statement is admissible in evidence unless it is a voluntary statement and the mere fact that a warning was given is not decisive in determining admissibility."

Trenton (Special) — The price of lettuce took a sharp slump in Trenton yesterday. In fact it was selling for practically nothing. One Dundas Street restaurant owner bought a shopping bag full of high quality heads for 25 cents.

It was the same all over town, as several enterprising youngsters raided what was left of a cargo of lettuce, after the truck had overturned about a mile west of town on No. 2 Highway.

The accident occurred during one of the heavy showers on Monday night and Ontario Provincial Police at Brighton report that the truck apparently dropped off the edge of the pavement and "rolled over in the ditch."

When the truck was towed into town and left behind a garage, the kids lost little time yesterday morning in confiscating what was left of the cargo and started a door to door sales campaign to disperse of the lettuce 'so it would not spoil and be wasted.'

Miss Jeannie Hamster, R. R. 1 Capetown, Ontario, a passenger in the truck received facial lacerations. The driver, Roelof Haalastra, 57, R. R. 2 Tottingham was not injured. The truck was badly damaged.

STEEPLEJACK CHARGED

Toronto, Aug. 2 — (CP) — Joseph Bernhardt, 48-year-old steeplejack, was arrested today and charged with attempted murder.

Police said he fired a .22-calibre revolver at Alex Van Hezewyk, 35, and wounded him in the right arm. The shooting, at Bernhardt's home early today, followed a quarrel over attentions paid by Van Hezewyk to the steeplejack's daughter, police said.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

Hungry Hoppers

Tregarva, Sask. — Generally speaking, there are two types of grasshoppers.

One type is the friendly grasshopper whose worst offence is joining your picnic uninvited, a happy, singing little fellow whom Leigh Hunt once described nicely as "the green little vaulter in the sunny grass" and by somebody else as "the fairies' kangaroo."

Then there is the other, or Saskatchewan, grasshopper about whom no poets sing.

It's surprising how even the mention of the Saskatchewan grasshopper brings out the beast in men. Freddy Cruice, a fellow I met in Regina yesterday is a good example. Mr. C. is a benign type, a veritable Santa Claus without whiskers, but mention that word and little horns start growing in his forehead.

"I go out each night," he said yesterday, sounding suddenly like Peter Lorre, "and squash them with the end of a two-by-four. Oh, I like to kill the little (three words censored here)."

Mr. Cruice was particularly bitter since some young, city-type 'hoppers have already digested most of his suburban strawberry patch. Freddy thinks they are just getting in shape for his lawn.

"You cannot learn to hate grasshoppers until you've seen them erase a fine healthy lawn," he says. "They like it in the sun and so they follow the shadow line until their work is done."

Like me, you've probably thought of grasshoppers only in terms of the damage they do to crops in the country and not of invading a city. Do, though. And in such fantastic numbers that workers going into the office have to pick their way through them on the streets.

A Reginan who represents the Toronto Star told me how one bad year he filed a story east about the 'hoppers and received a query back asking for a description of the insect.

"I just walked to the window," he recalls, "picked one of the little terrors off the ledge, put him in a match box and mailed him east."

On The Farm

Last night we dropped in on the farm of Gordon Pearce, who has 1100 acres here, most of it in wheat. As we walked to the white farmhouse, through the tall grass the young grasshoppers, tobacco-juice brown and about a half-inch in length, bounded ahead of us.

Dave Innes, editor of the Saskatchewan Farmer, who was showing me around, explained that recent rains have kept the 'hoppers down, but added that the insect are well-nigh indestructible. Recently in the line of research, a 'hopper was frozen solid in a block of ice for a week and pogo-sticked away, with a tiny, bored yawn, soon as he was thawed out.

Pearce's farm is in an area marked in blue (which means "severe infection") on the Department of Agriculture's grasshopper forecast map, Innes explained that there's no telling how serious this year will be, but it looks pretty bad.

Farmer Pearce, a heavy-set, laconic man, was in the red barn milking and we conducted a cow-side interview. It was pleasant in the barn with the manure smell and the swallows flitting about, but I've already learned not to expect a farmer to reflect his peaceful surroundings.

"How do the 'hoppers look this year?" Innes asked.

Pearce gave a few vicious squirts.

"Bad," he said.

"Have they done any damage?"

Squirt, squirt.

"Well, son," Pearce drawled, they never yet done any good."

"What precautions are you taking, Mr. Pearce?"

"The usual, I guess." Squirt, squirt. "But sometimes I figger it's like barking at the moon."

Ever Present

Pearce loosened up conversationally when he found Innes could talk his language and showed us some of the poison he is spreading (by shovel from the back of a truck). It's an evil-smelling mixture of sawdust, bran, water and a poison called Aldrin, all supplied, ready-mixed and free, by the government.

"Trouble is, you may get some and then a whole new batch may come in," Pearce explained to which Innes added the technical fact that a single lady grasshopper lays from a hundred to 400 eggs each fall.

The bigger farms—or "wheat factories" as they're known hereabouts — use planes to spray the crops, but at $1.10 an acre farmers like Pearce can't afford that kind of insurance.

Hoppers made their largest number of enemies here in 1938 when crop damage was over $30 million, but, like drought and hail, the insects are a potential threat every year.

"We don't get too pleased with ourselves," Pearce said, looking out at his fine stand of wheat, now above knee height, and with what I'm told is chronic pessimism. "We done quite a little starving in the thirties. We could again."

WEDDINGS

DILLON—RUSH

On Monday, July 24., Rev. J. G. McCabe officiated at the wedding of Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henigan Rush, and Mr. Francis J. Dillon, of Enterprise, in St. Edmund's Church, Stoco.

Present in the Sanctuary were Rev. Francis J. Quinlan, O.M.I., of Arnprior, and Rev. W. P. Healey, of Camden.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the bride wore a gown of foam-white daisy lace over slipper satin, fashioned with a cameo neckline which was offset by a deep bertha collar, banded with tulle. The softly flared skirt featured a flounce of tulle about the hemline, extending to a full sweep. Her fingertip veil fell from a tiny halo hat and she carried a crescent bouquet of gardenias and white stephanotis.

Her attendants chose gowns of nylon net over taffeta, the maid of honor, Miss Anna Rush, being in yellow, and the bridesmaids, Miss Geraldine Dillon, and Miss Doris Rush, in blue. They carried crescent bouquets of yellow and blue glamellias and white daisies and wore halos of matching flowers.

Little Mary Enright, of Toronto, niece of the bridegroom, made a demure flower girl, in her gown of white dotted organdy with matching bonnet. She carried a miniature copy of the bride's bouquet.

Mr. Gerard Dillon, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Joe Craigen, of Creighton and Mr. Kenneth L. Meraw, of Detroit, Michigan.

Miss Colletta O'Keefe, A.T.C.M., of Campbellford, presided at the organ, and during the ceremony. Miss Margaret Marchen, soloist, rendered several appropriate solos including Rosewig's "Ave Maria", and "Panis Angelicus", by Cesar Franck.

At the reception which followed, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a gown of copperlight faille, navy accessories and a corsage of tea roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, wearing a gown of light blue faille, navy accessories and a corsage of tea roses.

For travelling to the Laurentians and Quebec City, the bride wore a dusty rose summer suit, and an orchid corsage.

Helpful Perfume Pointers

Before you dress, splash on a liberal amount of toilet water. Later, just before you go out pat on a litle perfume of the same scent.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Sweet perfumes have the magic power to attract and to stimulate the imagination. They seem to complete the personality of a lovely woman. The perfume industry is a vast one today, and women accept floretted odors as an important factor in their lives. Conscience does not trouble them when they sneak a small sum from the household budget, fare forth and come home with some lovely blend or bouquet that sets them up whenever they use it.

You must learn two principles of applying perfume. First, you must keep it in an atomizer, carefully stoppered so it will not evaporate. Second, you must begin perfuming from the inside out, in place of the customary dab behind the ear and a few drops on your handkerchief.

A Toilet Water

After the bath, spray neck, arms and chest, or pat on the fragrance if you don't have an atomizer. For this application it is extravagant to use a true perfume; you should have a toilet water of the same scent; then you won't feel that you are pulling too hard on the beauty overhead. Spray your girdle or foundation garment and, if you are going to dine and dance, blow a little of the toilet water on the hem of your frock. By this method, there comes to those who approach you a perfume that is veiled and discreet—a mere suggestion of a pleasing odor.

The choice of a perfume is a problem to most of the sisters. If the salesgirl says "This is fashionable, this is popular" pay no heed. Your nose should be the judge, should make your decision. You and your family will have to live with the contents of the precious vial if it isn't sweet and delicate you will regret ever lugging it home.

Don't overlook sachets. They are wonderful buys, are getting better every year, have longer lasting qualities. Some firms put up cute little boxes containing perfume, toilet water and sachets. There is a threesome that is well worth the money. Be lavish with the toilet water, stingy with the perfume, and place the sachets in dresser drawers, hat boxes, coat pockets. Your entire wardrobe will become impregnated with the intriguing scent.

Women's Institute

PINE GROVE W.I.

The regular monthly meeting of Pine Grove Women's Institute was held last Thursday evening, at Mrs. B. Johnston's home with the president, Mrs. F. Campbell, presiding.

It was decided to send $10 to the Ontario Women's Institute, Manitoba Flood Relief Fund, and that a committee meeting of the directors be held at Mrs. H. Coulter's home on August 11, to make plans for serving meals at the Belleville Livestock Sales Barn.

The president welcomed all visitors, and also a new member, Mrs. J. Campbell.

Mrs. F. Finkle gave current events.

Mrs. B. Johnston read a poem "Mother's Rocking Chair", after which she introduced Mr. Everett Cook, Stirling, who showed samples and spoke on "Brocading" a new type of interior decorating for walls. This gives the appearance of wallpaper, but is done by using paint only.

At the close of the meeting, the hostess and committee served delicious refreshments.

ALLAN'S MILLS' W.I.

Allan's Mills.—The W. I. members and visitors met at the home of Mrs. John McKeown on Wednesday afternoon.

The meeting was opened in the usual manner. The minutes were read by Mrs. W. J. Barlow. Mrs. J. F. Baker was in charge of the program.

Mrs. A. V. Brown gave a full report on the W.I. Rally in Belleville. Instrumental music was given by Misses Rosemary Webb, Mary Meiklejohn and Judy Baker.

Community singing was enjoyed and Mrs. Dave Wellman gave a splendid report of the O.E.A. convention held in Toronto.

A contest was put on by Mrs. C. Spry. One minute's silence was observed in honor of the late Mackenzie King. At the close of the meeting all joined hands and sang "Happy Birthday" for Mrs. John McKeown.

The hostess served dainty refreshments.

The next meeting will be in the form of a picnic when the members will visit the Quaker Oats plant and the Lift Locks of Peterborough.

The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Percy Bateman on Sept. 27th.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking ?

Nectarines are not new. While most people mistakenly think that the hairless peach is a recent fruit development, actually they were grown over two thousand years ago.

You can recognize nectarines by their smooth skin that lacks the fuzz or down found on peaches. The pit of a nectarine is large for the size of the fruit, but the flesh is usually tender and sweet

Nectarines are either clingstone or freestone. The meat is white or yellow, with deep red streaks. If the nectarines are large, they may be peeled, by dipping in hot water for 10-15 seconds, then sliced and sweetened.

Floating Island with nectarines is a very light, refreshing summer dessert. Egg yolks are made into a boiled custard sauce; egg whites are made into a boiled meringue. The custard and meringue are then combined and served with sweetened fruit.

In poaching egg meringues a wide saucepan is necessary in order that each meringue will have room to expand.

Floating Island with Nectarines.
4-5 Servings

Peel and slice 4 to 5 large nectarines. Sprinkle generously with granulated sugar, and place in refrigerator until serving time.

Beat 2 egg yolks slightly. In the top part of a double boiler combine 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1-3 cup sugar and 1-4 teaspoon salt. Add egg yolks, stirring well.

In a small saucepan combing 1 1-2 cups milk and 1-2 cup light cream. Heat until bubbles appear around edge of saucepan.

Pour hot milk mixture over egg yolks. Stir well.

Cook over simmering water stirring constantly until mixture shows signs of thickening or coats the back of a spoon. Do not overcook, or mixture will curdle.

In a clean mixing bowl beat 2 egg whites until they hold their shape. Gradually add 4 tablespoons sugar, a small amount at a time, continuing to beat until egg whites are stuff.

Pour boiling water to a depth of 1-2 inch in a wide saucepan. Bring to a boil. Add egg meringue by large spoonfuls. Cover and steam until firm, about 5 minutes. Drain.

Place meringue in serving dishes. Pour custard over meringues. Surround with sweetened nectarines. Sweetened peaches or berries may be substituted for nectarines if desired.

Do you want a particular recipe, or have you a cooking problem? Write Mario, care this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped, envelope to his reply.—Ed.

Elopement Delayed Until House Built

Graaf-Reinett, South Africa, Aug. 2—(CP)—Elopment by instalments was practised by a young couple after the girl's father opposed the marriage.

The couple first secretly built a house to occupy after they were wed. When it was ready, the girl, a school-teacher, gradually transferred her clothes there.

When school closed she bought a return ticket to Johannesburg, telling her father she was going to visit friends there. She got off the train at nearby Middelburg where her fiance was waiting with a special licence, and they were married.

From Middelburg they went to Port Elizabeth for a honeymoon and then returned to tell the bride's father: "we're married."

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Stay out of your mother-in-law's house

Miriam was a warm and generous-hearted girl.

So when, just before her marriage, the sudden death of her fiance's father and his own imminent departure for a home of his own, left his mother facing a solitary life in a house much too big for her, she readily fell in with the suggestion of her husband-to-be that they move in with his mother for a while after their wedding.

Because she was intelligent, she did not discount the dangers of such a situation.

"I fully realized," she says now, after a year of such co-operative housekeeping, "the possibility that I might find myself confronted with a mother-in-law problem, since such things happen even in the best of families. But I truly believed that since we were all free reasoning and reasonable people, we could work out any difficulties that might arise. I was deeply in love, and honestly fond of my husband's mother and she of me, so it seemed as though we should be able to live companionably together.

"How wrong I was!

"Although my mother-in-law is wonderful to us in many ways, I am always reminded that it is she who owns the house and I have been made to feel more like a roomer than a young wife. Nothing is mine—everything in the house is hers. And as the weeks go by, she seems to be trying to obtain a stronger and stronger hold over my husband, so that sometimes, I even wonder if he belongs to me.

"I've learned the hard way that even with the best intentions in the world, and the finest of feeling between them—at first!—no man's wife and mother should ever try to live together."

And how right she is!

As long as a woman maintains her status of mother-in-law, things can usually be counted on to run along smoothly. It is when, all of a sudden, she begins to make a real career of being her son's mother, and to regard her daughter-in-law exclusively as her son's wife, that the real trouble starts. And if you don't think there's a difference between your mother-in-law and the mother of your husband, let me point it out to you.

As a mother-in-law, the average woman accepts the girl her son has married as an individual in her own right, and treats her like one. The two of them may share many common interests, enjoy doing things together, find each other congenial company.

But when she slips out of that role and lapses back into the one she played while her son was still under her maternal wing, a subtle change takes place. Then the daughter-in-law loses her individual identity and becomes, in her mother-in-law's mind, merely one of her son's vested interests, or—to skip lightly from metaphor to metaphor—an unimportant family hanger-on, without voting rights of any kind in what goes on.

Thus, by a simple shift of roles, Mother triumphantly takes over, relegating the daughter-in-law to a completely subordinate position in the scheme of things, which, if daughter-in-law has any gumption at all, rapidly changes to insubordination and the war is on.

Such a metamorphosis in relationships can—and tragically often does—occur even under circumstances where a son and his bride go straight from the honeymoon into their own home and set at once about the business of being an independent unit. But it is practically inevitable when the young couple go straight into his mother's house and settle down to begin married life in exactly the same environment the bridegroom left only long enough for the wedding ceremony and a two-week holiday. For then they step directly into an established pattern —a pattern set by her husband's mother and one he is accustomed to follow—and before the bewildered bride scarcely realizes what is happening, she feels the firm pressure of the maternal hand sqeezing her down to fit into the same mold.

It may, seemingly, be the gentlest, most kindly disposed hand in the world; a hand ready to toil to the point of slavery in the service of its owner's dear ones and those who belong to them. But let any of those dear ones try to wriggle out from under that hand and instantly the pressure increases, bears down harder, makes escape impossible unless brute force is used, in which case permanent damage on both sides invariably results.

There may occasionally be certain unusual conditions which force a wife to agree to living temporarily in her mother-in-law's home. Everyone knows of instances in which modern housing shortages have given young people the alternative of either moving in with the folks or postponing their marriage indefinitely. And it is a hard decision to have to make.

But sometimes when the first alternative is decided upon, it is done more through thoughtlessness than necessity. The folks have a big house; more room than they need. They have every convenience, most of the luxuries—all the things for which most young people have to save and wait. Why not take advantage of the chance their invitation to live with them a year or two would provide for laying by the money with which to start housekeeping on the scale they desire?

A little sober thought will give them the answer:

Better a tiny place on the wrong side of the tracks, unequipped in the beginning with all those conveniences and luxuries, if it is all one's own. For in it, a man will be a husband first, and his mother's son second. His bride, a daughter-in-law, yes, but not a nonentity labelled "my son's wife".

Humane Society Set For Cat Avalanche

Ottawa (CP) — The trouble with a cute kitten in the spring is that it's likely to become a stray cat by summer. That's why come August the Ottawa Humane Society will be expecting its 'annual avalanche of cats.'

It's nothing for the organization to collect as many as 500 cats in a month during the summer season, says K. G. Switzer who is in charge of the society's animal shelter in South Ottawa.

Cats and dogs are most popular guests in this vine-covered rambling building which for the last 17 years has done double duty as shelter and city pound.

But on occasion birds, a couple of bears, even a deer, have turned up among the star boarders.

And for a couple of days this spring temporary lodging was given a sad looking ground-hog freed by humane society inspectors from the cold-air system of a house in fashionable Rockcliffe.

How the ground-hog got in there only he knows.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Memo to summer guests

To be a good guest, an endearing guest, a guest to be welcomed and then to be welcomed back.

1. Be constantly on the alert to show your appreciation, by what you say and by what you do. Have your gracious attitude express: "You make me happy, very happy, by all the thoughtful plans you have made for my delight and comfort."

2. Be a good listener . . . aware, active, responsive.

3. Be charmingly co-operative with all the plans made for you or suggested to you by the hostess or other members of the family.

Attractive . . . attractive . . . attractive. Your attitude should be that you find everyone, everything attractive. An excellent challenge for you! Good going on the pathway to popularity.

No "Miss" in signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am 19 years old, unmarried. When I write a letter to a stranger . . . for example, this letter to you . . . should I sign my name Miss Mary Brown? I've been told I shouldn't, but to me it makes sense that I should sign the title "Miss" before my name, just as a married woman signs the title "Mrs." before her name. Please explain.

Puzzled.

You should not sign a letter any kind of letter to anyone, Miss Mary Brown. The title is not part of your signature. If you think it is necessary to indicate the title, write Miss in parentheses before your name:

(Miss) Mary Brown

And incidentally, it is not correct for a married woman to sign a letter, any kind of letter to anyone, with the title "Mrs." before her name; "Mrs. John Jones", for example. She signs her informal name . . .Grace Smith Jones. . .and, if necessary for identification or information, writes her formal name in parentheses underneath:

Grace Smith Jones
(Mrs. Jonathan Jones)

How wife addresses her husband's relatives

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been married for several months, and now my husband and I are planning to go to live in his home city, where he has many relatives—aunts, uncles, cousins, as well as two married sisters. How should I address all these relatives of my husband. . by "Mr." and "Mrs." until they perhaps suggest that I call them by their first names?

"Scared"

Here's an easy answer to remember . . .you call all of your husband's relatives exactly what he does: "Aunt Mary", "Uncle John", "Janet" or "Cousin Jane', and so forth. Dont address them "Mr." and "Mrs.". . .and don't even wait for them to suggest that you call them by their first names, for they will expect you to call them by the name your husband uses for them. (And incidentally, your husband, in turn addresses your relatives by the name you use in speaking to them.)

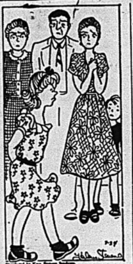
Consideration for passersby in restaurant

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a woman has finished lunching or dining in a restaurant, should she leave her chair as it is when she rises, or as it was when she came to the table?

Frances N.

She should leave her chair so that it will not possibly be in the way of anyone passing by.



If she feels depressed, it is because she hasn't had sufficient rest

BEAUTY

Teen-agers need plenty of sleep

Going places seems to be the objective of the sweet young things. Youth has plenty of business to attend to—studies during the school terms, movies, motoring, dancing, endless telephoning, outdoor sports. They haven't time to sleep. Tell the kids that they should pile in between the sheets at a reasonable hour, and where do you get? Nowhere. You get a supercilious smile and a bored look, as if you were an old dodo and should retire to some vast wilderness.

We are going to get in our ten cents worth, hoping to catch the eyes of some cuties who are willing to listen to reason. All of them want to look pretty, be popular, have the boys clanging their telephones asking for dates. They should be told that long hours of sleep are good not just for the sake of health but for their cosmetic value.

There is a strong bond between the physical being and external appearance. Don't be scornful when you are told that the temple of beauty is built upon health and vitality, because it is heaven's truth. No tired girl can be her best self. Her eyes will lack sparkle—her spirits as well. Youth is not made of wire and fiddle strings, as youth seems to imagine.

The young person needs more sleep than individuals of middle-age. During sleep all the motors are recharged and Nature attends to mending and rebuilding. The eyes, working during every moment of wakefulness, have a rest. Even the heart catches a little release. The nervous system, under more or less tension during the day's activities unties knots, settles down. One must have restful sleep if one is to feel well, look well, be efficient and capable.

Little girls can have shadows under their eyes when they are tired. In the course of time dark circles may appear, become established. Girls of fifteen and sixteen are still in a state of growth, and that process uses up energy. With social and school activities, time is at a premium. Days are filled with rush and hurry.

During the school year many students make poor grades because they are not up to par physically. The mind does not function as quickly as it should. Judgment is not keen or normal. Fatigue bugs do considerable damage, not only to the health, but to appearance.

A healthy girl, after nine hours sleep, will awaken with eyes bright, cheeks flushed, skin clear of coloring. She is ready to start the day with enthusiasm.

If she feels depressed and out of sorts with herself, her family and the world, it is because she hasn't had sufficient rest. One of her great desires is to have a complexion of rose-petal loveliness. Long hours of sleep will create it, as will no cosmetic or make-up item.

Hospital Holiday For Grandmothers

Tiverton, Devon, England — (CP) — Two weeks a year in hospital is one doctor's idea of a break for grandmother —and the family.

At a hospital here, Dr. Thomas Rudd noticed that many elderly persons, sent to hospital because relatives could not look after them during illness, never returned home.

Under a present arrangement, grandmother is sent home on the understanding that she can return to hospital for two weeks during the summer.

"Relatives will go on looking after the old lady with more confidence if they know that they will get a holiday break and avoid cracking up themselves," said Dr. Rudd.

The Ministry of Health will encourage other hospitals to do the same.

Wellington Cyclist to Represent Canada in World Title Events

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 2 — (CP)—With six months of rigorous roadwork behind him, 50-year-old Hugh K. McKenzie, of Wellington, Ont., has left for the continent to complete his training for the world's professional sprint cycling championships. The meet is slated for Aug. 12-16 at Liege, Belgium.

Canada's lone entry in these gruelling tests, McKenzie believes he stands a good chance of copping a share of the prize money.

"Most of the European boys are pretty hot stuff and they're wise to all the tricks of the trade," he said before his departure. "But I've been in the game more than 30 years and right now I'm at the peak of my form. If I can get the hop on them, I'll sure confound those who say I'm getting too old for this sort of stuff."

Started Early

McKenzie, a marine engineer who has worked on boats out of Toronto and Vancouver, adopted cycling at an early age, "just for the fun I got out of it." He is proud of holding No. 1 licence in the Canadian Wheelman's Association. During his racing career he has won the Dominion half-mile, one-mile and three-mile professional titles.

Since his arrival in England last December, the Canadian speeder has raced and beaten some of the leading sprinters in the country. However, he has devoted most of his training to workouts over distances set for the world title sprints.

"Right now I'm concentrating on the quick get-away and plenty of speed," he said. "I know I've got the stamina."

Holds Many Records

The records he produced bore out the latter claim.

Among his accomplishments is an endurance tour of 3,025 miles from San Francisco to New York in 21 days. Subsequently, he covered 2,025 miles over winding roads in Britain in the elapsed time of 168 hours.

And just to prove that life begins at 50, McKenzie says he may enter the Daily Mail's £1,000 ($3,100) cross-channel swim Aug. 24 if he comes through the cycling events without injury.

RED CHINA PREPARES FLEET OF JUNKS

These two photos, recently smuggled out of red China show the preparations being made for the invasion of Formosa. Top- civilian and army carpenters are busy building wooden junks to ferry men and supplies across the 100-mile channel from China to Formosa. Above, land soldiers receive instruction on a model junk on how to handle the craft. The junk, a seeming anachronism in this day of fast engines, is said by military men to be an ideal carrier for small groups of men and light equipment. — Central Press Canadian.

IRRIGATION PIPELINE

Rapidly nearing completion is this wood stave pipeline, built as a syphon across the Pinepound Coullee near the Alberta town of Spring Coulee for the main canal of the huge St. Mary-Milk Rivers irrigation projects. A second syphon will be built later. With an inside diameter of 13 feet, it will carry 1,600 cubic feet of water per second across the coulee. Through its 960-foot length, the pipeline drops 60 feet and then rises that height again. — (CP Photo.)

Walkie-Talkie Proves Popular With Civilians

Chicago (AP)—The walkie talkie which has proved so handy to America's fighting men in the war is coming in handy for civilians, too.

Hundreds of such devices — portable two-way radiotelephones —are being used.

Here are some examples of the varied services they performed this year:

Fire Chief Edward J. Walsh directed his men with one of the instruments during a fire that swept a six-storey building in San Francisco.

The apparatus was put to work in New York City harbor. A pilot gave orders to tugs by word of mouth instead of by the traditional whistle signals while the liner Argentina was being eased away from her berth in the North River.

Marshals carrying the lightweight radio equipment called up the floats, marching groups and bands in the assembly zone of the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce parade in Chicago.

Some railroads already had found they can save time and steps in freight classification yards where freight trains are put together. Car checkers establish contact with dispatchers in yard offices and call the number, owner, contents and destination of each car as they walk along a line of cars.

Sets have been sold to police departments, game wardens, construction companies, farmers, the F.B.I., government forestry and park services, the Red Cross, surveyors, utility firms and the atomic energy commission.

Their use has been limited, thus far, to persons, companies and agencies of those types. They usually are used in areas where telephones can't be used.

Peoples who use them have to get a license from the Federal Communications Commission. They operate on the 25 to 50 and 152 to 194 megacycle bands.

Compact transmitter and receiver units powered by batteries were produced early in the Second world war for the armed forces. The first one was the handie-talkie. It was carried by hand and, in use, was held up against the head.

3RD HILLIER

3rd Hillier—The huckleberry pickers all report a good crop of the berries in Hastings. Several families have spent the weekend in the north for this popular fruit.

Mr. Frank Benway, of Pleasant Bay, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benway.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Heard, (nee Greta Benway), of Belleville, spent the weekend, with Mrs. Heard's mother, Mrs. Will Benway, and Gordon of Wellington.

Berry picking is the order of the day.

Master Kenneth Wright met with rather a painful accident at the barn, requiring several stitches in his head. Dr. Thompson of Wellington is in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. John Embury of Niles Corners, spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Benway.

Nude Lady Popular Says Tatoo Artist

Edmonton— (CP) — The nude lady is runner-up to the inscription "Death before dishonor" among his clients, says tattoo artist R. V. Hughson of Barrie, Ont.

Here for the Edmonton Exhibition, Mr. Hughson has been following the tattoo trail since he learned the art in England in 1937.

He has picked up a lot of the tricks of the trade — creating his own designs and inventing his own needles — but hasn't yet adopted one he saw in Japan.

In this one the artist paints the design on a studded board, puts the board on the subject's back and "pounds" the design in, he says.

Tackle Too Light To Handle Bruin

Quesnel, B. C.—(CP)—Fisherman Harry Bourne figured his tackle was too light for the biggest catch he ever lost — a 400-pound bear.

The Vancouver angler was fishing on nearby Quesnel Lake when bruin — enjoying a swim — got fouled up in Bourne's light trout line. The shaggy beast swam to shore and bounded into the woods still entangled.

Finally the bear broke the line after it was wound around a tree. Bourne and his party retrieved the line and returned to their fishing.

Not so Good For Circulation

London — (CP) — The mass-circulation Daily Mirror isn't so sure whether it's a good idea to be popular in Owen Sound, Ont.

Mrs. F. Greig of (1548 Ninth Ave. E.) Owen Sound wrote the newspaper that her father in London regularly sends his copy of the Daily Mirror to Owen Sound. Then this is the routine:

"My husband and I devour the contents. Then it goes next door to an English couple . . . then it goes across the road . . . then on to the next street, where two more devour its contents, and then to its last stop."

The Daily Mirror, in a tone of mock gruffness, said if many more bloomin' readers worked it like that the Mirror would have to put up its blessed shutters.

WIDOW'S ALLOWANCE: "My husband was killed in action during the second world war and since then I have received a widow's allowance. If I re-marry will I lose this allowance?"
Yes, DVA authorities tell us that you will lose your allowance if you re-marry.
FASHION TREND: "Is it true that skirts will be shorter and slimmer this fall? If so, what does an overweight, over 40 woman do?"
Skirts are definitely shorter, and all definitely slim. Getting rid of some of the poundage seems to be the quickest way to conform to the fall silhouette. To help you we've sent along our reducing diet (a pound a day for 10 days on end).
CANNED RASPBERRIES: "Please give me a good recipe for canned raspberries. One that will preserve their fresh flavor."
Our best recipe is this. Pick over the berries, pack them in sterile pint or quart jars. Tap down smartly as fruit is being packed so that the berries will not be floating in syrup when done. When jars are filled, place on rack in oven, temperature 300 deg. F. Do not put on rubbers or tops; do not have jars touching. When fruit is hot through and through and juice has begun to draw out (about 25 minutes), remove jars from oven and fill to overflowing with boiling syrup. Adjust rubbers, glass and zinc tops, screw down tightly and invert to test for leaks.

Air War in Korea Will Soon Be Stepped Up With Arrival Of More U.S. Bomber Groups

By JAMES J. STREBIG

Washington, Aug. 2. (AP)—Indications are that the air war in Korea will be stepped up in scope and intensity soon.

The tip-off was the dispatch of two more medium-bomber (probably B-29) groups to the Far East this week. They supplement several units of B-29's ordered out nearly a month ago.

A full strategic air war is not in prospect, because the ultimate source of North Korean arms lies outside its territory.

Arrival of Marine air units, skilled in close ground support tactics, will help on the United Nations' shortened battlefront.

A rounding out of aerial operations has been evident for more than a week in the improved ground support due to establishment of full-scale, air-ground communications for directing fighter-bomber attacks. This permits more effective and co-ordinated use of available air force, navy and Australian planes.

Stabilize Battle Lines

An equally-important factor is stabilization of battle lines. It has became possible to plan air operations overnight instead of responding like fire trucks to emergency calls.

There has been widespread criticism of air power results in Korea because the North Koreans, virtually without any airplanes of their own, have been able to surge forward steadily on the ground.

The communist advance has raised questions as to whether great numerical superiority on the ground may not counterbalance air strength. Critics say the air force now is shown to have been over-confident in what it could achieve in actual fighting.

Too Little of Everything

However, reports from battlefront observers have been generally full of praise for both equipment and results.

Why hasn't the air force done more to stop the onrushing North Korean ground forces? The answer in aviation circles is: Too little of everything on hand. It goes back to 1947, when the United States began withdrawing military power from the Far East.

Air offensives take time to prepare. Before the Second World War American aircraft manufacturers began expanding in 1938 with orders from France and Britain. When the U.S. entered the war more than 4,000 planes were being turned out monthly. (The average monthly output today is 215 planes.)

In the Second World War ground support airbases seldom were more than 50 miles behind the lines. Enormous engineering forces at hand and better terrain made it possible to build new bases as needed.

The Korean air war has been fought with what was on hand until replacements and supplies could be shipped some 7,000 miles.

BEST DRESSED IN ATOM AGE

A new material has been discovered for civil defence clothing protective against the effects of atom bombing. The material is a compound of powdered lead and rubber. A whole suit weighs possibly 50 pounds, but is very flexible. When wearing the two-pound glove you can pick up a match from a flat surface. This was disclosed at the recent International Congress of Radiology, now taking place in London, England. — Central Press Canadian.

Crown Withdraws Five Charges Against Baptists

La Sarre, Que., Aug. 2 (CP)—Charges of disturbing the peace against five Baptist evangelists were withdrawn Tuesday.

The five were arrested July 22 after a crowd of residents broke up their street-corner religious meeting. The incident was one of a series of disturbances in this predominantly Roman Catholic mining town.

Charges were withdrawn with the consent of Magistrate Camille Beaulieu after Crown Attorney J. J. Martel said a constable arrested the men because he believed the Baptists were at fault in attempting to proceed with the meeting. The crowd was quite unruly, he said.

Magistrate Beaulieu said such religious meetings are entirely legal as long as they are orderly.

Following the trial, Mr. Martel and Max Garmise, defence counsel, issued the following joint statement:

"The charge of unlawful assembly laid by the chief of police of La Sarre against the five Baptists was the result of a misunderstanding on the part of La Sarre town council of the activities of the Baptist Church involved.

"The explanation since received by the authorities of the town have completely satisfied them that the Baptists were merely exercising rights which are granted to all religious minorities in the province of Quebec."

The five men involved were Leslie G. Barnhart, 37, pastor of the Bonne Nouvelle Baptist Church near La Sarre; Maurice Boillat, professor of French at the Central Baptist Seminary in Toronto; Lloyd Carr, 20, a student at the seminary; Alphonse Cloutier, 40, and Noel Rossignol, 35, La Sarre residents.

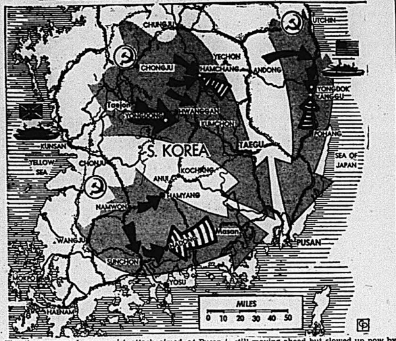
BARGE TORN ADRIFT

Toronto, Aug. 2—(CP)—An oil barge was torn adrift from a tug during a high wind on Lake Ontario Tuesday. The tug, Helena, went out from Hamilton and picked up the barge a few hours later. It put back into Toronto. The tug Elsie Connors lost the barge Arthur Hermann about 18 miles out of Toronto. Another attempt to take the barge to Port Weller, at the head of the Welland Canal, will be made today.

DRIVER DIES OF BURNS

London, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—Bill Wakeling, 23, died of burns in hospital Tuesday night, a few hours after his gasoline trailer overturned at a railway crossing west of Elginfield. Police said Wakeling, of R. R. 2 Lucan, was attempting to avoid a collision with a train when his truck overturned in a ditch and caught fire. He was married and had four children.

THREE-PRONGED ATTACK ADVANCES AT SLOWER RATE



The three-pronged communist attack aimed at Pusan is still moving ahead but slowed up now by arrival of two new divisions of U.S. troops. The new divisions, going straight into combat on disembarkation, are armed with weapons suitable for the type of fighting in Korea. — Central Press Canadian.

Livestock Entries at Fairs Expected to Drop Due to Rates

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Aug. 2 — (CP)—Count will be kept this summer of livestock entries at rural fairs held all across the country.

When the season ends officials of the Canadian Association of Exhibitions will check 1950 figures against last year's to find out whether entries drop as a result of cancellation by the railways of special freight rates formerly allowed exhibitors.

The low rates that applied for as long as most exhibitors remember were cancelled in February. Livestock exhibitors, for the price of one-way freight charges, could take prize animals from their farms to the shows and back again.

This low-rate privilege disappeared when the railways argued their cases for freight-rate increases. They were asked to cut out some preferential tariffs and the prize-livestock cheap rate was one of those that vanished.

Emery Boucher, secretary - treasurer of Quebec Exhibition and Secretary - manager of the C. A. E., said the Association is organizing careful reporting of 1950 exhibition results.

"Some fairs probably won't be affected much," he said. "For instance, livestock exhibitors at Quebec, Sherbrooke, Ottawa and London, Ont., appear to rely mostly on truck transportation.

"Here in Quebec City about 1,100 or 1,200 head of livestock go on show every year and it is about the same for Sherbrooke, the centre of an important raising district. We'll know by October what will happen."

Mr. Boucher said effect of the cancellation probably will be felt most heavily at such shows as the Canadian National Exhibition and later at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto which have entries from all parts of Canada."

The C. A. E. secretary-manager said effect may also be felt at Western Canadian shows, adding that in some cases, exhibitors may start trucking their cattle where they used to ship them by railway.

Money, Housing Worry Australians

Sydney, Australia—(CP)—If it were not for inflation and the housing shortage, Australians would be an extraordinarily carefree people judging from a recent public opinion poll.

Interviewers went from house to house in nearly 200 centres throughout Australia, asking:

"What is the main problem facing your family today?"

40 per cent said they had no big family problems;

32 per cent said financial worries were greatest;

19 per cent have a housing problem;

Three per cent are worried about their work of security;

Two per cent of families have health problems;

Two per cent have personal problems;

One per cent worry about their taxes; and

One per cent have other big problems.

Further analysis shows that finance is the chief problem in every occupational group.

Farmers come out best here, at 19 per cent ,thanks to high export prices; office and store clerks, at 38 per cent, fare worst because their salaries are lagging behind inflationary prices.

Of hourly-rated workers, 31-per cent said finance was their chief problem. As a group, they are also the worst sufferers from the housing shortage, which is the chief problem of 23 per cent of them.

THOUSANDS WHERE THIS CAME FROM

Sprucing up a navy F-42 "Corsair," crewmen at the Litchfield Park Naval Base, near Phoenix, Ariz., use hoses to wash down the plane after it has been "demothed." Hundreds of war planes of all types are being put back into service. — Central Press Canadian.

FATHER ASTOUNDED

Pass Christian, Miss., Aug. 2—(AP)—Quadruplets Tuesday were born to Sancil and Gertrude Martin. The smallest of the four boys weighed two pounds, six ounces. The father, a 36-year-old yard man who already has six children, when told the news, exclaimed: "My God, what am I going to do with four more?"

FELL ASLEEP IN SHOW

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP)—William West phoned police from a deserted theatre Tuesday, telling them he fell asleep during a Cops-and-Robbers movie and was locked in. Two policemen showed up and gave him instructions, through a glass door, on how to get out.

Atlantic Pact Countries Plan Joint Command

London, Aug. 2. (AP)—The 12 North Atlantic Pact countries are planning to set up a joint, London-based military high command, informed sources said today.

The military agencies of the Atlantic Pact countries now report to the American-British-French standing group in Washington.

The group's leaders—Lt.-Gen. Willis Crittenberger of the United States, Air Marshal Lord Tedder of Britain and Lt.-Gen. Paul Ely of the French Army—arrived yesterday for a two-day talk with the pact's council of deputies, now meeting here.

The new command would furnish on-the-spot co-ordination of such pact agencies as the Alliance's Scandinavian, West European and Mediterranean Regional Defence Planning groups its supply and production board and the air and shipping committees.

The new command would be responsible to the council of deputies, whose next step is reported to be figuring out how the western countries can fill the gap between the needs of their defence and what they have ready—at least in terms of airplanes, guns, tanks, steel and other war goods.

French delegates were said in Paris to favor a pool lumping all troops—including American—in one force, or at least a pooling of pact financial resources for defence purposes.

Tokyo, Aug. 2 (AP) — B-29's that rained 400 tons of bombs on Hungnam Tuesday destroyed 20 percent of main factory area buildings, the Far East air forces said today.

It was the second big strategic air strike at the North Korean east coast city, a chemical and explosives centre 115 miles north of the 38th parallel. B-29's hit the city first Sunday.

The announcement said incomplete evaluation of photographs showed that 40 percent of the main buildings received direct hits. Another 10 percent of the target area was damaged.

The plant is considered North Korea's principal manufacturer of war material.

American fighter planes hit Chinju on the southern front today and left the city in flames.

One pilot reported residents fled from the city after the attack.

Chinju, 55 miles west of the southeast port of Pusan, is a focal point for the communist thrust driving toward Pusan.

Commons Will Pay Tribute to Former Member

London, Aug. 2—(CP) — Parliament is getting ready to pay tribute to one of the most remarkable men who ever sat in the House of Commons.

Two things are out of the ordinary about Theodore Cooke Taylor of Batley, Yorkshire—he'll be 100 years old Thursday and he's still doing a full day's work at his Yorkshire Woolen Company.

Taylor was a Liberal member of the House of Commons for Lancashire southeast from 1900 to 1918. Parliament is not sitting, but Col. Douglas Clifton Brown, Speaker of the present parliament, will send a special message of congratulations and goodwill on behalf of all members.

Two years ago Taylor visited Canada and the United States to investigate ways of increasing woolen exports to North America. Now he's talking of a return visit.

Although he hasn't been a member for more than 30 years, his interest in politics is still avid. He made several vigorous speeches during last February's general election campaign.

In industry, Taylor is well known for his insistence of profit-sharing. He carried the idea into practice in his own company, which in Taylor's time has shared some £2,000,000 ($6,200,000) among employees apart from their ordinary earning.

Congratulations to Taylor mark a pleasant phase in what has already been tagged the "uneasy recess". The Commons adjourned last week and members are not scheduled to return until mid-October but many fear that international events may bring them hurrying back to a special assembly.

Relief in Sight For Asthmatics

When is a dachshund not a dachshund? When he is a guinea pig. And this is good news for asthma and hay fever victims. In case none of this makes sense, here is the explanation.

The asthmatic dachshund was brought to the offices of a chemical firm in London, where he was treated, with "highly satisfactory results," with Asmaton—a new inhalent currently being tested on humans at a London hospital reports a U.K. Information bulletin.

These tests are based on the new "fungus" theory. Recent research has established that asthma inhalents when exposed to the air grow a fungus, and that an identical fungus grows on the bronchi of those taking the inhalent. As long as this fungus is present the patient's condition must remain static and his chance of recovery nil.

On the other hand, it is believed that a fungicidal inhalent may give permanent relief to the hardest case. Asmaton is said to have this property and results so far obtained at the hospital are very encouraging. The inhalent has already given relief for periods of up to two years, and one interesting case is quoted of a patient suffering from both asthma and hay fever, for both of which Asmaton provided effective relief.

Paris, Aug. 2 — (AP) — American leaders have no hope of defending western Europe from a Russian attack if it comes tomorrow.

But in "X" months—there's a top secret label on the value of "X"— they believe Britain and France can be so strengthened morally and militarily that they could lead a successful stand.

The communist attack in Korea and its success have put the razor edge on American awareness of how helpless Europe would be in the face of a full Russian assault. This is the way they now paint the picture:

The Russians, according to defence minister Emanuel Shinwell of Britain could put 175 army divisions into the field tomorrow. Western Europe probably could not scrape together 15. While it might not necessarily take 175 divisions to stop 175, it would take a lot more than 15.

American rearmament of the Atlantic world is going ahead on the assumption that a third world war can be avoided. Top American policy makers are said to believe there is less danger now of a major conflict than there was two months ago.

They reason that two months ago the Russians might have thought they could edge ahead without resistance. The Korean war has shown they can expect opposition.

The fact that the Russians have not moved against western Europe seems to mean to observers here that Russia does not want a big war. If they did, they could hardly pick a better time than now.

Chinese Commies Turned Down in Offer to Help

Tokyo, Aug. 2. (AP)—Peiping radio said today that communist China had offered military and naval help to the North Korean Reds but was turned down. The broadcast was heard here.

The Korean Reds were quoted as saying help was not needed now.

Monitors in Tokyo quoted the broadcast over the official Chinese communist radio as saying:

"The communist republic of China has offered military and naval assistance to the people's republic of Korea. The People's Republic replied that assistance was unnecessary at this time."

An American intelligence officer said the broadcast was made in the Tibetan language.

FIRE UNDER CONTROL

Campbell River, B.C., Aug. 2—(CP)—A raging forest fire which threatened millions of dollars worth of standing timber 23 miles north of here, was reported under control Tuesday night. More than 250 loggers and forestry men fought the blaze as it spread rapidly through felled and bucked timber.

BR. ADMIRAL TO COMMAND

Tokyo, Aug. 2 — (Reuters) — A British Admiral will command the Canadian, French, Netherlands and New Zealand warships whose arrival in Far Eastern waters was announced Monday, it was learned today.

WAITING FOR TARGET TO APPEAR

Korean soldiers cluster around their machine-gun, which they have set up under coaching of U.S. soldiers. All eyes, except those of the sleeping warrior in background, are focussed on targets on the other side of the lake from which activity can be seen in the form of a cloud of white smoke billowing toward the hilltops. — Central Press Canadian.

CHAPLAIN SLAIN BY COMMUNISTS

Identified as the U.S. army chaplain who was slain by communist North Korean troops is the Rev. F. G. Felhoelter of Cincinnati, O. A member of the Franciscan Order, the unarmed chaplain had remained behind during the Kum River battle for Taejon to care for 30 wounded U.S. soldiers. It is believed that all the wounded were killed by reds. Father Felhoelter tossed a coin with another chaplain to see who would remain. He won the toss, elected to stay. — Central Press Canadian.

PC Leader Urges Participation In U.N. Action

Gravenhurst, Aug. 2 — (CP) — George Drew, national progressive Conservative leader, Tuesday urged Canadian participation in the United Nations' action in Korea.

Speaking at the third annual summer conference of the Ontario Young Progressive Conservative Association, Mr. Drew urged Canadians to close their ranks in the face of the international crisis so the country may join with other free nations against armed aggression anywhere in the world.

He said Canadian participation in the U.N. collective security program will be one of the first questions he will bring up at the next session of parliament.

"The principal of collective security against armed aggression is the real issue in Korea today," said Mr. Drew. "The threat to what we hold dear is greater today than at any time in our history, including the dark days of 1939."

He urged that a committee on National defence be set up to tell Canadians what is being bought with their money and what is being done to protect Canada.

"No one should accept the statement that 'It is not in the public interest to reveal the facts.' Day by day the government should be reporting to the people what is being done to protect their freedom. They should give the people the bad news as well as the good. They must not leave the impression that everything is all right."

Mr. Drew said the world is split by an aggressive dictatorship using communism as a method of expansion. But there was no marxian communism in Russia.

"We are dealing, not with a political ideal, but with a dream of continuing Russian expansion at the hands of men more powerful than any Czar."

He said it was a struggle "on a scale which we have never been called on to contemplate. It is a struggle for survival between two systems."

BLUFF DIDN'T WORK

Uxbridge, Aug. 2—(CP)—A 300-pound woman tried to throw her weight around in court Tuesday. Mrs. Viola Myers threatened to "sit down right here" if convicted of keeping liquor for sale. Convicted she was—but it was all a bluff. She meekly allowed herself to be led away to serve two months in jail.

CARDINAL TO OFFICIATE

Cap de la Madeleine, Que., Aug. 2—(CP) — James Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto will officiate at a pontificial high mass here Aug. 15 to mark the Roman Catholic feast of the Assumption of Mary.

TWO R.C.N. SHIPS TO SAIL AGAIN

Two destroyers of the Royal Canadian Navy Pacific command, H.M.C.S. Crescent and Crusader, are undergoing complete refits prior to re-commissioning. Crescent, name ship of her class, is due to commission early this fall, while Crusader, a sister ship, will become operational early in the spring. Both ships were built for the Royal Navy during the war and were transferred to the Royal Canadian Navy in 1945. Here, the Crescent and Crusader, at their refit jetty at Esquimalt, take on fuel from the auxiliary tanker Dundurn. — Central Press Canadian.

Bleeding Corpse Draws Thousands to View Miracle

Convent of Annaya, Lebanon—(Reuters)—The body of a saintly hermit named Father Charbel, so remarkably preserved after 52 years' burial that it is said to still perspire and bleed, is drawing tens of thousands of pilgrims to this lonely convent.

In the last few weeks, hundreds of people are said to have been cured here of diseases which had baffled surgeons and physicians.

Up the narrow mountain track leading to the building perched 3,600 feet up in the Lebanese hills, a long procession of buses, taxis and cars now winds where previously there was almost no traffic except donkey carts.

Many of the pilgrims, making the 40-mile trek from Beirut and other centres all over the middle east, are Moslems and Druses.

Although Father Charbel was a member of the Catholic Maronite community, his fame as a miracle worker has spread far and wide in this part of the world.

A man of an austere and devout life, Father Charbel died on Christmas eve, 1898, and was buried in the convent here where he had led a solitary life of meditation and prayer.

Even before his death, he was credited with the performance of miracles. On one occasion, he is said to have saved the monastery crops from a plague of grasshoppers by sprinkling the fields with holy water.

After the hermit's death, legands of his remarkable life became so current that his body was disinterred for burial in a more honored place. It was found to be perfectly preserved.

At subsequent intervals, the body was re-examined but despite the passage of time it never appeared to have been dead for more than a short time. Doctors who examined Father Charbel's remains confessed they were mystified.

In 1928, the body was sealed in its present tomb, which was left intact until February 1950 when water was seen to be trickling from it.

Anxious to see that no damage was done to the hermit's remains, the monks then reopened the tomb. They found that the only water in the tomb was the sweat on the holy man's brow.

Moreover, the body was still in a perfect state of preservation.

When the perspiration was wiped off Father Charbel's face more appeared in its place. When the skin was scratched, there was a flow of blood, it is reported.

As news of this remarkable phenomenon reached the nearby villages, sick people flocked to visit the tomb and pray for help.

Many of them were reported cured of longstanding and grave disabilities. Cripples threw away their crutches and walked, paralytics regained control of their limbs and the blind were able to see.

STIRLING

Clarence Fitchett Elected President Of Agricultural Society

Stirling—Last Thursday night a meeting of the Stirling Agriculture Society was held when Clarence Fitchett was elected president, succeeding Ray Shortt who had tendered his resignation after serving the society in this capacity for two years.

As a result of Mr. Fitchett's elevation to the president's chair, Don Campbell becomes 1st vice-president and Harold Detlor was chosen for the office of 2nd vice-president. E. D. Ketcheson is the secretary and Ewart Bailey, treasurer.

Plans are underway for the annual fall fair, September 15th and 16th., and weekly meetings will be held on each Tuesday from now until fair time. PPresident Fitchett and his executive are asking the co-operation of the citizens of Stirling and community in their efforts to make Stirling Fair bigger and better in 1950 and invite all interested in the fair to attend their weekly meetings. Any assistance or suggestions as to how to better the fair will be gladly accepted and greatly appreciated.

Fall Fair

At a recent meeting of the directors, plans were made for the annual canvass for donations in support of the fair and teams were chosen to cover the various districts as follows:

Stirling Village: Charles Vance and Charles Davidson.

Mount Pleasant District: Kenneth Weaver and Carlton Potts.

River Valley District: Fred McDonald and H. Morrow.

A feature of the program will be the tractor rodeo sponsored by the Hastings County Junior Farmers. The various committees are active and expectations are that this year's fair will be the best Stirling has seen in many years.

LAYING MINES UNDER SNIPER FIRE

Keeping their rifles handy, U.S. First Cavalry engineers prepare a warm welcome for North Korean forces as they ease a "daisy chain" of land mines across a bridge near Yongdong. The men crouch low as they work, keeping a sharp lookout for red snipers who may be lurking in buildings near the river crossing. — Central Press Canadian.

Hospital Chain Serves Villages in Newfoundland

St. John's Nfld.—(CP) — The doctor's little black bag is appearing in Newfoundland's remote settlements.

A chain of "cottage hospitals", designed to provide medical assistance at low cost to fishermen and loggers around the craggy coasts, is nearing completion.

The scheme began in 1935, when the old commission of government saw the great need for better health services in the island. Embarking on a vigorous scheme of construction the government built and equipped eight hospitals by the end of 1937.

Today there are 14 hospitals, each fully equipped and so located to provide complete medical service for every nook and cranny of the island. Sites for two more hospitals have been selected and construction will begin shortly.

Aded to that there are five nursing stations 14 dispensaries, and five health boats.

Cost of the system to the fishermen of any area is $10 a year, and for this he and his family get all medical attention required. Nursing services, doctors, medicines all are provided, and if necessary, a patient may be transported to St. John's, or to Montreal at no extra cost.

$10 Fee

The $10 fee does not cover the whole cost of the system. The remainder is made up out of government revenues.

Health services have come a long way in northern Newfoundland.

The story is told of Sir Wilfred's first trip to Newfoundland. His boat pulled into a small cove, and a man pulled himself aboard dragging a useless leg behind him. The cripple had suffered a dislocated hip as a child and no doctor had been available. Now he was beyond medical help.

With the network of cottage hospitals now encircling Newfoundland, that kind of thing no longer happens.

Old Man Weather Pretty Unpopular Around Circuit

By The Canadian Press

Old Man Weather is pretty unpopular around the Intercounty Senior Baseball circuit.

Rain halted the second of the league's all-star series Tuesday after 4 1-2 innings of play. It was announced after the game that the rest of the series had been cancelled.

Why? Rain again.

Rain during earlier weeks caused so many postponements the league schedule is now too tight to permit any exhibition contests.

What there was of the series gave a definite edge to the league's Canadian players. The Canadian All-Stars were leading the Americans 3-0 in Tuesday's game, and won the first game in the series 6-4.

That rain might conceivably have stopped a no-hitter for the Canadian pitchers. Billy Gibbs and Lefty Allen of the Canucks had blanked the Americans on no hits when the game was called. Their mates had knocked out 10 safeties off Jerry Hamm and Bob Witcher.

In the Niagara District Senior circuit, St. Catharines Stags knocked off the league-leading Welland Stokes 7-6 in Welland. Stokes outhit St. Kitts 13-8, but Stoke hurler Danny Patakfalvi was plagued with numerous fielding blunders on the part of his mates.

Niagara Falls Fords edged out North Tonawanda Dodgers 3-2 in 10 innings at Niagara Falls. Ford pitcher Gord Johnson and Ranocki of Dodgers hooked up in a fine duel, with Johnson, who allowed five hits, the winner.

New Toronto Simpson Fords of the Viaduct major loop piled up an early lead and went on to trounce Ace Bowling Centre 7-4 in Toronto. Russ Enright scored his sixth win with a seven-hitter for Fords.

In the second-half of a twin bill, Toronto Staffords whipped Toronto Dovers 6-2 behind impressive relief pitching by young Bill Ellis. A five-run inning featured the Stafford win.

Picton, Napanee Win in Tourney, Batawa Loses

The last shall be first adage proved itself at least temporarily in the Eastern Ontario Baseball Tournament which opened in Kingston last night.

The cellar-dwelling Picton Athletics took the COBL leaders Kingston Disney Leafs into camp by an 8-4 score in what is said to be an upset.

The Smiths Falls Royals shut out the Batawa Shoemen by a 3-0 count and the Brockville Memos defeated the Gananoque team by a 9-5 score.

Last year's tournament champions the Napanee Athletics started off on the right foot with a 5-3 victory over the highly touted Kingston Monarchs.

Eight games will be played in the tournament today which got under way at one o'clock.

Cannifton Takes Napanee to Tie For Fourth Slot

The Cannifton Clippers leaped into the playoff limelight at the Fair Grounds last night when they defeated the Napanee entry in the Belleville and District Baseball League by a 10-7 score.

The Cannifton victory puts them in a tie with Napanee for fourth place in the league standing and the playoff game will be played in Napanee tonight.

When the fourth place slot is settled, playoffs will get under way immediately, according to league president Jack Carson.

Stephens Adamson Trounced 12-2 By Plumbers

Stephens Adamson after five innings of topflight ball last evening came apart at the seams as the front running Howe and Hagerman squad, temporarily halted, roared on to a lopsided 12-2 win.

The Plumbers punched over their first run in the third inning with a single by Doyle scoring Rollins, who had doubled with two away. They added another in the third on a single by Don Adams and an error to the shortstop.

Stephens Adamson missed two runs in the second frame when pitcher Grant Wright hammered two successive balls with a man on that went foul by inches. He struck out finally.

In the sixth the Plumbers pulled out all stops as the SACO defence came apart. They pushed over five runs on doubles by Don Adams Harry Wardhaugh, Ed. Donovan, and Stan Amo and singles by Cliff Doyle Bill Spafford and John Bawden. Two costly errors added to the carnage. Howe and Hagerman punched over two runs in the eighth with Frank Donovan tripling with two away to score Marty Fitzgibbon who had singled. Rollins double scored Donovan.

Three In Ninth

In the ninth the Plumbers pushed over their final three runs on two errors, a walk, and a single by Marty Fitzgibbon.

Stephens Adamson collected their two runs in the eighth inning on a double by Truman, a walk, and two errors.

Grant Wright went all the way for Stephens Adamson in front of a porous, but improving defence, walking three, whiffing one, and being tagged for 18 hits and a dozen runs.

John Bawden won his first game of the season for Howe and Hagerman in going the route. He walked four, struck out six, and scattered three hits for two runs.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, Aug. 2 — (AP) — Uncle Mike Jacobs says that if Joe Louis can make a comeback, he can, too, and that he expects to be right in there juggling the tickets if Joe fights Ezzard Charles in September.

Mike explains that when he "retired" because of serious illness a few years back he retained, as a sort of afterthought, a vested interest in any fights Louis might undertake in his declining years. Mike says he has a contract to prove it.

The International Boxing Corporation, which hopes to carve the Louis-Charles melon, can't seem to recall any such contract with the old ticket wizard. A spokesman for the cartel said he was almost certain no such document existed.

"Would you," he was asked, "like to bet that, if Mike says he has a contract, that he doesn't have one? Can you recall Mike having made any serious legal fumbles over the years?"

"Well, no, when you put it that way," the spokesman replied thoughtfully. "All I'll say is that I can't imagine Uncle Mike handling the ticket sale personally — running up and down those steps the way he used to."

Diamod Blues

New York writers travelling with the Yankees report, in sorrow, that Joe Dimaggio is "sulking like a sophomore" because of his removal from the clean-up spot in the batting order. Old Jawn Mize has been hitting fourth for the champions in most games since July 21.

"No one denies this great player the right of his pride," comments Joe Trimble of the News, "but he is carrying things too far when he refuses to talk to the manager, curtly cuts newspaper men who have been his friends for years and maintains a stony silence toward all but a few of his teammates."

Flatbush Gossip

The Dodgers are caught in a switch on Rex Barney, the meteoric young man who hurled a no-hit game only two seasons ago.

He apparently has gone to pieces, his confidence shot along with his control. Of the last seven batters he has faced, six drew walks and the seventh hit a home run.

The National League champs are raid to be giving him up on him, but if Branch Rickey finally makes the big decision he will have to let him go for the waiver price of $10,000. He could have picked up a quick $75,000 for the speedballer less than two months ago.

WOOLER

Many Attend Way Family Reunion; Hear History of Clan

Wooler—Members of the Way family, descendants of Daniel Way, John Way and third cousin Daniel B. Way, who setled in P.E.I. County about 1800, gathered at the park in Wellington, on Wednesday, for their 15th reunion.

Tables were spread in the shade of the tall trees and at 1.30 all sat down to a sumptuous picnic dinner after grace had been sung.

After a time spent in visiting and renewing acquaintances, the vice-president, Mrs. Harold Pitcher, of Frankford, called the gathering to order for the business and program.

Mr. Glenn C. Way of Niagara Fall, N.Y., the family historian, paid a fitting tribute to Mr. Arnold D. Way of Picton, president for several years, whose death occurred in April. Mr. Way continued by giving an address on the three pioneers of the family who settled near Northport, explaining how all are related. For 25 years, Mr. Way has been studying the history of this family and has the names of thousands, scattered throughout the United States and Canada.

The 1951 reunion will be held in Wellington on the third Wednesday in August. It was thought a later date might be more convenient for the farmers.

Souvenirs were distributed as follows: Oldest gentleman, Dr. Norman Price, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; oldest lady, Mrs. Norman Price, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; youngest person, Brian Harder, Belleville; from the longest distance, Mrs. Florence Claflin, N. Ronalton, Ohio; oldest married couple, Dr. and Mrs. Norman Price, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; girl's race, Marilyn Way, Picton; boy's race, Billy Way, Belleville; backward race, Mrs. J. B. Harder, Belleville; inexpensive gifts were given to all the other children present.

Letters were received from Mrs. Alice Hayden, Mentor, O.; Mrs. F. Whatman, Toronto; Mrs. M. E. Way, Deseronto; Miss Edith Arnold, Barrie and others expressing their regrets at being unable to attend and extending their good wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Clancy entertained over the weekend in their honor, Mr. Arthur Ketta, Mrs. Ketta and family, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Clancy, Madoc Junction, and Mr. and Mrs. George Snarr, Hoard's Station.

READY FOR TIP TOPS!

Members of the Belleville Optimist Club, that up-and-coming youthful service organization of the city have completed arrangements for the softball classic of the current season slated for the Exhibition Grounds tomorrow night when the world champion Tip Top Tailors meet an all-star team of city players. This is the first venture in sport of the optimistic Optimists and they are looking forward to a generous response of the sports-loving public to their initial athletic effort. In the taking over of Optimist (nee Zwicks) Island the budding young service clubmen have a task that will demand their strongest efforts, but with their youth and wim and wigor plus the co-operation of the public they feel they are equal to any emergency that may arise. And this corner agrees with them.

The game tomorrow night will give softball lovers and other sports enthusiasts of the city their first glimpse of world champion softball, "as she is played". Brilliant stars of the Canadian diamonds, a team that swept aside all American opposition last year to annex the first world championship for Canada, the Tip Tops boast a starry array of softball luminaries that bid fair to annex their second world's title this year. With the incomparable Charlie Justice, famous Negro hurling star on the mound and such internationally famous players as Eddie Geraldi, Joe Spring, Lennie Gaull, Art. Upper, Goody Rosen, Bobbie Dear, Roy Palmeri, Percy McConner, Billy Imray and others in action Belleville and district fans will witness a rare spectacle of the diamond.

Justice is a one-man show in himself besides being one of the world's best softball flingers. He is a trick hurler, when he wants to be and what he can do with a softball, well — you have to see it to believe it. He is a diamond comedian, one that can get the fans into paroxyms of laughter with his Al. Schacht antics (That Smiths Falls scribe should see Justice do his stuff).

Cy Barriage, manager of the Belleville All-Stars and his coach Herbie Henn have lined up the strongest Commercial League team possible and they are going all-out to give the famous opposition a run for the money. The line-ups of both teams appear in another page of this edition. The game is easily the epic of the current softball season, and the fans should not miss it. They will not only have the opportunity to attend an outstanding sports spectacle but at the same time be extending a helping hand to a thoroughly - deserving service club, the Optimists.

POSTPONED INDEFINITELY

The Belleville Motor Car - Bakelite softball game, rained out Monday evening has been washed out indefinitely it was learned late yesterday. Originally scheduled for Monday and later postponed until this evening, the game got the complete heave ho when it was learned that the Northern Electric Ladies team would be meeting the Oshawa Westmounts at the Alemite Field tonight and not a week from tonight as originally reported.

Holidays at the Bakelite plant next week makes it impossible for the coach and manager to field a team as most of their players are slated to begin their holidays Saturday afternoon to take advantage of the long weekend in getting away to cottages and so forth.

For these reasons the game has been indefinitely postponed.

GALS PLAY TONIGHT!

The sports playoff gods who in reverse do not "grind slowly but surely", but are liable to pop off steam at any moment have done it again. Chuck Barriage, recently appointed coach of the Northern Electric Ladies softball team which won its section of the Lakeshore Ladies Softball League, received word out of a blue sky from the league powers-that-be that his team must play the Oshawa Westwoods here tonight at seven o'clock. Jerry Mahoney rounded up the gals and has completed arrangements so the game goes on. It should be quite a test for the Northern lassies as the Oshawa gals are rated highly in their own bailiwick. The Northerns won their section handily and have improved steadily all season. While the quality of the Westwoods is unknown they will be a tough team to beat, but the Northerns will give them a battle. So how about getting out and giving the gals a hand. Game at 7 p. m. tonight.

TROPHY DEFENDERS

The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club rink of Claude D. Tice, Gordon Vince, Percy Graham and J. W. Davidson which won the coveted Benedict-Proctor Trophy for mens' rinks at Trenton last year, journeyed to the neighboring town today in defence of their title. A full draw for the ten greens was on hand and rivalry was keen. Four other Belleville rinks took part in the tournaments.

Senior 'A' Loop May Fold Unless Cataracts Come in

Toronto, Aug. 2 — (CP) — Fears were expressed today that the Ontario Hockey Association senior A circuit — home of Toronto's Allan Cup-holding Marlboros — may fold this year unless Niagara Falls fields a team.

The Falls will decide this week if it is to enter the circuit.

Unless it decides to come in, it is understood the Kitchener-Waterloo entry may drop out and that probably would mean the loss of Owen Sound Mercurys, leaving only Toronto and Hamilton Tigers in the league.

"Obviously we couldn't operate a two-team league," said Toronto president Harold Ballard last night.

The Kitchener club already is experiencing arena difficulties. It must play in the Waterloo arena seating only 2,200 people.

Mr. Ballard said the entry of the two clubs into the Quebec Senior Hockey League hasn't been considered but that Hamilton Tigers said their arena isn't big enough "to pay the freight for Quebec League standards."

Heavy Stickwork by Wertz Helps Keep Detroit Tigers Atop American League Race

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The sensational stickwork of Vic Wertz is keeping Detroit Tigers on top—by one game — in the pulse-pounding American League pennant race.

Wertz' big bat has accounted for four Detroit triumphs in the Tigers' current home stand. Rival pitchers consider it a moral victory if they can get him out just once a game.

Tommy Byrne, an old Tiger tamer, found the feat impossible last night. As a result the southpaw lost his first game of the season to the Tigers, who went on to whip New York Yankees 7-3 in the first of an all-important three-game series.

Wertz hammered two home runs and a single and drew a walk in four times at bat, to drive in three runs. The round-trippers gave him seven homers in five consecutive games. That tied a record set by Babe Ruth in 1921 and equalled by Jim Bottomley of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1929.

He's been retired only four times in his last 24 times at bat. During that torrid hitting streak, he's walloped four doubles and two singles besides his homers and walked seven times. That's a phenomenal .764 batting average. No wonder he's way up there now with 22 homers, 97 runs batted in and a highly-respectable .319 batting mark.

The Tigers' triumph was tempered by an injury to Art Houtteman, Detroit's ace righthander who came up with a sore side muscle an hour before he was due to pitch yesterday.

Dizzy Trout, a last-minute pitching replacement, turned back the Yankees with six hits. He was behind only once when he served a two-run homer to Johnny Mize in the sixth. That gave the Yankees a short-lived 3-2 advantage. The Tigers roared back with five runs in the half of the sixth.

Game of Second Place

Cleveland's third-place Indians shot to within a game of second when when they defeated Washington 8-2. Early Wynn spaced 10 hits for his 11th victory. Jim Hegan paced the Tribe's 11-hit attack with a double, triple and home run.

The fourth-place Boston Red Sox whipped St. Louis Browns 7-3. Mel Parnell went the route for his eighth triumph.

The National League race tightened a little when Brooklyn swept two games from Pittsburgh, 21-12 and 3-1 to close within 3½ of the pace-setting Philadelphia Phils who split a pair with Cincinnati, winning the first 6-4 and losing the second 4-1.

The Cardinals regained second place, three games off the pace, thrashing Boston Braves 6-1. The defeat dropped the Braves into fourth place, one percentage point behind Brooklyn.

Del Ennis smashed his fifth homer in six games and drove in two more tallies with a single to pace the Phils to their first-game triumph as rookie Bob Miller notched his 10th win. Ewell Blackwell gave the Reds an even break with a four-hitter in the nightcap.

It took the Dodgers five weeks to get their June 24 victory over Pittsburgh in the official records. But they did it last night when they concluded the suspended game prior to playing their regularly scheduled one. Added two more runs for a total of 21 runs and 25 hits. Preacher Roe was credited with his 14th win in that one.

Springfield Cubs Two Games Out Of Playoff Spot

(By The Associated Press)

Stan Hack's Springfield Cubs are making a spirited bid for fourth place in the International League—the final qualifying position for the post-season playoffs, now less than 1 1-2 months away.

The Cubs, an in-and-out team all season, climbed to within two games of fourth-place Jersey City last night by sweeping a double-header from Buffalo 5-. and 3-1.

Bill Voiselle, seeking to return to the big leagues, stopped Buffalo on three hits on the nightcap. It was his third victory against one setback.

Jersey City, meanwhile, slipped past Montreal 2-1, when a fumble by Walt Fiala, Montreal's second baseman, in the ninth allowed Ziggy Jasinski to score the winning run. Andy Tomasic was the winner, Al Epperly the loser.

Baltimore edged closer to the league-leading Rochester Red Wings by sweeping a doubleheader from Toronto 5-4 and 1-0 while Red Wings dropped a 12-6 slugfest to Syracuse. Rochester's lead now is four games.

Flat Racing Under Lights For First Time

Scarborough, Me., Aug. 2 (AP)—Flat horse racing goes under the floodlights here tonight for the first time in the east.

Scarborough Downs' management switched to the arcs in the hope of increasing attendance which had not been up to expectations.

Only Fairmount Park, a half mile track near St. Louis, now races under the lights. Representatives of at least seven other tracks will be here to observe the initial "after dark" racing.

An increase in attendance and pari mutuel receipts at Scarborough could set the pattern for a general change-over in line with that made by baseball, harness racing and greyhound racing.

Toughie Fred Atkins, who snarled his way to the dressing room after defeat at the hands of Yukon Eric and Referee Bunny Dunlop last week, will be back again Friday night in Memorial Arena. And he'll have a tough nut to crack in rugged Seli Samara, popular African heavyweight who is a favorite with local fandom. Atkins has a long memory and Friday's brawl should produce some fancy fireworks. Well known Warren Bockwinkle is back again, this time clashing with roughie Abe Zvonkin who gave Toar Morgan a going-over last week. In the opener, egad, is another Masked Marvel who is making his Belleville début against Jack Moore.

REJECT MEMBERS

San Francisco, Aug 2 (AP) — The coast guard has rejected two seafarers as bad security risks on the new west coast check being made on ship's crews. One was a cook—a member of the C.I.O. Marine Cooks and Stewards' Union, officials said. The other wasn't identified.

Patrick Promises Rougher Play For Boston Bruins

Boston, Aug. 2 — (CP) —Hockey fans can expect a different style of play by Boston Bruins next season—rougher with a tighter defence.

That was the word from Lynn Patrick, the newly-appointed Bruin coach who is being groomed to become general manager, when he arrived here yesterday.

Lynn said he would "probably change the wide-open style because you have too many goals scored against you."

"I like it a little rougher," the former New York Ranger said, "not roughness that draws penalties. I don't condone tripping penalties or slashing penalties, they are senseless. But if rough checking draws a penalty that's worth taking a chance on."

Patrick conferred with general manager Art Ross, director Frank Ryan and writers who were told by Ross that Patrick was a permanent member of the Boston organization.

"He'll coach for two years and then be succeeded on the bench by Milt Schmidt. Lynn will come in here in this office."

Ross responded to a direct question by saying Patrick would be groomed to succeed him.

"And Schmiddy deserves the chance to coach the club," said Ross. "But he can't do it while he's playing and we think he has two more years of good play in him."

"He and Lynn can work together through the next two seasons and by then both should be able to move."

Getting Same Opportunity

Patrick, who coached New York Rangers into the Stanley Cup finals last season, had resigned to move to Victoria with his father Lester, a noted hockey figure.

At Victoria he was going to coach his father's club, Victoria Cougars, and learn the business end.

"I'm getting the same opportunity here in the big league. It's too good to pass up and it's been my ambition to get ahead in hockey. I don't want to be a coach all my life."

Schmidt came to the Bruins in 1936 and after a year in Providence, then a Boston farm, returned to Boston and has played with them since except for three years in the Canadian armed forces.

He has been captain of the Bruins for several seasons. He and Porky Dumart and Bobby Dauer came from their native Kitchener, Ont., together and formed one of Boston's best lines, known variously as the "Krauts" and "The Kitchener Kids."

MCFATER GETS DRAW

Montreal, Aug. 2 — (CP) — Alan McFater of Toronto and Jean Richard of Montreal — both lightweights — last night fought to a 10-round draw in one of two main boxing card events.

In the other main event, Armand Savoie of Montreal kayoed Archie Goodbe of Hartford, Conn., in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round lightweight event.

AT THE McCARTHY — Wanda Hendrix is held captive by Audie Murphy and Dean Jagger in a lonely mountain cabin in this high-light scene from Universal-International's Technicolor western, "Sierra," opening today at the McCarthy Theatre. The new film is Jagger's first screen appearance following his being named the best supporting actor of 1949 for his "Oscar" winning performance in "Twelve O'Clock High."

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Aunt Bess treats me now like a stranger and calls me a dog in the manger. And simply because I favor the clause: A singleton lead is a danger.

Leads follow the order of choice in tops, longies, shorts. The preferred lead is a top. Second choice is a long suit. A singleton is in the category of short suits, the last choice class.

A singleton lead hopes to find partner with the ace. But of the three players who may have the ace, partner is only one. The chances are two to one against partner having the ace.

If partner does not have the ace a singleton lead may wreck his best card. Meantime it loses timing in developing some suit for fast defence. Such things make a singleton lead undesirable too often.

This does not mean that a singleton lead is always a bad choice. Far be it from such. Numerous times it advances to that of a better choice. One such is when a top or long suit lead is absent.

You can thus picture the position in which to place the lead of a singleton. If something better is there to lead, do not lead your singleton. If nothing better is there, try a singleton lead.

Opponents have bid clubs and hearts before reaching a contract of four hearts. It is your opening lead from the hand shown here:

♠K 5 4 3 2
♣K 8 4 3

Lead your singleton diamond. Rule tells you why. You have no top card lead. Against a suit contract do not lead away from an ace or a king. So, refrain from leading away from your spade king.

The singleton lead thus graduates into a choice lead in this group of cards. Not because it was originally a good lead. Simply because no better lead offers itself here. Only because it finds itself the best of all the objectionable leads.

The least of a curse is when others are worse.

Movie Column

By BOB MYERS

Del Mar, Calif., Aug. 2 (AP)—At this time each summer this little hamlet by the sea wakes up and finds it is practically a suburb of Hollywood, 100 miles to the north. Celebrities come here for vacations and to bet on the horses running at the Del Mar race truck.

By morning they stroll about the beaches and private swimming pools and bask in the sun and you haven't seen anything yet until you see Al Jolson or Chico Marx in shorts.

Bing Did It

Del Mar is used to film folk, however, and can thank or censure a man named Bing Crosby for the situation. He introduced Del Mar to the stars, and vice versa, for better or worse.

The first meeting was nearly 15 years ago, when Der Bingle started his golf tournaments down here. Leading golfers competed, and after a fashion, so did his cronies from Hollywood.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma sighed a big sigh to herself, saying to pop, Thank goodness, William, I'm glad I'm not one of these dark haired women who ignore the voice of Nature by having their hair dyed blond.

I'm just as grateful as you are, my dear, pop said. I assure you if you'd been a blonde when I met you, it would of been a case of hale and farewell, and any time I see you coming up the street with yellow hair I'm going to bolt the frunt door and let you ring the door bell till you get tired and go away, he said, and ma said, Anyway, it's an entirely different matter when it comes to having a few faint strands of gray touched up lightly to blend back naturelly into Nature's original scheme. I meen in that case the principal completely alters, dont you think so, William. I meen frankly, she said.

Oh, I dont know, pop said. Anyway, if you're talking about yourself, stop worrying. I haven't even noticed any gray strands, he said, and ma said, They barely show, that's a fact. I meen only a trained eye would notice anything, but unfortunately practically all my women friends have trained eyes like hawks. Still, I told myself I wouldn't dreem of having them touched up if you had any old fashioned objections of a silly romantic nature. So speek up without fuss or feathers, William, she said.

Oh go to it, pop said. Make your will and undergo a minor color surgery, he said, and ma said, I knew you'd be reasonable, William. In fact I was so sure you'd be sensible about it that I had it attended to when I had my last hair do, she said.

Good, I'm glad to of been a little assistance, call on me any time, pop said.

Herald Accuses Stalin of Voicing Doctrine of Hate

London Aug. 2—(Reuters) — The Daily Herald today accused Prime Minister Stalin of voicing a doctrine of "hatred and suspicion" and charges the people behind the iron curtain are not allowed to read and judge what is happening in the world.

The Herald, official organ of the British Labor party, says Stalin's aim is to "scare" his countrymen into a condition of increasing "war-mindedness."

"Mr. Stalin has written an article in the Russian communist magazine, Bolshevik," the Daily Herald editorial says. "It is very revealing. It is also very depressing.

"For it preaches once again the doctrine that Soviet Russia is mortally threatened by 'capitalist encirclement.'

"It says that in order to avoid being destroyed by this encirclement Russia must strengthen 'the organs of the state, the intelligence service and the army.'

"Not until there has been a 'victory of socialism in the majority of countries' can these rules be relaxed. And, of course, by 'socialism' Stalin means communism. He certainly does not mean the democratic socialism which came to power in Britain in 1945.

"All cominform propaganda vilifies democratic socialism everywhere. And in all countries where communism seizes power the democratic socialists are marked down for rapid liquidation.

"Stalin's article shows . . that when he agreed to the United Nations charter—with its pledge 'to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and for the suppression of acts of agression'—he had his tongue in his cheek.

HOODED BANDITS

Company officials put the loss at $96,000. They said the bars are a total of 216 pounds troy weight (12 ounces to the pound). Official Canadian price for gold is $38.50 an ounce. The stolen bars would bring much more at underworld prices.

The gold had been poured yesterday and was being kept only overnight for shipment to the mint at Ottawa today.

The Coniaurum spokesman said the bandits had "darned good information" and apparently were well informed about the office layout.

Edwards, who was left sitting in a corner of the office after they bound his arms and legs, said that the men used an acetylene torch to burn the lock off the walk-in vault door and then used dynamite to blast a smaller safe containing the gold inside the vault.

Provincial Police ordered road blocks set up throughout Northern Ontario and asked police in Southern Ontario to keep a careful lookout for the getaway car, which the thieves stole from the watchman.

There is only one highway that could carry the thieves out of the north. They would have to travel along Highway No. 101 to Matheson, 44 miles east of Timmins, and from there would have to head south by Highway No. 11.

Road blocks are being set up at Swastika to the south and Hearst to the north.

The weight of the stolen gold was said to be 215 pounds.

No Description Given

Edwards could not furnish police with a description of the bandits.

"They wore some kind of dirty grey sacks over their heads," he said. "The sacks hung down over their shoulders and were tied in knots at the top of their heads."

He said two holes were cut in the sacks permitting the men to see, but that they had even blackened their eyelids to help cover up their identity.

After they had finished, one of the two robbers came back into the office and took his car keys, the watchman added.

MALIK DEFEATED

Denounces Action

The Russian Deputy Foreign Minister, somewhat pale and speaking in a husky voice, denounced the Korean action in answer to insistence of American delegate Warren R. Austin that the agenda give priority to a U. S. resolution designed to keep the Korean conflict from spreading.

Malik tried to out-manoeuvre Western Powers on the Council: First, by flatly declaring that Chinese Nationalist delegate T.F. Tsiang represented no country and was illegally at the Council table; and second, by trying to declare adopted his agenda which calls for seating the communist Chinese representative and for a "peaceful settlement" in Korea.

Quickly Challenged

Austin challenged him and he was joined quickly by Britain and France. Egypt, Ecuador and Cuba quickly chimed in with criticism of any attempt by the president of the Council to decide Council membership by his own ruling. Norway's Arne Sunde, Council president in July, challenged Malik's right to make such a rule.

Ales Bebler, Yugoslavia's delegate, said his country wanted communist China in and would vote with Russia. India's Sir Benegal N. Rau said he would vote with Russia.

That was the way they lined up—Russia, India, Yugoslavia to oust the Nationalists; the United States, Britain, France, Ecuador, Egypt, Norway, Cuba and Chinese Nationalist delegate T. F. Tsiang raising their hands against Malik's ruling.

Malik announced first the vote was seven votes "plus the vote of the Kuomintang group" against three and drew an angry challenge from Austin, who demanded a "truthful" announcement of the vote.

Eight Votes Against

Malik said his announcement meant eight votes against the chair. Austin withdrew his challenge.

The Russian chief delegate repeated several times that the action in keeping Tsiang seated was illegal. When Tsiang asked for the floor, Malik did not acknowledge him by name or country. He uttered a brief, questioning "Yes?", but allowed Tsiang to say that "My right to be here as a representative of a government elected by the people is beyond dispute."

Malik even replied acidly: "The president is allowed to have his opinion. That is my answer to ignorant things from the mouth of the speaker."

FRUIT HARVEST POOR, VEGETABLES GOOD

Fruit crop of many parts of Canada, particularly the Niagara Peninsula in Southern Ontario, is below normal this year with peaches, cherries, plums and apples showing the effects of an unseasonable spring. Garden vegetable crops, however, planted after the cold weather are better than average. The pickers, top, have to hunt among the leaves to find even a few peaches but the gardeners, above have their work waiting for them in over-abundance. — Central Press Canadian.

Following his meetings with the Chinese leader, MacArthur said plans had been made to co-ordinate American and Chinese forces "the better to meet any attack which a hostile force might be foolish enough to attempt." He thus presented the United States and Nationalist China as being, in effect, allies against a common foe.

Agree on Foundation

Chiang himself subsequently announced that MacArthur and he had agreed on the foundation of the defence of the island. Chiang had offered 33,000 troops to fight with the United Nations forces in Korea, but MacArthur turned that down as possibly jeopardizing the defence of Formosa.

Last January Truman declared a hands-off policy toward Formosa, announcing that no military aid of any kind would be furnished. The announcement followed a decision by the administration, that from a strategic point of view Formosa was not worth American military involvement to save it from conquest by the Chinese communists.

Immediately after the surprise communist attack on South Korea, however, the president drastically modified this policy. He ordered the United 7th fleet to guard Formosa against a communist attack, on the ground that the outright aggression in Korea made it necessary to safeguard other non-communist areas of the Far East.

Board Rejects Guild's Request For More Money

Toronto, Aug. 2 — (CP) — A conciliation board has rejected a request by the Toronto Newspaper Guild (C. I. O.) for wage increases for editorial employees of the Toronto Daily Star.

Labor Minister Daley of Ontario made public Tuesday the text of a report by the board, headed by Judge Harold E. Fuller of Welland. Neither party is obliged to accept it.

Reduction of the work week from 40 to 37½ hours starting Sept. 1, 1951, and three weeks' vacation after 20 years' service were recommended by Judge Fuller; by the company nominee, E. MacAuley Dillon, and by the Guild nominee, Roger Irwin.

Judge Fuller and Mr. Dillon said in a majority report they found no justification for the wage boost asked by the Guild—ranging from $22.50 a week for desk men to $40 a week for senior editors. They said, however, that consideration might be given to the fact that the cost-of-living index has risen 5-8 per cent since the first Star-Guild contract was signed last year.

Mr. Irwin said in a minority report he had no hesitation in recommending a blanket wage increase of 10 per cent.

The present minimum wage scale for employees with at least five years' experience ranged from $80 a week for reporters to $110 for senior editors.

Prisoner Makes Escape But Soon Recaptured

Ansonville, Aug. 2 — (CP) — A prisoner, using only his bare hands, tore his way to freedom through the walls of the police lockup in this Northern Ontario town Monday.

He was arrested three hours later in nearby Timmins.

George Archambault, 29-year-old painter, ripped tongue-and-groove boards from a boarded-up air grate to make his escape. It took him less than 90 minutes.

Archambault was arrested earlier Monday on a charge of assaulting his wife. He was locked up at 5.20 p. m., and when police returned at 6.55 he had vanished, leaving behind a foot-square hole in the wall.

Police traced his escape to a taxi firm nearby, where he had hired a cab. They alerted police in Haileybury, Kirkland Lake, Cochrane and Timmins.

Timmins police arrested him outside a hotel. He was held in Timmins until secure quarters were found in Ansonville.

An additional charge of illegal escape was laid against him.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

"But Fred," Faith protested. "Fred isn't staying with you. I mean," she floundered a little, then came out with what was in her mind, "I mean, they aren't together. It's almost as if they had separated, Jenny, and people are bound to talk. You know that."

"Yes, I know." Jenny's voice was weary. How well she knew that people would talk! Already she was beginning to dread her excursions to the village stores. Too often she had been stopped by some inquisitive woman and put through a gruelling interrogation. It was getting worse every day, and Jenny, who had loved the chore of food buying, who had chosen her vegetables and fruit with care, was snatching anything at all from the counters, paying for it and leaving as quickly as she could, simply to avoid the avid curiosity of the women who stopped to talk with her.

She said now, "Perhaps they'll be able to work out some solution, so that they can live in their house and Diane can go on with her work." She said it without much hope. She knew Di too well. If housekeeping had been too much for her before she left Fred, it would certainly be beyond her now that she was breaking into the modeling profession.

She had sat where she could see her own house during her talk with Faith, but she had long since forgotten to watch the front walk so that she would know when Fred had left. She did want those two to have their talk together alone. Now she felt that enough time had surely elapsed, and she rose to go. "I'm going to polish the silver," she announced, "and I'd better get started."

Faith stood on the back stoop and watched her across the lot. "Don't wait so long again," she called after her. "You've been neglecting your friends!"

Jenny had to admit it was true. She had neglected them, and even this little talk with Faith had cheered her. She would not let herself get so involved with her own family and household again, she resolved, going into the kitchen, and starting to gather her cleaning materials together. Suddenly she stopped. There were voices in the living room. Had someone come to call while she had been out? She went quietly toward the front of the house, peered into the doorway, and stopped dead with surprise.

Fred and Diane sat side by side on the couch. Di's golden head rested on her husband's shoulder, one lovely hand was curved around his neck. It was their hushed talk that Jenny had heard.

She went back to the kitchen, but she did not clean the silver that morning. A great load seemed to have been lifted from her spirit, and she wanted to sing. She sat quietly, her lovely blue eyes shining with pleasure, and waited.

It was not long before Diane came out to her. She stood in the doorway, her tall body, as always, falling into an unconsciously graceful pose. Her face was delicately flushed.

"I'm going home with Fred," she said slowly, almost hesitantly. "He—we've been talking things over, trying to—to work out a solution."

Jenny jumped to her feet, caught he sister in a bear hug of relief. "Oh, I'm so glad!" she cried.

"So am I," Diane acknowledged. "It's been horrible, loving him and wanting him, and yet knowing that I couldn't stand things the way they had been before. But now—" she turned suddenly. "I'll go up and pack," she ended.

Jenny found Fred pacing up and down the living room. A new Fred who no longer strode like a caged animal, but joyously. He caught at her hands as she came in. "I have a hunch this was largely your doing," he said, his eyes thanking her.

Jenny shook her head. "No," she said seriously, "not mine. You see, when Diane was married and living in her own house, she kept thinking of how much easier her life had been when she was single. Yet when she tried to come back to single life, she couldn't. She had forgotten that the experience of marriage was one she couldn't put aside. And so she wanted both. She finally learned that she would have to choose between them."

Fred said, with a wry smile, "I'm not sure that she has chosen, Jenny. I'm not sure, but she's going to get both."

Jenny looked at him, startled. "What do you mean? Isn't she—"

"Oh, yes, she's coming back to me, but we've worked out a plan whereby she'll have a husband and a career too."

"You mean," Jenny faltered, "that she's not going to give up her modeling?"

'Perhaps she would have," Fred said slowly. "Perhaps she would have made the choice if I had not been so eager to get her back. It may be my fault that there's going to be this compromise." He looked thoughtful. "You see, I didn't even wait to find out if she would have come back on the old footing. I offered her a new plan right away."

Jenny sat down. Some of the happiness and relief had already left her. She could not help feeling a certain misgiving. "Tell me about it."

"No," Jenny smiled, "but she could learn. Any woman can."

"Any woman can if she wants to," Fred corrected her. "And Di doesn't want to. Well, we'll skip that. What it comes to is this — the money I had paid her before for housekeeping and personal allowance will go now toward hiring a capable woman to take over the housekeeping end. And Di will be free to go on with her modeling work, and, of course, the money she earns will be hers. That's what we've worked out."

Jenny said, still with that feeling of mistrust, 'But, Fred, her work keeps her out till all hours sometimes. It will take her away all day. And she'll be meeting all kinds of new people, different people, whom you won't know. Aren't you afraid—" she paused a moment, and he spoke quickly.

"Afraid she'll grow away from me more and more? Yes, I am. But I'm desperate enough right now to take anything I can get to try to salvage our marriage."

And that was where they left it. Diane stayed for lunch, while Fred went back to the office; when Natalie and Brent came out of the studio, they were greeted by the announcement of the reconciliation. Neither one seemed too surprised; neither one seemed to be hopeful of its permanence, Jenny noticed. But Diane did not notice. She chattered throughout the meal unconcernedly.

"Fred says he's contacted a wonderful woman, a widow with a boy in college, who is only too anxious to earn something extra. She's going to take complete charge, and I'll be able to continue with Pruitt."

Brent, who was staying for the meal, said consideringly, "Are you actually planning to go on with this modeling business seriously, Di? Because if you do go in for it enough to make some real money, it's really tough. Even those at the top have to work hard—harder than the others, I guess — and not many of them stay at the top very long."

Diane dismissed Brent's warning about the difficulties of modeling with a wave of her perfectly manicured hand. I won't mind that kind of work," she said confidently. "Anything rather than cooking and cleaning. Housekeeping!" she made a charming move of distaste. "I hate it! The same thing over and over without ever getting anywhere. And so unpleasant!"

Brent glanced over at Jenny and raised his eyebrows with a despairing gesture. "There's no talking to a woman," he commented "She knows what she likes, and even better what she doesn't like."

"Of course I do," Di said with spirit. "You like illustrating. Suppose that just because you had married the girl you loved you had to spend your life driving a bus, or being a grocey clerk, or—or—" she searched for something preposterous, "or walking a tightrope in a circus."

They burst out laughing. Brent said, "That's the first time I've ever heard housekeeping compared to an acrobatic stunt!"

"Well," Diane defended herself, "the statistics say there are more accidents in the home than anywhere else. It is dangerous! But what I'm getting at is that simply because you marry you shouldn't have to take up a career that's distasteful to you."

"You win," he said, waving his napkin like a white flag. "I surrender. Just so long as you don't make me be a grocery clerk when I give up the single life!"

Fred came back for Diane in the early afternoon. He put her bags into the car with care, and held her arm possessively as he led her down the walk. He looked ten years younger, Jenny thought, watching them from the doorway. And Diane, too, was more relaxed and seemed happier than she had been for the entire time she had spent at her sisters' house.

Jenny said a little prayer, then went back to her work. She spied the acount book and the scratch pad she had been working on that morning when Fred came. She sat down at the desk and aranged her bills in order. Better get these straightened out, she told herself, now that peace an quiet have descended upon the household.

Not a sound came from the studio. That meant that Brent and Natalie were hard at work. A little breeze had sprung up and some dry leaves rattled across the porch sounding like the scrabbling of some small animal. Jenny closed here eyes. How peaceful it was. How quiet. How lovely.

There were determined footsteps on the porch, and the doorbeel shrilled loudly Ghillie sprang from his favorite spot under the wing chair and raced into the hallway, tring to bark and growl at the same time and achieving a horrible rattling noise.

Jenny went to the door. A youth in dungarees held out a pad for her to sign. "Special Delivery," he said. "This guy live here?"

Jenny glanced at the letter. "Mr. Brent Evans," was typed on it, and, in the upper left corner of the envelope, "Bell Advertising Agency."

She signed hurriedly, took the letter from him and ran to the studio door. There she stopped but only for an instant. This was one of the times when rules were meant to be broken. She tapped and went in.

Natalie glanced up, a frown of concentration between her winging brows. Brent did not even hear her. He was riffling through a portfolio of sketches, his lips pursed in a soundless whistle.

"Well," Natalie said in surprise, "what's happened? Is the house on fire?"

Integration Policy Will be Discussed Between Canada And U.S. in One-Day Meet

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—Integration of Canadian industry with that of the United States for the production of tanks, guns, ships, aircraft and other war goods in the event of a "major conflict" will be discussed with the United States next week, the government's industrial defence organization announced today.

A decision on integration policy between the two countries is expected to tap the flow of millions of dollars worth of United States war material orders into Canada.

The discussions will take place during the one-day meeting here Aug. 8 of the joint United States-Canada industrial mobilization planning committee.

The industrial defence officials said the meeting, important because of the outbreak of communist aggression in Korea also will discuss these matters which will affect Canadian industry in time of total war:

1. Joint Canada-United States action on requirements, priorities, allocations and export controls.

2. The change in approach adopted by the military production and supply board of the North Atlantic Treaty organization.

Direct Approach

This change in approach said officials, means the shelving of long-range, over all war equipment planning for North Atlantic nations and the more realistic, direct approach to filling the urgent requirements first.

This development in planning, decided at a recent meeting of the North Atlantic Production Board at Copenhagen, may require a reassessment of Canada-American production and supply problems, officials said.

It will mean that the United States, which is shelling out most of the cash in North Atlantic rearmament, will place an immediate order for tanks and guns if tanks and guns, for instance, are an urgent requirement of a North Atlantic Treaty nation, threatened by communist aggression.

The meeting will be closed to the public and the press.

Youth Stabbed After Fight On Freight Train

Sudbury, Aug. 3 (CP) — An 18-year-old youth was stabbed in the abdomen late Wednesday night after a fight between a farmer and three youths on a moving freight train.

Roland Company of North Bay was taken to hospital with the stab wound. George O'Connor, 36, was charged with assault. He claimed the wound was inflicted in self-defence.

Two more—Clarence Cote, 17, of the Parry Sound Indian Reservation and Donald Foster, 16, of North Bay—were charged with breaking, entering and assault.

O'Connor told police the three had ransacked his farmhouse at Romford Junction, six miles east of here, smashing furniture, stealing his clothes and plundering his icebox. He said he ran to the railway station half a mile away to telephone police and saw the three climbing on a freight train.

The farmer said he jumped onto the train after them. During a fight, he and Company fell from the train and Company was stabbed during the scuffle.

Police picked up the other two youths from the train.

Council Decides To Attempt to Ban Wearing of Shorts

Ottawa, Aug. 3 — (CP) — The suburban Eastview town council decided Wednesday to attempt to ban the wearing of shorts within its boundaries in a move that bids fair to revive Ottawa's recent controversy on the subject.

The council decided to seek an amendment to the Ottawa statutes which would enable it to pass a shorts-banning by-law. The move came after letters asking the banning of shorts were received from five Roman Catholic Church organizations in the township.

The Ottawa City council recently was beseiged with letters for and against the wearing of shorts but took no action either way.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, Aug. 3 (CP) Synopsis: Over the greater part of the province the weather is still cloudy, and in the Kirkland Lake-White River regions there is intermittent rain. The disturbance which yesterday looked as though it would move eastward into Quebec stalled over the Muskoka area for the past 24 hours is now beginning to drift slowly northeastward. Consequently improvement has been very slow. Temperatures throughout the province will continue pleasantly cool today and Friday.

HOUSE IS READY TO GIVE TRUMAN WIDE POWERS

Would Control Every Phase Economic Life

Washington, Aug. 3 (AP)—The House of Representatives appeared set today to give President Truman powers to control virtually every phase of economic life in the United States.

As demands mounted for across-the-board controls to curb inflation and provide what's needed in the Korean war, the only question was the form of the presidential powers would take.

An automatic device for invoking price-wage rationing controls—timed to set them in motion whenever the cost of living reaches a certain point—is being worked out by the Senate banking committee.

The Senate committee yesterday voted to have the controls bill include a section providing for up to a year in jail and as much as a $10,000 fine for hoarders and black marketeers.

Two broad choices confronted the House as it began the task of outlining Truman's grant of authority.

One was a Republican-backed bill offered by representative John Kunkel (Rep. Pa.). The other was an expanded administration bill rushed into the House yesterday by chairman Brent Spence (Dem. Ky) of the House banking committee.

Stand-By Authority

Both provided for stand-by authority to apply roll back controls over prices, wages and rationing as well as allocation and defence priorities. They differed on other matters, Kunkel's bill omiting Truman proposals for controls over credit and commodity trading.

A final vote is due tomorrow.

Meanwhile, there is fresh clamor for addition of an excess profits tax and new rent control authority.

It appeared improbable, however, the House would tack them on the present bill. Leaders were opposed to additional tax or rent controls now, although sentiment for them cut across party lines.

A $5,000,000,000 "downpayment" tax increase is expected to pass Congress quickly, to be followed by administration requests for still more billions in new taxes.

The Senate finance committee yesterday voted to increase the current tax bill by $55,000,000 through a 10-percent tax on television sets and home freezers and an increase from $100 to $150 in the annual tax on each slot machine.

U.S. Task Force in Daring Attack Behind Enemy Lines Gets Valuable Information

By DON WHITEHEAD

An Advanced U.S. Command Post, Korea, Aug. 3—(AP)—A U.S. battalion fought its way 22 miles behind the enemy lines, battled out again and saved a regimental command post from destruction in a savage struggle this morning.

There hasn't been anything quite like this daring adventure in all the Korean war. The officers called it "a reconnaissance in force" and it proved for the high command:

1. That the enemy line can be reached by a hard-hitting tank-led force.

2. That the enemy is building up strong forces around Chinju for the drive eastward toward Masan and Pusan, 30 airline miles farther east.

The battalion made a 36-hour forced march south to reach the jumping off place for the dash toward Chinju. After a brief rest, the push began early Wednesday.

The battalion had five Sherman tanks a battery of artillery, a platoon of heavy mortars and well armed infantry.

The tank force was under enemy machine-gun and sniper fire all the way. The Americans rode the tanks, jeeps and trucks, spraying the enemy with fire as they drove ahead.

As the Americans passed, the enemy closed in behind them on the road leading to Chinju. But the task force blazed its way deeper and deeper into enemy country.

Then the group reached the mountain passes just east of Chinju and smacked into enemy forces believed to be the main red reserve building up for a major offensive.

Fire poured down on the Americans from the hills. And the Americans left the column and went into the hills after the reds.

The leading tanks rounded a bend in the road and ran head-on into three Russian-made 70 m.m. anti-tank guns.

The guns knocked holes in the armor of two Shermans and either killed or wounded all of the gun crews. The red guns were knocked out by American infantry men who closed in on the gun crews.

The task force fought its way back, having captured enemy documents, maps and Russian-made equipment. Intelligence officers said these were important finds.

The Americans brought all their wounded and dead back with them.

Native Practice of 'Bartered Brides' Approved by Tanganyika Officials

London, Aug. 3—(CP)—A report on British administration in Tanganyika, made public today, gives an official blessing to the native practice of "bartered brides".

"It is sometimes suggested," the report says, "that the status of women could be improved by the limitation or abolition of the 'bride price' but experience has shown this is not the case."

Instead, payment of livestock, clothing or money by the bridegroom to the parents of the bride may be regarded as a parallel to the white man's payment of rings or jewelry to the woman who is to be his wife.

The payment gave marriage a social prestige the report said. In one district where the practice of "bride price" was not used, tribal elders were considering the possibility of introducing it to prevent marriages breaking up.

The report which will be presented to the United Nations, also contained a footnote on progress in Tanganyika.

"Twenty years ago," it said, "no self-respecting Kuria male would be seen without the lobes of his ears perforated and the holes distended to an enormous size."

Today, "criminal adornments are a source of ribald comment from Africans who are accustomed to them."

Belgian Cabinet Approves Bill

Brussels, Aug. 3 (Reuters) — The Belgian cabinet today approved a bill providing for the transfer of King Leopold's royal prerogatives to his 19-year-old son, Prince Baudouin.

It will probably be debated by parliament next week.

The King received foreign diplomats accredited to Belgium at Laeken Palace, still heavily guarded by troops and gendarmes. The reception was arranged shortly after the King's return from exile nearly two weeks ago, government circles said.

Dozens of pro-Leopoldists today burst into Catholic party headquarters and invaded the assembly room where the party chiefs were meeting.

Fist fights broke out. Executive members retreated into the corridors where they were pelted with eggs and tomatoes.

"You have sold us," the demonstrators cried.

PUBLIC NUISANCE

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 3 (AP)—A man alleged to own 17 dogs and 12 puppies was charged yesterday with maintaining a public nuisance. C. A. Connally's next-door neighbor, Mrs. L. W. Jameson, who raises chickens, swore out the complaint.

Drew on 5-Week European Tour

Prestwick, Scotland, Aug. 3 — (CP) — George Drew arrived by air today on the first leg of a five-week tour of Britain and the continent.

"No politics," Drew told reporters on arrival. "This is strictly a holiday visit.

The opposition leader in the Canadian Comons then went to London where he will stay for 2 days before joining his family in Italy.

Queried by British reporters about the shortage of newsprint in Britain, Drew said merely: "The stuff is in Canada if you want it."

His only other comment on Canadian affairs was that this year will see a bumper wheat harvest.

On arrival in London, Drew told reporters it is possible he will see some members of the British cabinet. He declined comment on international affairs.

PROTECT WATER SUPPLY

Dayton, O., Aug. 3 (AP)—Dayton has taken steps to protect its water supply from possible enemy bombs. Seven big water-storage tanks, holding 4,500,000 gallons of water, will be painted "grass green". The city planned to paint the tanks silver but had changed to green at the request of "security officials".

CABINET AGREED CANADA SHOULD PROVIDE FORCE

No Troops Will Go Until House Called

Ottawa, Aug. 3 — (CP) — Cabinet meets again today amid indications its ministers now are broadly agreed that Canada should provide a force of ground troops for service with the United Nations' forces in Korea.

There is no sign that any hard and fast conclusion was reached at yesterday's four-hour meeting nor is it certain that any official statement will be made at the end of its sequel today.

However, a volunteer force that would run to at least 1,000 men now appears to be likely although details would have to be worked out.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, in his late-June pre-prorogation statement, indicated that any despatch of combat strength beyond destroyer would have to have parliament's approval.

The house normally would not reassemble until January but announcement of a decision to send ground troops would probably contain a statement that parliament will be recalled several months prior to that possibly around October.

Mother Seeking Return of Child From New Parents

Toronto, Aug. 3 — (CP) — Whether the mother of a 10-week-old girl will regain custody of her child from foster parents will be decided in Ontario Supreme Court next fall.

Wednesday Mr. Justice W. F. Spence ordered trial of the case in which Mrs. Margaret Schwager, the mother, seeks return of the baby from Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hahn.

In an affidavit Mrs. Schwager said she agreed to give the baby to Mr. and Mrs. Hahn at birth because she feared she would be unable to support the child. Now she wants her daughter back.

"The child is mine and I feel that I am the person to give her complete love and affection," Mrs. Schwager said.

The Hahns will keep the child until the case goes to trial.

Warfront Maps Excited Presser

Richmond, Va., Aug. 3 — (AP) — "Please stop printing maps showing the Korean war lines of battle superimposed over this and nearby states for comparison," a letter to the Richmond News Leader said.

"My best presser left without notice for three days to get his two sisters away from Enfield, N.C., as the map showed the communists were only a few miles away."

Shortened Lines Will Give Better Chance of Defence

Contending Armies Nearly Equal in Numbers Now

Tokyo, Aug. 3 — (AP) — United States Marines and the U.S. Army's reinforcing 2nd Division troops rolled tonight into the combat area with Pershing tanks to join the intensifying battle for southeast Korea.

They were assigned to positions supporting deployed American troops who had withdrawn on some fronts up to 18 miles in three days for their big stand on shortened lines.

The lines were in the general area of the winding Naktong River, which runs in a southerly direction, flowing into the sea west of the supply port of Pusan. The defence positions were deliberately chosen by American commanders for their climactic holding action.

(Communist spearheads Thursday night were reported only eight miles west of Masan, coast town on the road to Pusan, and in a more northerly sector only 12 miles from Taegu, provincial South Korean capital, Reuters reported.)

10 Divisions Each

On the newly consolidated front American and South Korean forces face the communist armies on virtually equal terms in division strength, said Leif Erickson, Associated Press Correspondent at U.S. Eighth Army headquarters in Korea. There were five American divisions and five South Korean divisions facing an estimated nine to 10 north Korean divisions.

Erickson said, however, the United Nations units still lack enough power to embark on any real counter-offensive. He said there will soon be more carrier-based planes to help break up the long supply lines the communists now must maintain.

A build-up of enemy forces on the holding front near Chinju was observed by a U.S. 24th Infantry tank reconnaissance force. This force almost thrust back into Chinju before pulling back to American lines in the hills 40 miles west of Pusan.

On Line of Choice

Erickson said the big withdrawal of allied troops in the west and north put the defenders on a line of their choice, the Naktong river.

The fall back he said, disengaged hard-pressed American forces while the newly-arrived 2nd Infantry Division and elements of the 1st Marine Division were being involved.

Erickson said the Allied withdrawals were skilful. They conserved manpower and denied the communists an opportunity to attack during the critical time when the reinforcing 2nd Infantry and 1st Marine Division elements moved up.

These reinforcements arrived in the nick of time while a dangerous fight was going on along the perimeter around crowded Pusan.

The holding actions of the hard-hit 24th, 1st Cavalry and the 25th Divisions in the Kumchon-Pusan corridor and the long thin western front bought the needed time for the build-up of allied forces. It gave commanders time for a deliberate choice of a strong natural defence line.

The Korean communists cannot move faster than their infantry can walk. They are not expected to hit the allied lines for at least 24 hours.

Air Targets Search

Airmen generally reported they had difficulty finding targets along the Korean roads. Two days ago the communists pushed their tanks and supplies down highways in daylight. American and Australian pilots shot some of them to bits. Such targets were scarce Thursday under terrific pounding and strafing.

Pressure on South Korean troops in the north central sectors had eased noticeably Thursday. Only minor engagements were fought in the Andong - Yechon - Hamchang area.

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 3 — (CP) — A faulty brake-drum on a stolen car yesterday thwarted two bandits in what might have been the biggest gold robbery in Canadian history.

The brake drum set fire to the 16-year-old car in which the thieves fled after blasting open a safe and taking an estimated $100,000 in gold from Conlarum Mines, Ltd.

The gutted car, the gold inside, was found by police 25 miles east of here five hours after the theft. There were no signs of the robbers.

Their faces hooded and blackened with soot, they overpowered 62-year-old Bill Edwards, mine watchman. Then they cut open a vault with acetylene torches to get at three bars of gold—weighing some 216 pounds — that were awaiting shipment to the Royal Canadian Mint at Ottawa.

Threw Equipment Away

The bandits apparently threw their oxygen - acetylene equipment from the car — belonging to Edwards — just in time to prevent an explosion that might have killed them both.

Police said the bandits apparently were professional cracksmen and knew the layout of the mine.

Edwards said he was making his rounds at 3:30 a. m. when the men overpowered him, tied him up while they cut through a vault with a torch and dynamited an inner safe.

He said they walked about like "apes," apparently to foil identification.

The robbery attempt came exactly two months after three bars of gold, valued at $75,000, were stolen from Delnite, another district mine. The gold was recovered two days later, two mine employees were awaiting trial for the theft.

Northern Communities May be Isolated by Threatened Rail Strike

North Bay, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP)—The threatened strike of 125,000 Canadian Railway workers would virtually isolate about 30 small northern Ontario communities and cut off many other areas from telegraph and telephone communication, a union official said today.

R. T. Trowhill, chairman of the Telegraphers Union of the Ontario Northlands Railway, one of 17 Canadian railway unions which have threatened to strike Aug. 22 to enforce wage demands, said today "if the pinch comes it will hurt" northern Ontario communities.

An area almost 200 miles long, between Cochrane and Moosonee, and a 60-mile stretch between North Bay and Timagami, depend on rail transportation. There are no road connections and few communities in the area have lakes suitable for aircraft. The unions threaten to call out all members of non-running trades—telegraph operators, station and yard employees.

The O.N.R., owned by the Ontario government, operates telegraph and long-distance telephone services in the area north of North Bay. Trowhill said the O.N.R.'s 1,500 non-running employees would be called out, crippling telegraph and long-distance telephone communications in the area. The telephone circuits in the area are also used to transmit network radio programs.

South of North Bay the O.N.R. telephone circuits are leased from the railway by the Bell Telephone Company and would not likely be affected. It was expected non-union employees could provide only limited telegraph and telephone service during a strike.

DAMAGE LIGHT IN TWO FIRE RUNS

Firemen had one run last night to a fish and chips establishment on Front Street, where a pan of grease caught fire and caused a considerable amount of smoke, but little damage. The call came for firemen at 11.10 p.m., and they worked to confine the fire to the grease pan. Only damage was done to the ceiling, which was blackened by the smoke.

A call this morning to the home of William Telford, at 81 Frank Street, put firemen to work extinguishing a rubbish fire in the back shed. Damage again was light. The fire is believed to have been started by young boys.

POLICE CRACKING DOWN ON "SPEEDERS"

Evidence that Provincial Police are continuing to crack down on careless driving and speeding on the highways was shown in the list of charges in county court this morning. While not as large as last week's docket of 56 cases, this week the list moved just over the 30 mark.

Of the total, five charges were for speeding, two for careless driving, and three for passing, or cutting out. Others making up the list included leaving the scene of an accident, driving while under suspension and failure to give oncoming cars half of the road.

Child Injured, Crashes Into Side of Car

Four-year-old Donna Trubridge escaped serious injury in an automobile accident early last evening on Cannifton Road. She suffered a cut on the inside of her upper lip and a bruised left leg when she came into contact with a car driven by Edgar Luffman of 175 Charles Street, city.

Police said that the car was proceeding south on Cannifton Road near College Street when three children attempted to run from the west curb to the east curb. The driver attempted to miss all the children, but Donna ran into the side of the right front fender. The car skidded 35 feet in the attempt to miss the children.

The child was attended to by Dr. A. E. Miles and was later released to friends on College St. who are looking after her while her parents are holidaying in Montreal.

Also, Cannifton Road was the site of a second accident last night when a car being driven north mounted the west curb, continued over the boulevard, over the lawn at 100 Cannifton Road and struck a telephone pole. Damage to the car was limited to $25.

Police Constable Charles Lockwood investigated both accidents.

Fresh cabbage was offered at from ten cents the head with a small variety of cauliflower demanding from twenty cents upwards.

Cherry prices were stable with no change noted from Tuesday quotations. Montmorencies were offered at $1.50 the basket with blacks slightly higher. Huckleberries sold at 50 the quart and $2.25 per six-quart basket.

'Donna' Demonstrates Uncanny Ability to Retrieve Golf Balls

"Donna," a handsome Chesapeake retriever, owned by Dr. George H. Stobie, could be the answer to a golfer's prayer.

As a matter of fact, if she wanted to professionalize her retrieving talents, she could get a job any time, any where, on any golf course.

For "Donna" has a nose for golf balls.

For a golf pro she would be a convenience. For the fellow who shoots in the low nineties, she would be a time-saving pal, but for the dub she would represent at least 90 per cent of golf ball expenses.

"Donna" can be curled up fast asleep when a ball is lost. She needs no blue-print nor even a sight of the ball in flight. Just hold the ball to her dainty nuzzle, whisper "Fetch it" and before you can yell "Fore" your ball is lying at your feet.

The other night "Donna's master demonstrated her uncanny retrieving skill. He gave her the scent of the ball tossed it as far as he could into a clump of bushes led "Donna" to another door facing the opposite direction, and gave the order. She disappeared and in less than a minute, brought back the ball.

"H-mmm", remarked an unconvinced friend, "maybe she has a stock of balls hidden somewhere. Drop one by the door and see what she does."

Her master assented. He dropped a ball as requested out of sight of the dog led Donna to the opposite side of the house as before and told her to get it. She did not hesitate. Quick as a flash, she raced around the house retrieved the ball and brought it to her master.

Nope, she's not for sale, nor for hire.

Out-of-Towner Wins Major Prize At Carnival

An out-of-towner carried away the lion's share of the loot last night at the Kinsmen's carnival at Victoria Park. N. Hughes, North York, won the top attendance prize of $100, and two local people took the second and third awards.

H. Keegan of South Front St., won second place and $50 and T. Calbury, of 165 Murray St., took the third attendance prize of $25. The carnival is being run by the Kinsmen to raise money for their proposed swimming pool on Dundas St.

Crowd at the carnival last night was described by officials as being "not bad for opening night", but they have hopes that attendance will go up at the three remaining nights. Similar prizes will be offered tonight, Friday and Saturday, with a variety of games and amusements also offered.

Roslin Youth Drowns In Lake Scugog

Roslin—It was with a sense of deep shock that the many friends in this district of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Emmons learned of the death by drowning of their son, Garrett age 16 years, at Lake Scugog. The lad was visiting at a farm near the mouth of the Nonquon River in the Port Perry area, and on Saturday evening, had gone swimming with another lad.

The swimming area was a clearing between deep weeds, and the two lads were about to come ashore, when Garrett called to his friend, who went to see if he was in trouble. Apparently he was not, however, and the other lad started for shore thinking that Garrett was following. When he reached shore and discovered he was alone he returned immediately to look for Garrett, diving continuously in an effort to locate him. Help was quickly forthcoming and in a short time several boats had joined in the search, but it was several hours before the body was recovered.

Father School Teacher

Thomas Emmons, father of the lad, who teaches school at Seagrave had just started work for the summer at the General Motors plant in Oshawa and Garrett was to have started there in a few days time. His mother, who has taught at the Inman Road School for a number of years, his brother Douglas and sister Betty Ruth were in Moulton and another sister Shirley, of McMaster University, is employed for the summer at a resort in the Muskoka district. Mr. and Mrs. Emmons had been to visit her a few days before the tragedy, and Mrs. Emmons had returned to Dunnville in the meantime.

Born at Roslin

Thomas Garrett Emmons was born at Roslin, on August 2nd, 1933, but had resided in Moulton township for 14 years. He was a keen student at Dunnville High and this year had passed his Junior Matriculation. He was a member of Grace United Church and of Grace Sunday School and his quiet but pleasant nature won him a host of friends. Surviving besides his parents, one brother, Douglas and two sister, Shirley and Betty Ruth, is his grandmother, Mrs. Wellington Fitchett, of Roslin, Ontario.

The funeral, which was exceptionally largely attended, was held from his parents residence in Moulton on Tuesday afternoon, with interment in Zion Cemetery, Wainfleet. The services were conducted by Rev. E. C. McCullagh of Dunnville and Rev. J. Malcolm Johnson of Cayuga, and during the service Miss Jean Weir sang very effectively "Still Still With Thee". Mrs. Ray Kline accompanying on the piano.

Friends and relatives attended the funeral from Seagrave, Port Perry, Belleville, Roslin, Thomasburg, Toronto, Welland and Beamsville, as well as from Dunnville and district.

MAY SEND TOKEN FORCE

Paris, Aug. 3 — (AP) — French government leaders are debating sending a "token battalion" of troop to fight under the United Nations' flag in Korea, a spokesman said today.

French sources said the main obstacle to dispatching Frenchmen to Korea is France's "own dire need of military strength in Asia."

France has been fighting a guerrilla war for five years against communist-led troops in Indo-China, and has some 140,000 troops stationed there.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 3 (CP)—Selective buying pulled a handful of market leaders ahead slightly as the session progressed on the Toronto stock exchange today. Activity dropped to a trickle but key issues climbed. Volume for the first three hours was 261,000 shares.

Gains were held to fractions on the industrial board as the list pulled ahead from downward pressure of yesterday afternoon. Papers, steels, refining oils and liquors brightened while foods and constructions weakened. A few utilities were strong in early dealings but slipped in mid-session.

Base metals started lower but recovered as the session progressed. Feature of the list was Waite Amulet. Waite dropped $1.05 to $8.20 in brisk dealings following release of the semi-annual report showing a drop of more than 50 per cent in earnings compared with the first six months of 1949.

Golds brightened in mid-session on small gains by senior producers. Juniors were quiet with a few issues adding pennies.

Western oils sagged steadily.

Ham Flies When Cooker Explodes

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 3 (AP)—Something went amiss for a miss, the pot flipped its lid and the ham went wham!

Shirley Mackie, 15, was left by her mother to find the pressure cooker with instructions to turn it off when a bell rang. No bell, the cooker exploded. A steam propelled 10-pound ham smashed a hole in the ceiling, knocking a man from his chair in the room above.

The stove was wrecked, a window broken and bits of ham plastered over the walls. Firemen said if Shirley had been in the room she would have been killed.

The man upstairs was not hurt

KINDNESS COSTS NOTHING BUT IS PRICELESS

Kindness, a quantity that costs nothing, yet which is so scarce at times, seems to be paying dividends for one girl in Birmingham, Alabama. The 19-year-old girl fell from a slide in a swimming pool six weeks ago and was completely paralyzed.

For days, she lay in bed with a blank stare on her face, her will to live gone. Her eyes showed no emotion, her face was rigid. Doctors thought her hopelessly paralyzed. But her mother, who never gave up for her daughter, stayed at the bedside for sixteen hours each day in an effort to bring some vitality into the girl again.

Other people took up the battle. Gifts of food, money and clothing streamed in; telegrams, telephone calls and cards arrived. Strangers and friends together voiced encouragement, and their efforts have paid off. Just the other day, the girl smiled for the first time and raised her right hand in greeting to a clergyman.

Doctors still class her chances as slim, but her family is overjoyed. Her mother, once alone in her battle to bring a will to live back to the girl, is now convinced that the kindnesses of the people who offered encouragement helped her daughter to start her fight.

Kindness is cheap until it is needed. Then, when it is tendered, it is priceless.

NOT WORTH THE PRICE

How much is a mountain worth? Or more particularly, how much is the climb of a mountain 26,496 feet high worth? Being the type of person who gets dizzy if we walk on a deep-pile broadloom, we have no wish to get involved in any such scheme.

The point is, however, that not long ago five Frenchmen returned from a trip into the Himalayas, during which, they claim, they climbed to the top of Anapurna Peak. The peak is said to be more than 26,496 feet in the air, which is slightly more than five miles.

The climbers came off much the worse for wear. One man lost all his toes and all his fingers up to the first joints. A second lost all his toes, and the remaining three were physically exhausted as a result of the trip. The crippled men had to be carried by those who were still able to stand.

What we find incongruous about the feat is that men have reportedly climbed higher under the same conditions, which rather lessens the accomplishments of the Frenchmen. And what lessens it even more is the fact that one cannot sympathize with men who take part in such a foolish pursuit. That may seem to be a poor reason, but the fact is that if a man were to walk more than five miles along a highway in the dead of winter, succeed in freezing his toes and fingers so that he lost them, and then expect to be praised for the effort, he would be subjected to a mental examination.

As far as we're concerned, they can climb as high as they like and go as far underground as they like. We're satisfied to stay right here on the ground. In a warm place.

DEVELOP INITIATIVE

There is a saying used by the younger generation when nothing seems to go right. When plans for a party fall through, when father fails to let the offspring have the family car on a certain night, they shrug shoulders, smile wryly, and say "Some days you just can't make a buck."

These down-in-the-mouth hopefuls might take a good, long look at a bunch of Indians in Florida who make a dollar regardless of how bad things are. It seems that these particular redskins, a Seminole tribe, found that business deals weren't going so well the other day, so they moved immediately to rectify the situation.

Using their imagination, the Indians went to the North Miami Zoo and took an alligator home. They put the alligator in a pit, and took turns wrestling with it. Real promoters, the Seminoles charged tourists admission to see the show.

Everything went along in fine style until the keeper missed his star boarder. The alligator was found in the wrestling pit and the zoo man agreed not to press charges against the redmen.

The lesson that can be learned from the Indians is this: it is well to have initiative, but it must be honest initiative. It is not necessary to borrow someone else's property to make that dollar. Thus, to those young men and women beset by the problems only the younger generation can and does have, we say: develop initiative, but get it and expend it in the right way. The next time it seems impossible to "make a buck," just remember that where there's a will there's a way.

NOTE TO ONE IN 2050

(To be enclosed in box in corner stone of new city halls at Birmingham, Ala.)

I write this little note today
To one, a century away,
Who'll wear the name bestowed on me
When I shall long have ceased to be.

'Twill be deep hidden, boxed in stone,
Until one hundred years have flown
When from its prison it is freed
My great, great, great grandchild may read.

Oh, blithe descendant, this my prayer
That you my blood with pride will share
And questioned, happily reply
An ancestor of yours was I.

As it has flown my land above,
God grant you freedom's flag
to love,
And may it still as precious be
To you as it has been to me.

Before the years this note release
May men have learned the way to peace
And built that better world for you
We hoped for, but we never knew.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MEDICINAL SILENCE

Outside of hospitals you see the word—Silence. Anyone in pain or in such a condition that the slightest noise causes pain and irritation of the nerves can appreciate the medicinal value of silence. Doctors and nurses, as well, know how important silence is to a patient.

How simple, therefore, to deduct from this fact that silence to the well and healthy has also a balm and healing quality, even though unrealized. At the hour that this talk is being written there is not a sound to disturb one's quietude of mind. It is the day going to its slumber. Outside my window the lake is like a field of polished glass. Not a leaf is stirring in the tall trees all about. The sun has already gone to its rest beyond the horizon.

There is peace and an atmosphere of reverence where silence reigns. It is as though the soul breathed noiselessly. A little later the stars in their setting will also be evident and all about them, for endless space, there will be silence. It is comforting to know that the same stars have given forth their beauty all through the expanse of what history we know about.

It was undoubtedly a silent night, with the heavens aglow, that inspired the Psalmist to exclaim: "What is man that Thou are mindful of him?" How small we feel in the midst of vast silence! To sit silently with a friend, whose love we cherish, surpasses all conversation. A dear friend of mine was seriously ill, and one of her household, knowing her great love for riding, walked in one day and set a new beautiful saddle upon the end of her bed—and, without a word, walked out. How great is the medicine of silence!

How great a revolution in people's minds could be accomplished if each of us could but get the significance of that wonderful sentence in the Bible: "Be still—and know that I am God." Every moment of silence in meditation and prayer is medicine to the soul! It is the only remedy that brings about spiritual health.

Dupont Firm May Produce Hydrogen Bomb

Washington, Aug. —(AP)—The United States government yesterday apparently gave the Dupont Company top responsibility for developing the hydrogen bomb.

An Atomic Energy Commission announcement said the big chemical firm has been selected to design, construct and operate new facilities to produce materials for atomic weapons or fuels potentially useful for power purposes.

Company officials said "the project is of vital importance to the security of the United States."

The A.E.C. said the new plant will be of "advanced design and their operation will provide new knowledge that will speeed the progress of the atomic energy program."

However commission officials shied away from any direct mention of the H-bomb, the new weapon President Truman has ordered for the atomic arsenal.

Where the new plants will be located has not yet been decided. Dupont and government experts have been looking for a site, expected to cover some 200,000 acres.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

POND MARINERS

Regina, Sask. — Scratch the hide of a man who has once had white canvas catching a wind over his home and you'll find a sailor.

Which is by way of introduction to some notes on one of the strangest yacht clubs in our land and our first experience at sailing some 1500 miles from the ocean.

Hard by the Saskatchewan legislative buildings there's a serene pond known as Wascana Lake. In the early days the lake was a slough and famous as a buffalo wallow. Wascana, I'm told by an unreliable party, is a phonetic spelling for the Indian name meaning "many bones." As such, it's unique. Every other Indian place name we've encountered seems to mean "meeting of the waters."

Just in passing I might mention that Regina was originally known as "Pile O' Bones" because of the large number of buffalo skeletons that littered the area. The name was changed in 1882 (or thereabouts) when the CPR reached the spot. Personally, I think it was a mistake. Medicine Hat and Moose Jaw never changed their names, although it must have been a sore temptation.

Anyhow, a few years ago, when the last of the buffalo had cleared out, the slough was made into an artificial lake, fed by a small creek, and with a couple of artificial islands. It is a quiet little liver-shaped body of water about a mile long, girded by a nice green park.

It is on this that the Regina sailors bravely go through the motions of making like seafarers.

In the Grass

The club house is on one of the lake's artificial islands. When we dropped in there, lured by the sight of white sails fluttering in the breeze (off the prairie), we found much the same atmosphere of yacht clubs the world over.

Two young men in dungarees and white sweat shirts with the club's name stencilled across their chests, were standing at a window of the spacious clubhouse. They were discussing the breeze as earnestly as if they were heading on a weekend cruise.

We inquired about renting a boat and one of the members volunteered to sail us down to the other end of the pond where, as he put it, there was a "livery."

Our skipper, at the tiller of his 16-footer, was all business. He kept looking up at the dome of the government buildings with a critical eye and I realized finally he was watching the Union Jack to see if there were any changes in the breeze.

The little sloop slipped along right nice, hampered only by the fact that we appeared to be sailing through grass. A green weed grows in patches in the lake and tends to cut down your speed. As we neared the lake-end, a strange, flat-bottomed tub came briskly by, propelled by sternwheeler paddles and loaded with sightseers. Name on the bow was "Queen Mary."

Near the boathouse where we were to rent our craft, the wind disappeared entirely. "Bad sailing in here," our skipper explained professionally. "Parliament building take your wind away."

The idea of sailing in this confined area struck both Brown Eyes and me as pretty hilarious, but our friend was so intent on his handling of the boat and clearly having so much fun from it, we made no remarks. A sailor is a sailor on land or sea or grass. He does not lightly accept humorous comment about his passion.

Margo-Lynne

Renting a boat at the "livery" was a more difficult job than I'd expected. When we asked for a sailboat the man on the desk looked at is as if we'd called for a submarine. "I'll have to call the boss on this," he said.

The boss appeared and gave us a third degree. How much experience had we had sailing? I said we'd been sailing around Vancouver for 20-odd years. "Lake sailing's a little different," the boss said, but after further questioning finally agreed to trust us.

We then filled out forms swearing that we knew how to paddle a boat and how to swim, and the boss led us down to the tiny wharf and Margo-Lynne, a gaff-rigged bathtub with about four inches of rainwater in her and obviously in service long before the first buffalo was on the scene. There were neat little placards on her warning us to hang on to the boat and call loudly for help "in the event of emergency."

It took some ponderous oaring with Margo-Lynn's floorboards (no paddle being available) to get the two hundred yards across the lake, and I dropped my $10 sun-glasses into the depths trying to get the weeds off the old girl's tiller, but it was a sail, and if the government buildings could just be moved there'd be a nice breeze there.

You are less apt to make make sport of Regina's little sailing fleet when you learn how many boys went from this prairie pond to sail in Canadian ships of war. Fair breezes to you, mates.

Lack of Freight Cars Developing

New York, Aug. 2 — (AP) — Military steel needs may not be as large as some people expected, but a threatened shortage of freight cars could become a serious bottleneck, the Iron Age says today.

Under the regular budget for this year military requirements will take only 1.6 per cent of total steel production, the national metalworking weekly says. The extra $10,500,000,000 voted for military purposes will add about three to five per cent, while foreign aid programs, including the Marshall Plan and military aid program, will require not more than four per cent.

This means that total steel needs for security at home and aid abroad will not exceed 10 per cent of total steel production, the Iron Age says.

However, a serious freight car shortage, "potentially the worst in history," is developing, the weekly says.

"This situation is likely to become worse before it gets better, and mandatory loading and shipping rules are a possibility if the picture doesn't improve."

The weekly says steel - making operations are scheduled at 101 per cent of rate capacity this week, a rise of 1½ points from last week.

STRANGE CLOUD OBSERVED

San Rafael, Calif., Aug. 3 (AP)—Hundreds of persons Wednesday observed a strange cloud which changed color in hues of green, red, orange and blue as it moved seaward, against prevailing winds. Authorities at nearby Hamilton air field base planned an investigation.

DEATH RATE LOW

London, Aug. 3. (Reuters) — Britain's death rate in 1948—11 persons for every 1,000—was the lowest ever recorded, the registrar-General's statistical review showed today. Cancer accounted for 6.9 per cent of the deaths, as compared with 15.1 in 1947 and 13.9 in 1938.

King of Belgians Made Gamble With Fate, Lost

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

(Associated Press News Analyst)

The King of the Belgians has made a rash gamble with fate—and lost.

Leopold's dogged insistence on retaining his throne, in the face of fierce popular opposition, all but plunged his country into civil strife before he reluctantly gave way to horse sense.

Even now there is no certainty that he has acted soon enough. His people, and an anxious outside world, can only hope he has and that calm may return to his troubled land.

Leopold has given a promise which his subjects, eager for peace, choose to interpret as satisfactory, although there may be an "if" in it. He has agreed to the transfer of his powers to Crown Prince Baudouin, and also implies that he himself will abdicate when his son reaches his majority in 1951—if the three political parties then still support the prince.

It is interesting to take a quick glimpse at what has been happening to monarchies the last half century. In that comparatively brief period the following monarchies, among others, have been abolished:

More Than National Affair

The Belgian crisis has been far more than a National Affair. It has been a matter of concern to all the western powers which are standing against communism. Belgium is an important part of the Atlantic Pact which has been created for the defence of Western Europe. Apropos of this the London Times observes:

"The statement announcing the King's decision places it firmly upon right, simple and sufficient grounds. It was clear that the king could not be king of all the Belgians. He has therefore acted with the over-riding concern of assuring Belgian unity at a time when, he says, the international situation more than ever needs that unity to be reinforced.

"The nations that stands beside Belgium in the larger crisis to which he alludes will be grateful to King Leopold for this recognizing the peculiar danger of the civil faction at this time. He has perhaps done no more than his patriotic duty, but also he has done no less."

SUBJECTS SELDOM MENTIONED

Hemorrhoids and piles are the same thing. Fissure and fistula are not the same. These three disorders are the most common among various annoying afflictions involving the outlet of the bowel.

The diagnosis of a rectal disease is obviously the province of a physician. However, the experiences of physicians who treat these disorders, tend to indicate that most persons assume they have piles regardless of what actually may be the case, when they develop rectal symptoms.

Piles invariably are painless. They consist of soft, tumor-like masses arising from the wall of the bowel and protruding into the bowel canal. If neglected, they may increase in size to the point where upon movement of the bowel or at other times protrusion of the masses occur through the rectal opening.

Although these masses are orinarily easily replaced, occasionally, when large, replacement becomes difficult and the muscle ring of the rectal outlet may "strangulate" the protruding masses. This complication is painful. A common symptom of piles is bleeding which may be occasional and slight or often and severe. However, bleeding is a symptom of other rectal disorders and no one should assume that merely because he has bleeding he has piles.

A fissure may be likened to a crack, such as often occurs in the lip. A fissure may become dreadfully painful—often to the point where the victim withholds bowel movement for days on end because bowel movement aggravates the pain. A common symptom of fissure, in mild cases, is pain upon bowel movement which persists for an hour or two following. Left untreated, a fissure pursues a stubborn, chronic course.

A fistula results from a disease process, usually infection, which originates within the rectum and burrows outside the rectum to finally open (like a boil) upon the skin surface near the rectal outlet. Before the opening occurs, the process acts very similar to a boil in that there is swelling, redness, pain and eventual discharge of pus. Once the tract or pathway of a fistula is established, it tends to remain open, permitting the constant discharge of secretions from the bowel through the new opening. Once a fistula is established, pain ceases although the process is very painful when developing.

Fear of pain ordinarily ascribed by many persons as following surgical operation upon the rectum, causes widespread neglect of these conditions. It should come as a note of extreme relief to many of these persons that piles, for example, can be eradicated permanently and painlessly in a few visits to the office of a physician who is skilled in the ambulant methods. This is accomplished by a painless injection technique.

Occasionally, small fistula may be corrected by minor surgical procedures carried out in the doctor's office. It is also possible in many cases to cure a fissure by means of mild treatments carried out in the doctor's office.

A final word of advice: Shun advertising "rectal clinics." If your doctor does not do rectal work, ask him to refer you to someone who does.

My leaflet: "It Is Stupid to Suffer From Piles," is available if you ask for it by name and inclose a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

I have been told to have my teeth out for stomach trouble, but would like to have your advice first. (M. F.)

Answer—I'd have no tooth out, for stomach trouble or any other trouble, unless physician and dentist agreed that the particular tooth is the source of the trouble and the dentist considered the tooth damaged beyond his capacity to save it by treatment.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

When you crack a lovely fresh limpid egg into the frying pan it never occurs to you that, magically involved in the delicate and transparent circle already clouding and whitening before your eyes, are feathers, beak, claws, feet, cackle or cock-a-doodle-doo.

Eggs are so commonplace, mankind has been looking at them in various styles for so long, that the mystery of them literally does not exist for us. Yet the mystery of the egg is the mystery of life. And sometimes of recent years, the thought occurs to humble egg fryers like me that it might be a good idea if science relaxed its attention on atomic bombs and returned for a little while to the egg.

Apparently the egg has stumped science; so science has turned to the atom to save its face. There is pomp and the majesty of terror in the atomic bomb. But who's afraid of an egg?

Only the scientists. In that mild, formless gelatinous egg, frying there in the bacon fat, is the riddle that baffles them all.

If a hen had sat on it for a certain number of days that shapeless golden jelly would have been transubstantiated into beak, eyes, feathers, wings, legs, feet, complicated innards of heart, lungs, gizzard, and all the factory-fresh mechanism for carrying on the mystery of life of which this egg is the first question.

If science wants something to solve, why does it so studiously avoid the egg? Never mind atoms. What is life? If we go searching in that direction, the scare we may all get will be more wholesome than the scare the atomic bomb gives us.

Meanwhile, regardless of feathers, beak, feet, cackle and all—which have not yet transpired—let us eat this egg.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

MOST THINGS NEVER CHANGE

In one of Moliere's plays, a doctor makes the statement that the liver is on the left side of the body and the heart is on the right side. When someone challenges this statement, the doctor's reply is "The organs used to be placed as you say, but we have changed all that."

This was satire, of course, on certain people of Moliere's day who were confident that they had discovered something absolutely new and transforming. We live in a day when so many new things have been discovered that some people have the idea that everything old is wrong and everything new is right. Speak to such people about religious beliefs which have been held through the ages and they smile and say, "But we have changed all that now. We have something better."

There is a new approach to education today, and while it may have certain advantages, the plain truth is that college authorities frequently have to test entering students to make sure that they can read. There is a new approach to the study of alcohol, but the old truths about beverage alcohol namely, that it turns a good man into a bad, a wise man into a foolish man, and a sober man into a dangerous individual, are the realities of which people have been painfully aware for centuries.

Most things in life never change. This is hard for a "progressive age," to admit—but it's true.

Air Cadet Group Attends Training Camp at Aylmer

Trenton (Special) —Thirty air cadets from Air Cadet Squadron 173, Trenton, are attending summer training camp at RCAF Station, Aylmer, Ontario. The local squadron is accompanied by Squadron Leader W. G. Spencer Officer Commanding squadron 173. The Trenton Air Cadets squadron left for Aylmer on July 29th and will be returning August 13th.

During July and August, over 15,000 Royal Canadian Air Cadets from Ontario and Quebec will attend the fifth annual summer camp at RCAF Station, Ont., mer, Ont., which is sponsored by the RCAF and the Air Cadets League of Canada.

The first group of 400 cadets representing squadrons throughout the two provinces arrived at Aylmer July 3rd to begin a two-week program of flying instruction, sports drill and practical training on subjects studied during the year.

Under the guidance of Air Force and civilian instructions the cadets, who are from 14 to 18, will learn everything from first aid and the mechanics of aero engines on the ground, to 'pin pointing' and flying a course in the air. Each cadet is to receive one and one-half hours of familiarization flying and 24 hours of ground instruction.

Formed in 1941 for the primary purpose of providing pre-trained recruits for the RCAF, the Air Cadet League is a civilian organization composed of outstanding business and professional men. There are now 195 air cadet squadrons in Canada. The Air Cadet league adminsters the squadrons, raises funds and promotes public interest in the movement while the RCAF is responsible for training the cadets and supplying all training equipment.

The peace time program developed in 1945, stresses aviation and citizenship training, and offers various awards for outstanding proficiency. As well as trips to summer camps, the cadets can qualify for free flying training courses and exchange visits with cadets of the United Kingdom and United States. They are also eligible for educational scholarships which permit them to attend the Canadian Service College at Royal Roads, B.C. and Kingston.

Cadets from 61 Ontario and Quebec squadrons will train in four groups of 400 at the Aylmer Station. The last group made up of 24 squadrons will complete their training program by August 26th.

Current strength of the Royal Canadian Air Cadets is approximately 15,000. Of this nmber, 6,1 6,000 will attend camps at RCAF stations throughout the country this summer.

RISING LIVING COSTS

Recent increases in the salaries of Finland's civil servants are estimated to cost the country $25,000,000 annually.

Girls Take Over At Lake Camp Until Aug. 19

Moira Lake Y.M.C.A. Camp was a busy spot over the weekend when boys reluctantly said "good bye" to their camping experience to give way to a capacity girls' camp which continues until August 19th. Facilities were heavily taxed with boys and their parents departing and the arrival of girls and their parents awaiting their assignments. A large group of girl counsellors, many with years of camping and leadership experience and some recently returned from camp leadership training courses, were on hand to give assistance to the senior staff in the details of the orientation program.

In this process the new campers, some of whom were in camp for the first time, quickly felt right at home and entered into camp life with eagerness and expectancy. Unfortunately there were disappointments for some who had to remain in the city because they had left their registrations too late. A few of these will be accommodated during the last week if space permits, but the popularity of the camp with its variety of activities makes it impossible to accommodate all who may want to go.

Sports Program

The program of sports, hikes, swimming, boating, music, dramatics crafts and other activities all under able instructors make an appeal to girls whose parents also can appreciate the value of the experience in happy, healthy surroundings, in the development of the growing girl. The desire to give personal guidance and help to each child and at the same time provide for her safety has established a record of one trained leader for every three girls. Wholesome food and supervised rest are integral parts of the day's program.

Creative Activity

Plans call for the encouragement of creative activity in as many interests as possible for each camper. She will be given opportunities to explore new experiences in the hope that latent skills may be discovered and developed. Only with careful observation and patience will the various members of the staff be able to carefully vary the activity for the camper so as to allow her to reach closer to her potential. Monotony will be unknown and in this setting the development of personality will find greater opportunity.

CABINET AGREED

Canada's contribution to date includes three destroyers and a squadron of eight R.C.A.F. transport planes. The destroyers have entered Korean waters ready for action. The planes are being used on a trans-Pacific shuttle service to Japan.

700 Asked To Go

One of the headaches about a volunteer force is the uncertainty of how many Canadians would enlist for one. The best criterion to date is the army's announcement that more than 700 men have entered recruiting offices and said they would like to serve in Korea, but not in the regular army. They were turned away.

There are roughly 900 men in a battalion of infantry.

It is expected that regular army recruiting offices would be used, that the force would get a lot of its training in Canada and more advanced training in Japan and that wartime admission standards —rather than the tough peace-time ones — would apply.

The force would probably emerge as a mixture of war veterans and young men too young for the last war, possibly buttressed with officers and non-commissioned officers from the regular army.

May Last Long Time

Its formation would be based on the twin conclusions that the Korean war probably is going to last for months and that a long build-up for a counter-offensive is in prospect whether the Americans hold to their tiny share of Korea or not.

It is doubtful that the force, once created, would leave Canada for months, possibly not before the end of the year. It would have to be fitted into some higher formation. Prime Minister Menzies of Australia, due here Monday, has talked of a Commonwealth division now that Britain, Australia and New Zealand have all offered troops.

The government here is believed to want to stamp any Canadian force with the international character of the United Nations as clearly as possible and might, for that reason, not favor a Commonwealth force.

WEDDINGS

KAHNERT—CALLAGHAN

On Saturday, July 29, a wedding of interest was solemnized at 10 a.m., in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, when Alice Mary Callaghan, Reg. N., of Toronto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Leo Callaghan, Belleville, became the bride of Allan Robert Kahnert, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kahnert. The Rev. Father C. Baker officiated before a background of gladioli.

Rev. Sister Mary Bibiani, organist, provided the wedding music, and Mr. Ed. Brown was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charmingly gowned in a bridal dress of nylon sheer, over taffeta, featuring a nylon lace jacket with peplum, elbow length sleeves, and bouffant skirt, with matching lace mitts. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion fell gracefully from a Juliet cap of matching lace outlined by stephanotis. She carried her aunt's bridal prayer book with stephanotis and rose-petal streamers.

Miss Kathleen Callaghan, sister of the bride, was maid of honor; Miss Myrna Kahnert, sister of the bridegroom was bridesmaid. Both were attired in pastel green nylon marquisette and lace, fashioned similarly to that of the bride's. They carried cascade bouquets of white carnations and wore matching headdresses.

Mr. Erle Kahnert, of Toronto, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Leo Callaghan, of Belleville, brother of the bride, Mr. B. Chapman, of Nipissing, Ontario, and Mr. James Boylin, of London, Ont.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held for the immediate families, with the reception being held later at the home of the bride. The bride's mother received wearing a gown of navy silk marquisette, with navy and white hat, and accessories, and corsage of white gladioli. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was gowned in beige, with sand colored accessories, and corsage of roses.

For the wedding trip to Muskoka, the bride chose a golden gabardine ensemble with navy accessories. Upon their return, they will reside in Toronto.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto; Brussels; North Bay, Rochester, N.Y.; Kingston, and Flint, Mich.

PYEAR—HARRISON

A pretty lawn wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thompson, Springbrook, on Wednesday, July 26, at 3 o'clock, when Reta Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Harrison, Roslin, became the bride of Russell Garnet Pyear, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pyear, Glen Ross. The Rev. A. Campbell officiated.

Mr. George Williams, Springbrook, rendered the wedding music and Mr. William Reynolds, of Stirling, soloist, sang before the ceremony, "Because" and during the signing of the register "The Lord's Prayer".

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a ballerina length gown of white dotted sheer over taffeta, matching gloves and flower headdress and carried pink baby roses.

Mrs. Barry Christie, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and was gowned similarly in mauve dotted sheer and carried yellow roses.

Mr. Douglas Pyear, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Following the reception, the young couple left for a motor trip to Montreal and the Laurentian district, the bride travelling in Chinese red printed silk with black accessories.

The bride, prior to her marriage, was the guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Miss Hilda Thurston, Peterborough, by former Peterborough friends; a kitchen shower at the home of Mrs. Jack Armstrong, by Carmel girl friends and a dinner party at Rickarton Castle, and social evening at Catherine Bond's cottage, where an electric tea kettle was presented by department associates of the Belleville Income Tax Office. The presentation of an automatic electric iron was made by the Income Tax Staff Association.

The groom was entertained at a stag party at the home of Dr. Ralph Vandervoort, Stirling, where the presentation of a smoker was made.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Differs with her mother about the family car

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am almost 17, and I drive our family car often. My mother is very liberal with it and allows me to take my girl friends around. Yet when it comes to dating in cars she sternly refuses, without explanation.

All my girl friends are forever going to "drive-ins", or they just spend an afternoon or evening driving when they date. Naturally, I feel that mother isn't quite fair in not allowing me to do the same. She won't even hear of my double-dating or triple-dating in a car. It makes me feel that she mistrusts me and believes that we only want to neck or pet, neither of which I do. But I would occasionally enjoy a night with the car when dating. I think on special school occasions she should consent to my single-dating in a car and certainly allow me to double-date at drive-ins as long as we behave properly.

I realize my mother loves me and wants to do what's best for me, and I love her too much to quarrel with her. But all this has caused me much unhappiness.

Jeanne

Dear Jeanne:

Your mother doesn't sound to me like the sort of person who would be unreasonable or inconsiderate of your feelings or want to deprive you of normal fun. I am sure, just as you are, that she wants only what's best for you, and that she would be perfectly willing to let you do anything except what she sincerely felt might be unwise.

I am sure, too, that it isn't distrust of you that makes her feel all this dating in cars is not such a good idea. She's probably thinking of all the accidents that young people have with cars when they get too engrossed in their own fun to remember to be careful. Also, she may not feel that she wants just any young man to drive the family car, as would certainly be the case if you were out with a date in it.

I don't think it would hurt your popularity one bit if you let it be known that you agree with your mother that too much dating in cars might have its hazards, and that she prefers you to go out only under circumstances which she believes to be entirely safe for you. I think if you did try to see your mother's viewpoint a little more in all this, you might find her quite ready to have you go out with some boy she knows, and in whose driving she has perfect confidence, provided he uses his own car. Talk things over with her along these lines, and see if you can't arrive at a compromise.

She's a widow—needs friends

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a widow, with one married son and one to be married soon.

I would like very much to find some single friends with whom I could spend an evening or go out with occasionally, but unfortunately I don't know where to find people of my age who are also alone.

V. L.

Dear V. L.:

As you know, if you have been reading my column with any regularity, I am very much aware of the difficulties men and women of middle age have in finding suitable companionship in their leisure hours.

In some cities, there are clubs specifically for unattached people in their middle years, but I am sorry to say I don't know of any in your vicinity. The best advice I can give you is that you go to your local YWCA and find out if there is any such group there. If not, ask if one cannot be formed.

In the meantime, I am sure you would find that the YWCA has many interesting hobby groups which would be open to women of any age and through which you could make new friends and have a lot of fun.

SECOND-HAND

Yorkton, Sask. — (CP) — Before wrapping it, the salesgirl in a five and ten-cent store looked at herself in the hand mirror an Indian woman had purchased. "You no do that" rebuked the native customer, and she promptly chose another, this time turning it face downward.

Fiery, Itching Toes and Feet

Here is a clean, stainless antiseptic oil that will do more to help you get rid of your trouble than anything you've ever use.

Its action is so powerfully penetrating that the itching is quickly stopped; and in a short time you are rid of that bothersome, fiery torture. The same is true of Barber's Itch, Salt Rheum, Eczema—other irritating unsightly skin troubles.

You can obtain Moone's Emerald Oil in the original bottle at Doyle's Drug Store or any modern drug store. It is safe to use — and failure in any of these ailments is rare indeed.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

We all like to receive a personal thank-you note

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Today I was told by one of my co-workers in the office I have just left to be married, that all the girls in the office (there are sixteen girls in the office) are contributing to a joint gift, a wedding gift to me. When this gift arrives, should I write each girl an individual note, or will it be all right to send one thank-you note to the entire office?

L. S.

Look at it this way: each girl's contribution to the fund to buy your wedding present is really her individual present to you, therefore each girl should receive an individual note of thanks from you. You probably know these sixteen co-workers very well, and each one has probably made some sacrifice in budgeting for her contribution to your present. For her friendship and for her contribution she may have to be satisfied with a "blanket" thank-you note sent by you to the office. . . but inevitably she'll be more delighted to receive a thank-you-note from you just to her.

Flower girl and ring bearer should also be given gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have purchased the gifts for my bridesmaids and maid of honor. Also in my wedding party are to be a flower girl and a ring bearer. Should I give gifts to them too? If so, what kind of gifts?

Anne S.

Yes, indeed! Although most jewelry for a child is not in good taste, sometimes the flower girl is given a delicate gold or silver chain with a small locket, to wear around her neck on the day of the wedding . . .the locket may be engraved with her initials or first name or full name on one side, and your initials and date of the wedding on the other side. Or you may give her a small purse, initialed; or a small, white-beaded "dressy" bag; a small initialed travelling bag; a pen and pencil set, marked with her name; a barette for her hair, perhaps marked with her first name; a silver stamp box, initialed; photograph frame, for the wedding party photograph; or a desk set.

To the ring bearer you might give such a grown-up gift as a pair of silver cuff links, engraved with his initials; or a sectioned coin-purse; a silver key chain for the keys to his various precious possessions; equipment for his favorite sport or one of his favorites; pen and pencil set; wallet imprinted with his name and address in gold or silver lettering; small fitted travelling case; belt; pair of book-ends; knife.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter's wedding is to be small and informal, and I am planning to write the notes of invitation, as you have said is the proper thing for the bride's mother to do .Some of these notes are to be written to relatives and friends of the groom-to-be, and I am of course anxious to know whether or not they can come, so that I can make definite plans for the refreshments and the seating-arrangements. So would it be proper for me to write "R.s.v.p." at the end of the notes, either opposite or underneath my signature?

A. H.

No. . ."R.s.v.p." is correctly used on an engraved or semi-engraved invitation, never on a note of invitation. But you can make your request-for-an-answer even stronger in the note if, after you have written the details of the invitation, you write, for example, "Please tell me if we are to have the pleasure of welcoming you and your husband at the wedding and reception. . .we do hope to hear that you can come!"

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Have you a kitchen sink complex?

When the boss of the domestic works goes into a tail-spin, says she hates housework and wishes she could run away from her family, she is a sick woman. She is sick physically, mentally, spiritually. Or else she doesn't amount to a hill of beans and never has. The job may be monotonous at times, travelling the treadmill day after day, but there are compensations. Let the disgruntled woman ask herself. "What if I were alone, had no family? What if I were living in one room, eating alone? If I were liberated from my domestic chains, where would I be going? What about my old age with nobody to look after me?"

If she answers those questions truthfully, she will stop being sorry for herself. She will be thankful that she has a roof over her head, a husband to kiss goodbye in the morning, and to welcome at night, children to tuck into bed.

Let her learn to do her job gallantly and she will not suffer from the housewife's slump or the look of boredom that shadows what should be a pleasing countenance. If she hates housework it is probably because she doesn't do it well, gets no satisfaction such as the methodical home worker feels when she has tidied up her menage, prepared a delicious meal for her family.

When a woman has pride in her home, no task is too big for her to tackle. She can climb a ladder and paint the roof and be happy while doing it. It is all in the state of mind.

Cooking is an inspiring and interesting occupation. (Did I hear the gentle reader say "She probably never goes near a kitchen range?" Don't fool yourself. Your reporter is a good cook.)

To get real pleasure out of the culinary job, one must have a creative mind, not just follow the directions in the cook book. There are wonderful innovations one can whip together, to the joy and good appetite of the family. American cooking is not all that it should be. The average restaurant fare is a disgrace to the nation.

The wife and mother yowls about dishwashing. Why? It is a mechanical job. You don't have to put your mind on it. You can think of pleasant things; you can recite poetry. If you like, and nobody objects, you can sing at the top of your lungs. Just tell yourself "If I keep right on going, I'll soon have them done."

Then, there are the children. Is there any more gratifying occupation than looking after them, loving them, receiving their love, training them to be honest, truthful, well-mannered? Answer that, if you are discontented, tired of the washing, the ironing, the dusting. You could be worse off. You don't have to dig out in all kinds of weather as does the career girl, whom you probably envy and who envies you.

Record Sugar Crop Expected

By FORBES RHUDE
(Canadian Press Business Editor)

Some bad news for sugar hoarders is contained in "Sugar Facts", published by Canada and Dominion Sugar Co., Ltd., Chatham, Ont.

Canada's own sugar beet crop is expected to be the largest in history, with 102,300 acres producing more than 1,000,000 tons of beets Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and Alberta all show substantial gains over 1949.

The United States sugar beet crop also is expected to exceed all records. Australia expects a heavy sugar cane crop for the third successive year. European acreage is up. Cuba still has available for sale in world markets 1,200,000 short tons of raw sugar over and above latest estimates of United States requirements.

Lamborn and Co., New York sugar brokers, are quoted as saying:

Mountains of Sugar

"There are mountains of sugar immediately available and in only a short space of time more mountains will be produced from new crops.". "Sugar Facts" adds:

When hoarders in various parts of the world have filled their cupboards, demand for sugar will slacken suddenly, observers say. Prices will decline, inventories of sugar will have to be marked down and hoarders will be out-of-pocket.

In the meantime, with heavy buying, the world market for sugar is strong.

Canadian 'Hams' Are Well Organized, Highly Skilled

Winnipeg — (CP) — Amateur radio operating is strictly a hobby, but it's becoming bigger and better organized each year.

To enter the field, it's not just a case of getting an old Morse set or a radio transmitter and going on the air.

Before an amateur radio operator, better known as a "ham," can receive a licence from the Department of Transport's radio division, he must pass examinations demonstrating proficiency in Morse code and radio technique.

Hams not only are governed by statue, but theirs is the only hobby regulated by international treaty.

Representatives of various governments meet from time to time to discuss amateur radio. These talks mainly concern frequencies allotted to the hams.

4,000 Stations

At present there are more than 4,000 licensed amateur stations in Canada. Manitoba has approximately 350.

Peter C. Watt, president of the Winnipeg Amateur Radio Club, said probably one of the most fascinating features of this hobby is the satisfaction of being able to communicate over long distances with equipment built by one's own hands.

"Having obtained his licence," said Watt, a grain man by profession, "the amateur proceeds to build his own equipment.

"Usually he begins by building a small station, one that may be capable of developing a matter of 25 to 50 watts.

"Such a station is sufficient for communication on CW (Morse code) for considerable distances. Such a power rating, however, would be favorable for voice communications over a long distance only if atmospheric conditions were right."

As time goes on, Watt said, the amateur, if he can, will develop his station by adding equipment.

"Under normal conditions, a station operating with a power output of from 250 to 400 watts can communicate with almost any part of the world."

National Asset

Amateur radio, he said, is not only a hobby, but a national asset. During the Manitoba flood disaster, hams handled emergency messages of inquiry from all parts of the country. The Rimouski, Que., fire was another instance of useful service provided by hams.

Florida has called upon the amateurs so often during hurricane disasters that the state granted hams the privilege of using their call letters on their automobile licence plates.

There are many versions as to how the term "ham" originated. Mr. Watt said it most likely started in England. Operators there were first known as amateurs, often pronounced "h'amateurs." This was shortened to "hams."

'Extinct' Moas May Linger On in N.Z. Experts Believe

By J. C. GRAHAM
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Christchurch, N.Z. — (CP) — Instead as saying "as dead as the dodo" in New Zealand, most people say "as dead as the moa," a reference to the giant ostrich-like bird which is generally supposed to have become extinct in New Zealand about seven or eight centuries ago.

Now the possibility has been raised that some small species of the bird may still linger in the almost unexplored forest and mountain fastness of Fiordland, in the far southwest of New Zealand.

Moas were once common throughout New Zealand, as is shown by the large numbers of skeletons found in all parts of the country. They ranged from species bigger than an ostrich and with far heavier legs, down to small varieties standing only about three feet high.

Discounted Stories

A few years ago, experts discounted stories of old Moaris that their parents had taken part in moa-hunts and reports of early European settlers having seen giant birds in the forests. On the evidence of hundreds of bones found in widely varying places, they considered that the moas had died out not long after the Moaris settled in New Zealand and certainly centuries before European settlement began.

This view was shaken by the discovery in the Fiordland region of a living colony of notornis, another flightless bird about the size of a turkey, half a century after it was thought to have become extinct.

People began to ask whether some of the stories of moas have survived later than generally believed might also be true.

It was recalled that footprints of a bird with feet 11 inches long were seen each year for several seasons up to 1907 in one part of the Fiordland area.

Feathers Found

Parties searching parts of the area for further colonies of the notornis saw no sign of either notornis or moas, but they did find a pile of moa bones in a moari shelter which threw new light on the survival of moas. Some of the bones had been cut with a sharp instrument. The clean, sharp cuts were quite different from those made by the stone implements of the Moaris. They had every appearance of having been made with a metal tool. This means that the moa must have been killed after European settlement began. The theory was supported by the fact that the moa was killed so recently that its feathers still littered the tussock floor of the shelter.

On the evidence available several experts have expressed the view that the moa was certainly living at the beginning of this century. They doubt whether there are any survivors among the uninhabited forests of Fiordland, but say it is an arguable proposition that there might be still living specimens of a small species of moa in these regions.

2,000 'Peace' Marchers Battle Police After Being Banned From Staging Rally in Square

New York, Aug. 3 — (AP) — Two thousand left-wing "peace" marchers banned from staging a rally in Union Square, battled 1,000 police late yesterday in fist-swinging brawls that led to 13 arrests.

The demonstrators waited until the home-going rush hour to make their defiant move.

"We want peace—open up the square," the marchers shouted as they formed ranks.

Union Square — 1 1-2 miles south of Times Square— is the traditional scene of New York soap-box oratoy. When mounted police bore down on the demonstrator they shouted "Cossack."

Police rode their horses on to sidewalks. Fist fights broke out. several injuries were reported and at least one window was smashed.

Two sign-waving demonstrators were removed from electric light poles by police and a fire department hook and ladder company.

The police detail spent an hour breaking up the demonstration. Mort of the marchers arrested were charged with assault or disorderly conduct.

Scattered by police, some retreated three blocks south to 11th Street. Another group of about 500 moved north to 23rd Street at Madison Square Park. Police chased them out.

Last night, 1,200 police ringed Times Square after a report the marchers would invade the "cross-roads of the world." However, police reported no organized demonstrations there.

The New York Labor Conference for Peace sponsored the forbidden rally. The marchers were to have heard speeches by left-wing singer Paul Robeson and Dr. W. E. B. Dubois, chairman of the Peace Information Centre.

The centre has led in the distribution of peace petitions urging the outlawing of the atom bomb. Government officials have called the petitions communist-inspired.

The conference, which describes itself as made up of union and other groups interested in peace, called the "peace rally"' to demand mediation in Korea.

Validity of Act Will be Tested By Fruit Growers

St. Catharines, Aug. 3—(CP)—A court test of the validity of the Ontario Highway Improvement Act appeared likely Wednesday as police served summonses on a number of fruit growers.

They are charged with offering fruit for sale within 150 feet of the Queen Elizabeth Way.

Fighting the regulations, they recently formed the Niagara District Property Owners Protective Association and raised a fund. They said the case will be carried to the Supreme Court if necessary.

The Highways Department has set up community markets for the use of all farmers at intervals along the highway, which runs from Toronto through Hamilton to Niagara Falls. Sale of fruit from individual stands is forbidden. The farmers claim the community markets are poorly placed, improperly organized and hidden from the public. They also claim that the province lacks authority to forbid use of individual stands.

Sale of Dream Home Ends Family Feud

Hamilton, Aug. 3 — (CP) — Hamilton's dream home, which provided a small-sized nightmare for two families as well as $216,000 for the Manitoba Relief Fund, has been sold for $16,500.

The nightmare occurred early in July after William Tirling, 25, was announced winner of the house, tickets for which had been sold in a raffle.

It developed, however, that Stirling had not bought the ticket. Instead, his father-in-law Robert Hopwood had, using Stirling's name.

The city solicitor ruled the house belonged to Hopwood. He promptly decided he didn't want to live in it, put it up for sale. Alfred Oram bought it.

Russia's Latest Move to Seat Red China Lost

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 3 — (AP) — The solid opposition of seven countries today doomed Russia's latest move to seat red China on the United Nations Security Council as part of a peace deal for Korea.

Six countries—Britain, France, Ecuador, Cuba, Norway and Nationalist China — followed the United States' lead yesterday in insisting that the council discuss the Korean question before considering admission of communist China to the council and that the two questions be treated separately.

Chief delegate Warren R. Austin of the United States led the fight to reject any "deals" for settlement of the Korean war. He declared the U. S. will never agree that the end of the Korean aggression depends on any other issue.

As the third day of debate began today on the procedural tangle at 3 p. m. EDT, council delegates watched with particular interest to see what India would do.

It hasn't the power to alter the outcome, but her strategic position in the east gave added significance to whatever stand she takes when her delegate, Sir Benegal N. Rau, speaks today on the agenda proposed by Russian delegate, Jakob A. Malik, the council president for August.

Malik has insisted on the program he presented:

1. To consider seating the Chinese communists.
2. To consider a "peaceful settlement" in Korea.

Denounces Action

In demanding this agenda, he has denounced U. S. military action in Korea as an act of aggression.

India in recent weeks has found herself siding with both the U. S. and Russia on one aspect or another of the Korean question.

India's Prime Minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, initiated the proposal, in notes to Moscow and Washington, to seat communist China on the Security Council as a step toward ending the Korean War. The Kremlin approved the plan; the U. S. rejected it.

Two days ago, India supported Malik's attempt to read the Chinese Nationalists out of the council merely by declaring their delegate was present illegally and represented no country.

Two hooded thugs wearing asbestos gloves, staged the biggest robbery in Ontario gold mining history when they blasted their way into the vaults of Coniaurum Mines Ltd., near Schumacher, Ont., and stole three gold bricks worth $96,000. They tied William Edwards, watchman, blew safe, then escaped in Edward's car. Police say robbery shows evidence of having been planned far in advance. The gold was recovered from a blazing car used in the getaway. — Central Press Canadian.

Shortage of Meat Stimulates Rustling in Bechuanaland

Johannesburg—(CP)—The meat shortage in South Africa has resulted in an outbreak of rustling on a scale that would warm the the heart of a Hollywood scenario writer. The main object of the poachers is not cattle, but deer.

Encouraged by high prices being paid for game and biltong (dried meat), poaching in Bechuanaland by gangs of Europeans operating from the Transvaal has reached alarming proportions and drastic measures are expected to be instituted to stamp it out.

S. A. Lombard, acting administrator of the Transvaal and provincial secretary, said recently that for some time negotiations had been in progress with the authorities in Bechuanaland to reach an agreement which would permit the police in the territory to pursue suspected poachers across the border into the Transvaal.

Policing the territory was a difficult task, he said, because of the large, uninhabited tracts of land, which had to be continually watched if poaching was to be detected and the culprits caught.

It was known, Lombard said, that in a comparatively short period 1,800 head of game, including impala, sable and eland, had been slaughtered by one gang of rustlers. Recently three trucks, loaded with biltong valued at about £8,000 ($24,800), were intercepted.

Farmers now are discussing the possibility of appointing their own police to patrol their farm boundaries.

The minimum penalty for poaching is a fine of £100 or six months' imprisonment with hard labor. Weapons and vehicles used by the rustlers are confiscated.

The gangs usually travel to a central point in trucks, which are then parked under cover. The hunters spread out and later report back and indicate on large-scale maps where they have concealed the game they have shot. The trucks then proceed to these points, were the deer are skinned and butchered.

It has been estimated that thousands of pounds worth of biltong from Bechuanaland is sold in the Transvaal each month.

Young Dutch Girl Refuses to Break Malay Marriage

Singapore, Aug. 3—(CP)— A 14-year-old Dutch girl, reared in the jungle by a Malay foster-mother, today defied the world to break up her two-day-old marriage to a Malay school teacher.

Bertha Hertogh who now calls herself Nadra Adabi, was married to school-teacher Mansoor Adabi only four days after a high court awarded custody of the native nurse who had cared for her since the Japanese invasion of 1942 separated her from her Dutch parents.

The Singapore court of appeals refused July 28 to return the child to her parents, who are now living in Bergen-op-zoom, The Netherlands.

"I married of my own choice the man I love," Bertha told newspaper men. "I am proud of him and I know I am fortunate to have met and married him. I am sure of our happiness and prosperity."

The girl was brought up by her nurse as a Moslem. The Moslem religion permits marriage for girls when they reach 14.

The Hertoghs have said they will continue attempts to have their daughter restored to them.

RUSS SEA CAPTAIN SHY

Three Rivers, Que., Aug. 3 — (CP)—The 4,188-ton Russian vessel, Krasnodar, arrived here Wednesday to take on a load of wheat. To reporters who asked for a shipboard interview, Capt. B. Bernstchuck said he had nothing to say. Photographers were allowed to take pictures of the ship but no one got aboard.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 3 (AP)—Czechoslovakia will continue to get tin and rubber under a new one-year trade agreement with the Netherlands and the United States of Indonesia, it was disclosed last night.

Cost-of-Living Index Likely To Show Gain

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—At least one segment of the cost-of-living index, now touching unparalleled heights, will show a new gain tomorrow—rents.

Bureau of statistics officials have completed their June survey on rents and have disclosed that the movement is up. How much up won't be known until official figures are issued at 3 p.m. EDT tomorrow.

The general index, pushed up mainly by climbing meat prices, increased 1.4 points during May to a peak of 165.4. This compared with 160.5 a year ago and 164.0 during April, 1950. The index is calculated on the basis that prices in the 1935-39 period equalled 100.

During May, rising meat prices sent the foods sub-group from 204.6 to 209.0. Fresh pork prices went up 6.3 cents a pound, beef prices 3.2 cents, lamb 4.4 cents and veal 1.9 cents.

The meat price range continued to range high during June, mainly because of the big demand for beef in the United States.

During May, increases in British Columbia telephone rates and galvanized wire advanced the homefurnishings and services sub-index from 166.4 to 166.9.

The fuel and light group slipped slightly from its peak of 137.5 to 137.1, reflecting lower prices for coal and coke. The clothing sub-group also declined from 180.8 to 180.7, as lower prices for women's wear out-balanced slight increases in men's wear, piece goods and footwear.

The miscellaneous group, however, climbed 0.1 point to a new peak of 132.4, due principally to higher prices for automobile tires.

Since the bureau surveys rental changes only four times a year, the rent sub-index has remained unchanged since last February when it climbed an unprecedented 7.7 points to bring the rent group to a new height of 132.7.

NOT YET 21

Toronto, Aug. 3—(CP)—Donald Cox, who told the court his father had informed him he was 21, was fined $10 or 10 days Wednesday for possession of a liquor permit while a minor. A check of his birth certificate showed he was not yet 21.

Pamphlets Will Tell People What to Fear and Not to Fear In A-B-C Warfare if it Comes

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—The defence department is preparing a series of pamphlets telling the people what to fear and what not to fear in "A-B-C warfare,"—attack by atomic, bacteriological and chemical weapons.

The pamphlets, to be made public in a month or two, will also tell what it is proposed to do to provide defence against them.

Their emergence will be part of what Defence Minister Claxton calls, "a program for the progressive implementation" of a broad plan for civil defence in Canada. Another step will be the start next month of the training of a small number of health and fire officials at an A-B-C- warfare school at Camp Borden Ont.

The broad plan has been approved by the cabinet and has been made known to provincial authorities.

Federal and provincial representatives will meet here, probably next month, to discuss civil-defence preparations. There has been no official indication of just where that meeting will place Canada in steps to meet enemy attack on major cities and industrial targets.

Further Action Planned

Officials say that both Ottawa and the provincial capitals have their own ideas about the federal plan, that these ideas will be thrashed out to prepare the way for what Mr. Claxton has called "further action" on the municipal or city level.

It is pointed out here that the first logical step is to build up a group of skilled instructors who, in turn, will be able to pass on this knowledge if and when it is deemed necessary to start training squads to handle attacks on a block-by-block basis.

The first Camp Borden course will only be the start officials say. Similar courses will be held at schools across the country.

No Block Basis Defence

There is no sign yet of organization anywhere on a block basis but Korea appears to have touched off a far greater interest in civil defence than has existed since the war. Committees have been organized in a number of cities to map plans.

The government has been sending small groups of officials to England and to the U.S. for special training, among them Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, civil defence co-ordinator, who is due back at his office from England shortly

The pamphlets will attempt to dispel panic thinking and to give the public an adequate picture of just what 20th-century warfare can mean.

Free Enterprise Most Beneficial To Individual

Gravenhurst, Aug. 3 (CP) — The head of Ontario's largest union local said Wednesday the free enterprise system is the most beneficial to the individual. But to survive it had to continue to improve conditions for the working man.

Earl Watson of Windsor, president of the 11,000 member local 195 of the United Auto Workers (CIO-CCL) said a middle ground must be found between "unrestricted capitalist exploitation" and state control.

He spoke at a summer convention of the Ontario Young Progressive Conservative Association.

"Just as the unity of human society can not be built upon class warfare, neither can the proper ordering of economic affairs be left to free competition alone," he said.

He said governments should consider a curb on profits to guarantee a fairer share of profits to labor and "the inducement to make higher profits should be taken away through excess profits taxes or other means." But he was opposed to uncurbed extension of government controls.

Wage increases alone would not solve the economic problems of labor because higher wages often gave "unscrupulous managements the excuse to raise prices." Stability of employment, protection of the dignity of the individual were just as important.

Trade unions "have no more right to suggest political philosophies to their membership than they have to suggest what religion to follow," he said.

Complete Plans For Old Home Weekend Party

Tweed — On Saturday evening the Tweed Agricultural Society met in the council chambers to complete their plans in the part they are taking in the Old Home celebration August 5, 6, 7th. The Fair Board is opening their fair grounds and buildings on August 5th for the Lumbermen's Picnic, usually held at Cloyne, in North Frontenac, and the first time ever held in Tweed.

This picnic is being conducted in conjunction with the Old Home weekend sponsored by the Tweed branch of the Canadian Legion and will feature Joe Laflamme of Gowgama in Northern Ontario, the famous "Moose Man" with his menagerie of wild animals.

In addition there will be the usual loggers' and sawing contests, a softball game between two outstanding Toronto girls' teams, music by the Highland Pipe Band from Toronto. Miss Ruby Mann, Miss Toronto of 1950, as well as Miss Barbara McInnes, who placed second for the honor, will both be present at the picnic.

Buck Goat Guards Sheep From Dogs, Bears

Truro, N.S. — (CP) — Here's an answer for sheep herders who have been losing out to bears, dogs and foxes.

R. M. Burry, Guysborough county's agricultural representative, said

"When calling on a sheep man I was interested to hear him say he solves the bear, dog and fox problem by keeping a buck goat in the pasture with the sheep. The buck certainly keeps off the dogs, and, because of the peculiar scent . . . other animals such as bears and foxes are kept away, too.

"Who knows, perhaps he has something there!"

Peterborough Rink High in Trenton Tourney

Twenty-six rinks from all parts of the district including Belleville, Peterborough, Kingston, Trenton, Stirling, Campbellford, and Brighton, converged on Trenton, Wednesday afternoon in quest of the Benedict-Proctor trophy held last year by a Belleville rink and when the smoke of battle had cleared away, Albert Jeffries and his rink of W. Ashby, R. Payne and R. Knox won the beautiful cup and the prizes accompanying.

Morley Galt and his rink of D. Tarny, F. Dennison, and K. McCullough won the second three-game high score while a Belleville rink of Ken Ashley, Jack Lee, Cliff Argue and Fred Harper as skip won the last three-high place. The rink of G. Davies, J. Holmes, W. Fuller and Roy Brown of Trenton won the two-game high score while J. Archer, D. Bennett, W. Brady and W. S. Wiggins of Campbellford were high for one-game winners.

The greens were in good condition despite the heavy rains of the last few days and the bowling was exceptionally keen. Due to the number of rinks entered there was a double draw and the tournament was not concluded until the early hours of Thursday.

Toronto Men Remanded on Break-in Charge

Two Toronto men accused of breaking and entering the Belleville Livestock Sales Ltd. last weekend had their cases enlarged until August 17 in county court this morning. Each of the two, Clifford Blanchfield and William G. Windsor, were released on $2,000 property bail.

Both men were charged with breaking and entering with intent to steal under Section 461 of the Criminal Code. In addition, charges were made under Section 464 of the Code, with regards to possession of housebreaking tools. Further charges of dangerous driving and careless driving were made by Provincial Police.

Neither the Crown Attorney, B. C. Donnan, K.C., nor the defendants, who were represented by Carl Herman, of Toronto, were ready to proceed with the case. Neither man was formally charged with anything but the breaking and entering, but both were informed of the other charges against them.

The men were picked up late Sunday night by Provincial Police near Odessa. One of the reasons that the case was enlarged today was that identification being done at Ottawa for Crown purposes was not sufficiently advanced to continue with the case immediately. Crown Attorney Donnan originally asked for an enlargement of one week, but agreed to the two-week period when it was asked for by Mr. Herman.

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

READY TO GO!

The stage is all set. The actors are ready for their cues and tonight the curtain rises on what should be one of the softball epics of the year from a spectatorial point of view. The world champion Tip Top Tailors will arrive in the city around six o'clock and be formally greeted at the New Queen's Hotel by a committee composed of officials of the Belleville Optimists Club and the Commercial Softball League.

Manager Cy. Barriage and Coach Herby Henn have their charges of the All-Star squad ready to show their ability against Charlie Justice and company and a near-record crowd is expected to take in the game at Exhibition Grounds which gets under way at eight o'clock.

We are informed that Justice will uncork a few new capers with the softball and his performance alone is said to be worth the price of admission. Advance sales indicate a fine crowd, but there are still tickets left and if you hurry you can get seats. It is not often that Belleville sportdom has the opportunity to watch world champions in action so tonight should attract the fans in large numbers.

BEST OF LUCK!

If an athletic background has anything to do with success in one's choice of a life career, then youthful Bob Temple, "baby" member of the city's legal fraternity should do well in his chosen profession. Athletically minded since he can remember, Bob has starred in a ll kinds of sports since he toddled around the house with his "formula" in hand. He was a member of the St. Michael's football squad in 1942-43 when that team won the COSSA championship. He "caught" for the Stephens-Adamson softball team in 1944 when it went to the OASA Intermediate "A" finals and in 1946 when the team reached the semi-finals. He played intramural hockey as a goalie for St. Mike's College, Toronto, in 46-47 and was a baseball pitcher at Camp Borden while he was a member of the army.

He was catcher on the Houston softball team in the Belleville Commercial League last year and currently is playing for the Stephens-Adamson squad. Bob has "signed on" with a great team in the game of life and city and district sportsdom joins this department in best wishes for success in the future.

BLACK AND WHITE!

Two champions will be opponents when Fred Atkins and Seelie Samara clash in the main wrestling bout at the Memorial Arena on Friday night. The doughty Atkins is champion of Australia and the flashy Samara is champion of South Africa.

Good and all a wrestler that he is, Atkins has never failed to mix in a large order of the rough and rugged tactics that he has become noted for where ever he has wrestled. While Samara, the Negro sensation, is equally well noted for his talented, clean and outstanding ring work, he is no pushover for the rough disturbers of Atkins' ilk. For, without using any of the illegal stuff resorted to by Atkins, Samara has shown he can tame anybody who elects to go it the rough way. One of Seelie's big weapons in that kind of battling in his famous Ko-Ko Bump, in which he crashes his head against that of his unruly opponent, with drastic results to the opponent. His flying scissors leg trip is another that traps unwary rivals, so Atkins' lot does not appear too favorable a one as their match looms.

Two other topnotch bouts will complete the card, with Warren Bockwinkle tangling with Abe Zvonkin in the semi-final. The opening match will be Jack Moore against the Masked Marvel, who will be making his first appearance in these parts in this test.

TAKE THIS IN!

Tomorrow night at the new Canadian National Railways Athletic Association Recreation Grounds, an all-star team from the CNRAA League will match softball wits and clubs with Herbie Henn's Brewmasters of the Commercial League in an exhibition tilt. The game is that which was postponed earlier in the week due to wet grounds. However, everything is in order now and the game will get under way at seven o'clock sharp.

GOLF CLASSIC!

World-famous golfers from the United States and Canada — possibly the greatest array of golfing talent ever gathered together on a Canadian course — will be converging on the south course of Royal Montreal Golf Club late this month, with their eyes on a bonanza of more than $10,000 to say nothing of a couple of handsome trophies. The attraction is the Canadian Open Tournament which gets under way August 24.

The $10,000 in prize money is put up by the House of Seagram, with the 1950 Canadian champion to get $2,000 in first prize money as well as custody of the Seagram Gold Cup for one year and a replica of the trophy as a permanent possession. In addition, the leading Canadian professional gets possession of the Rivermead Trophy for a year and the lion's share of $800 in special prize money distributed exclusively among Canadians.

Deny Report DiMaggio Not Talking to Stengel

Detroit, Aug. 3 — (AP) — New York Yankees are hopping mad about published reports that Joe Dimaggio, star outfielder, is not talking to manager Casey Stengel.

"Anyone who knows Casey Stengel's reputation as a manager and Joe Dimaggio's reputation as a team player, will realize how ridiculous is any talk of a disagreement between them," George Weiss, Yankee general manager, said in a statement.

"For this reason the Yankees will not dignify the story by making any further comment on it."

Joe Trimble, New York Daily News baseball writer with the Yankees, reported that Dimaggio is wearing a cloak of martyrdom" because of his recent removal from the clean-up spot in the batting order. Johnny Mize now hits fourth and Dimaggio fifth.

"No one denies this great player the right to his pride," Trimble wrote, "but he is carrying things too far when he refuses to talk to the manager, curtly cuts the newspaper men who have been his friends for years and maintains a stony silence toward all but a few of his teammates."

Yankees Held Scoreless First Time This Year by Righthander As Hal White of Tigers Win

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Maybe Red Rolfe had a hunch about Hal White. Call it what you may—hunch, desperation, luck or shot-in-the-dark—the Detroit manager's move was a touch of Genius.

White, a refugee from the bullpen, gave the Tigers' pennant hopes a boost yesterday with a brilliant two-hit shutout of New York 4-0. It shot the Tigers two games out front in the American League.

The 31year-old righthander in his first starting assignment since July 4, faced only 31 men. Only singles by Gene Woodling in the third and Johnny Mize in the fourth marred his no-hit bid. He was the first righthander to hold the Yanks scoreless all year.

White did a job at the plate, too, driving in what proved to be the winning run with a second-inning single off Allie Reynolds. Tigers scored three more in the seventh on three hits, a walk and a costly throwing error by Reynolds.

Despite White's effort, the Tigers have no relief. The Yankees, clinging to second place by three percentage points, must be faced again this afternoon. And Cleveland, also two games back, becomes a more serious threat each day.

Larry Doby hit three successive homers for the Indians last night as Bob Lemon won his 17th the easy way—11-0 over Washington—allowing only three hits. It was his ninth straight victory.

Lemon Hits Homer

Lemon, a converted infielder, joined the fun with a three-run homer in the eighth.

Boston Red Sox made it 15 out of 16 over St. Louis Browns, rallying with three in the ninth for a 9-8 edge. Walt Dropo's single, following a two-run double by Vern Stephens, did the job for the Sox, now seven games behind Detroit in fourth place.

Elmer Valo hit for the cycle with a single, double, triple and homer for Philadelphia in a 10-3 triumph over Chicago.

Emory (Bubba) Church boosted the Phillies' National League lead to 3½ games with a 2-0 decision over Cincinnati. He allowed only three hits for his fifth win and second shutout.

Church drove in the first run with a single in the fourth and Del Ennis added the other with his 24th homer in the eighth.

Brooks Now Second

Brooklyn moved into second place on timely hitting by Jimmy Russell against his old Pittsburgh mates. Russell, batting right-handed against lefty Bill Werle, hit a two-run homer to tie the score in the ninth. Ralph Kiner's two-run homer in the top half had sent the Pirates ahead. Batting left-handed against right-handed Murry Dickson in the 10th, Russell won the game with a single, 5-4.

Ralph Branca scattered 12 hits for his fifth victory.

Boston's Johnny Sain clicked off his 15th win to hoist the Braves into third place over St. Louis with a 4-3 decision over the Cards, Walker Cooper's pinch single in the eighth scored Sid Gordon with the tie-breaking run off Harry Brecheen.

New York Giants climbed all over Chicago for a double victory, 11-1 and 8-6 despite three homers by the Cubs' Andy Pafko in the second game. The Giants have won 15 of 18 from Chicago this season.

TV Rights Going For Big Money In World Series

(By The Canadian Press)

Television rights for the World Series are going to go for big money this year.

It was reported in New York Wednesday that more than $500,000 has been bid for TV rights on the 1950 series, and indications are that the ultimate figure will reach $600,000.

That doesn't include the $175,000 for ordinary radio rights — paid under a contract which runs to 1956.

The reason for pushing the TV price so high is the number of sets on which the series can be viewed. Last year there were only 1,750,000 sets able to get the series. This year it will be about 5,000,000 and that means a potential audience of 20,000,000 will watch the series on television.

John Robertson of the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club and Garfield Gould of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, Montreal, won the first two races of the Royals Regatta at Toronto Wednesday.

The Hamilton club held a slight lead in point - standings over the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club at the end of the first day of the three-day small - boat regatta. Seven clubs from all parts of Canada are competing in the meet.

Citation, sidelined for several weeks with an ankle injury, is back in training at Washington Park and will race again, his trainer said in Chicago Wednesday.

The world's leading money - winner, with $938,630, missed last week's $75,000 Arlington Handicap. He has not raced since losing to Noor at Golden Gate, Calif., June 24.

Ben Jones, who with his son, Jimmy, trains the five-year-old thoroughbred, said he has had Citation walked under a saddle with weight up and that he appears "sound."

Gerry Magee and Lionel Barber of Toronto carded a two-over-par 73 to win the Ontario Golf Association's Junior Best-Ball Tournament at Toronto's Summit Golf Club Wednesday.

One stroke behind the winners were Ron McAlpine and Ramsay MacDonald of Hamilton and Jack McLaughlin and Bob Pezzack of Scarboro.

Featherweight champion Willie Pep was the master boxer Wednesday night as he easily outpointed Proctor Heinold, Oklahoma City, in a 10-round non-title scrap at Scranton, Pa. Both fighters weighed 131 1-4 pounds.

Pep was given all 10 rounds by referee Jack Walton and one of the judges--Ken Werst. Judge Joe Capristo marked nine rounds for the champion and called the sixth even. There were no knockdowns.

The fight was Pep's last before he defends his crown against Sandy Saddler next month.

Sixteen-year-old Larry Heim of the California Swimming Club of Los Angeles Wednesday broke the senior men's 200-yard Canadian backstroke record in final events at the 4th annual regatta at Kelowna, B.C.

Helm covered the four laps in tow minutes, 23.1 seconds to clip nine-tenths of a second off the mark set by Gordon Kerr of Ontario in 1938.

Two of the world's most celebrated swimmers tapered off training Wednesday for a three-day duel beginning tomorrow.

New York, Aug. 3 — (AP) — The U. S. Trotting Association reported today that Imperial Hanover, a $72,000 yearling purchase at the 1949 Harrisburg, Pa. sales, had been retired for an ankle injury. This was an all-time high price for standard - bred horses at auction.

The colt, owned by J. J. McIntyre of Hollins, Va., has been turned out on the farm.

Imperial Hanover is a full brother to Rodney and Egan Hanover, leading trotters several years ago.

The Corbin Gold Trophy

Cream of Ontario Bowlers Here In Quest of Corbin Gold Trophy

Blue-ribbon classic of Ontario lawn bowlers, the Eighth Annual Corbin Gold Trophy Men's Rinks Tournament, gets under way on the spacious greens of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club on Monday, August 7th (Civic Holiday).

The tournament will attract sixty-four rinks of the cream of Ontario bowlers as well as those from Quebec. This means that 256 lawn keglers will be in the city on Monday, and together with their wives, sweethearts and friends, will cause an influx of 350 visitors to the city.

The Corbin Gold Trophy was donated by the Corbin Lock Company of Belleville eight years ago for annual competition in men's rinks. The popularity of the tournament sprang up practically overnight. Since the first competition, applications for entries have been of such volume many late aspirants have been turned away. This year the entry list of 64 rinks was filled long before the date of the event.

Eighteen handsome prizes, exclusive of the Gold Trophy, have been donated by merchants and others of the city and in addition the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club has donated a silver cigarette box for the winner of the "Spider."

The prizes now being shown in the windows of the Public Utilities office here are attracting the admiring gaze of hundreds of Front Street pedestrians.

Entry List Representative

The entry list of the tournament is thoroughly representative of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association. Rinks will be here from Ottawa, Peterborough, Lindsay, Kingston, Trenton, Cornwall, Toronto, Montreal, Campbellford, Brockville, Windsor, Havelock, Stirling, Cobourg, Madoc, Elora, Verdun, Que., Brighton and other centres.

General chairman of the tournament and president of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association Cliff Argue stated today that six Belleville rinks will participate in the tournament. These will be skipped by A. E. Wonnacott, president of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club; A. E. McLean, general manager, Corbin Lock Company; E. W. Vanner, F. G. Harper, A. Watkin and C. Clapp.

The Corbin Trophy went to the Corbin rink in 1949. It was skipped by E. H. McLean.

The tournament gets under way at 9.30 Monday morning when the first draw rinks take the greens. The second draw starts at 11.30 a.m.

C.R.U. Claims 2 Players Belong To Edmonton Club

Toronto, Aug. 3 — (CP) — Theoretically, Jackie Stewart and Earl Valiquette are Edmonton-bound today, and ready to help the Eskimos try for a Western Canada Football Union title.

The Canadian Rugby Union yesterday gave its verdict to the tug-of-war between Eskimos and Hamilton Tiger-Cats for the two players, telling them to head west. But Stewart and Valiquette were in no apparent hurry to catch a train. Both said they have good jobs in Hamilton and plan to stay there.

Stewart, a high-scoring back with Hamilton Tigers of the Ontario Rugby Football Union last season and Valiquette, a lineman with Hamilton Wildcats of the Interprovincial Union, had signed contracts with the Tiger-Cats — a merger of the two Hamilton clubs — but had signed C.R.U. playing certificates binding them to Edmonton.

At yesterday's meeting, the C. R.U. executive ruled that the certificates were valid, nullifying any contract Stewart and Valiquette might sign with another club.

Case Not Closed

The Tiger-Cat executive said the club did not consider the case closed and indicated it might be taken to court. The Hamilton club said the players had committed themselves to sign C.R.U. certificates binding them to Hamilton under their contracts.

Jack Reesor, solicitor for the Tiger-Cats, said both players would continue to practise with the club, despite the C.R.U.'s warning they would not be permitted to play for any club other than Edmonton.

Al Anderson, manager of the Eskimos who came east to fight the case, said "the C.R.U. has made a decision and it is up to them to enforce it," adding that Stewart and Valiquette were definitely included in Eskimo plans. Any possible court action would be fought by the Tiger-Cats and C.R.U., he said.

Stewart and Valiquette told The Canadian Press last night that they planned to stay in Hamilton, even if it meant giving up football.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—As of today New York Yankees are 3-2 favorites to win their second straight American League pennant and their third in the last four years.

Detroit Tigers are second choice at 2-1, the surging Cleveland Indians third at 13-5 and Boston Red Sox at 7-2.

The first thought that might occur to ball fans is "what are those Yanks doing up there again—haven't they had the miseries all season and haven't some of the best minds agreed that this is Detroit's year?"

The answer is, well, yes. One of the champions' greatest stars, Tommy Henrich, has played but rarely because of a damaged knee and Joe DiMaggio plainly has slipped badly. Joe Page, their fabled relief pitcher, hasn't been worth his found for a month. And Detroit has, indeed, put on a tremendous show under Red Rolfe's guidance.

Bit Bats Talk

But—well, look at the figures. During July, Casey Stengel's has-beens won 19 gains and lost eight. That was their exact won-lost standing a year ago. They smashed 27 home runs while their pitchers yielded only 16.

Big John Mize, who barely escaped another trip to the minors less than a month ago, hit like a mad-man in the clean-up spot. So did Tommy Brown, whom Stengel installed at third in a sort of desperation move.

Even the two reliefers obtained from St. Louis, Tom Ferrick and Joe Ostrowski, in a deal which brought an avalanche of criticism upon the sensitive head of general manager George Weiss, contributed some gaudy work.

While this was happening to the Stengelmen, it gradually became apparent in recent weeks that Detroit's fine pitching staff, which had been counted upon to propel the Tigers to the pennant, was feeling the strain of overwork.

Virgil Trucks has been out since May with a sore arm, and now Rolfe has only seven sound pitchers. He has converted, veteran Dizzy Trout, his best relief man, into a starter, and has used his big four—Newhouser, Houtteman, Hutchinson and Gray—in relief 21 times.

Injuns Heap Big Threat

As for Cleveland, anyone who wishes to risk his roll on Boudreau's boys would do well to grab the current odds. They will get a lot shorter before they get longer.

Boudreau, scenting the big chance, is playing great shortstop and powering the hits again. Huge Luke Easter, the Negro rookie, is scaring pitchers to death. Bob Lemon is proving what had been suspected—he is just about the best pitcher in the game today.

The Red Sox? The tempation is strong, now and then, to give up on Steve O'Neill's gladiators. But as a man was saying just the other day, don't.

They're knocking the cover off the ball out west, he said, and pretty soon they'll open a long home stand in Fenway Park, where they are hard to shave. Hold off a while yet, the man urged.

Around the Home ...

TOM GARD'S NOTE BOOK

It seems as if most people have a struggle to furnish their first home. We visited newlyweds last weekend and it was almost like reliving our own first few months! They will succeed, though, as first things had been put first and improvisation took care of the rest. One of their best "makeshifts" was a hall table. His parents had modernized an old sideboard by removing the top section—mirror and all. The top shelf and two supports had been left intact; a third leg was placed in the centre at the back and then braces run to the other two legs. It made an ideal hall table for the telephone and hadn't cost a cent. Even the mirror had been resilvered, etched and mounted on half-inch plywood, making an inexpensive hall mirror.

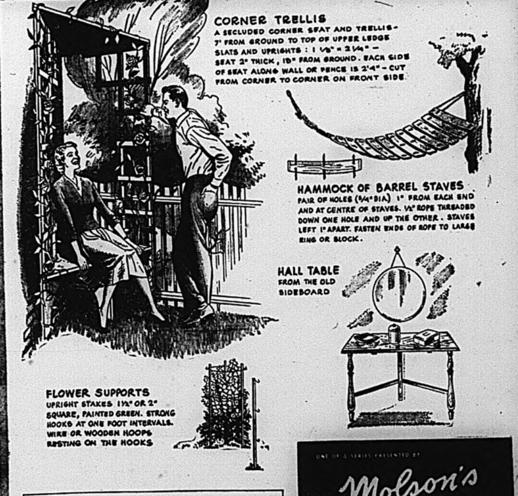
Barrel-Stave Hammock

If you would like a hammock to hang under your favourite tree but must pamper a limited budget, try the idea developed by a neighbour down the street. Holes were bored in old barrel staves and then threaded with half-inch rope. You'll see how it was done by examining the diagram shown. A heavy blanket or old sleeping bag will make the hammock quite comfortable.

Corner Garden Seat

If you wish a garden trellis in a half-pint backyard, don't stick it out in the centre of the lawn like a sore thumb. Arbours and gateways should lead somewhere; high trellises should terminate some line of vision. One of the best ideas I have seen for a small garden combined the trellis with a corner garden seat. It was most attractive and a solid mass of blue morning glories when I last saw it.

I notice some of my perennials are beginning to fall over. In case you haven't suitable flower supports for your garden, here is the type I have been using for years. They are easy to apply and just as easy to store away in the fall.



CORNER TRELLIS
A SECLUDED CORNER SEAT AND TRELLIS - 7' FROM GROUND TO TOP OF UPPER LEDGE SLATS AND UPRIGHTS : 1 ⅛" × 2¼" — SEAT 2" THICK, 18" FROM GROUND. EACH SIDE OF SEAT ALONG WALL OR FENCE IS 2'4" - CUT FROM CORNER TO CORNER ON FRONT SIDE
HAMMOCK OF BARREL STAVES
HALL TABLE FROM THE OLD SIDEBOARD
FLOWER SUPPORTS
UPRIGHT STAKES 1½" OR 2" SQUARE, PAINTED GREEN. STRONG HOOKS AT ONE FOOT INTERVALS. WIRE OR WOODEN HOOPS RESTING ON THE HOOKS

More about these and many other ideas in the booklet "AROUND THE HOME". Write for your copy to Tom Gard, c/o MOLSON'S (Ontario) LIMITED, P.O. Box 490, Adelaide St. Station, Toronto.

Oshawa Defeats N. Electric Girls By 9-2 Score

Pouncing on Ann McGrath's delivery for six hits and five runs in the ninth inning the Westmount Wildcats, out of Oshawa, defeated the Northern Electric Ladies by a 9-2 score at Alemite Field last night to take the first game of the Lakeshore Intermediate Ladies Softball League finals. The second game will be played in Radio Park, Oshawa, on Saturday afternoon.

The game was closely fought up to the disastrous ninth with the score at 4-2. The less-experienced Northern girls put up a plucky fight against their heavier opposition and are to be commended for their fine showing.

McGrath went the route for Northern and allowed eight hits up to the last inning. She struck out three and walked five.

Elongated B. Beamish led the homesters down with six hits, three of them coming in the last inning. She struck out five and at times developed a streak of wildness walking eight all evening. She blanked the Northern gals for eight innings, both of the homsters' runs coming in the sixth when Beamish issued four free passes.

Westmounts scored one run each in the second, fourth, fifth and seventh and shoved over five in the ninth when McGrath weakended.

Shackleton, Bilenduke, Kutasunskie, Peters and Bowine had two hits each for Westmounts. Hitters for Northern were, B. Reeves, I. Seguin, P. Jardine, K. Mills, B. Robson and Ann McGrath.

The teams — Oshawa Westmounts — Peters, 3b; Russel cf; Beamish p; Bowine c; Hyrcanuk, 1b; Kutansunski 2b; Bilenduke lf; Stuart ss; Shackleton rf.

Northern Electic — B. Reeves c; I Seguin 2b; P. Jardine 1b; K. Mills cf; B. Robson ss; C. Waite rf; A. Atkinson lf; H. Reeves 3b; A. McGrath p.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You are speaking of the one I love, frowns Elva Tyme when my lesson relegates a singleton lead to third place. It is as if a law had just passed to prohibit her from using lipstick.

Leads follow the order of choice in tops, longies, shorts. A singleton is a short. So, rule makes it third choice. It is assumed to be favorable only when a top or long suit lead is undesirable.

Even then a singleton lead is favorable only under additional conditions. The added conditions are that leader should also have in trumps the ace with at least one more or the king with two more.

Reasons? Hope of a singleton lead is to find partner with the ace. If he lacks the ace the singleton lead may wreck his best card. This means the loss of a trick for the defending side.

To compensate for this possibility the leader should have some good chance to get back a trick some other way. He must be able to stop trump leads before his small trumps are all gone.

Even so there is no guarantee that partner will still get in before the trumps are taken from the leader. But it is some small hope for compensation in case the singleton lead helps lose a trick.

What I am trying to impress here is that a singleton lead may lose a trick for your side. If such a gamble is taken, give yourself a reasonable gamble that you may get it back some other way.

South is declarer at four spades when west has this hand:

♥A 6 2
♠K 7 4 2
♣K 7 4 3 2

West should not lead away from a king against a suit contract. So the singleton diamond lead becomes favorable; that is, not so objectionable. Especially with a trump stopper.

If east does not have the diamond ace, west can stop the pull of trumps at once. He may then find an entry to east for a diamond return that his small trump ruffs. Just a little insurance.

LEFTISTS CLASH WITH POLICE

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—Leftist "peace" marchers—banned from heavily-guarded Union Square—defiantly clashed with police Wednesday in a tense, noisy brawl. Fists flew at times and several injuries were reported. At least one window was smashed. Thirteen of the marchers were arrested, most of them charged with disorderly conduct or assault.

AT THE McCARTHY — Audie Murphy and Wanda Hendrix head the large cast of Universal-International's Technicolor western, "Sierra," now playing at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre, filmed in scenic southern Utah. The film's large supporting cast includes Burl Ives, America's Troubador, and Dean Jagger, 1949 "Oscar" winner for his outstanding supporting performance in "Twelve O'Clock High."

AT THE BELLE — Who has "Paid in Full" and for what? is explained by Lizabeth Scott, Robert Cummings and Diana Lynn in the triangular romantic drama, showing today and Friday. Eve Arden heads the featured cast of the drama.

Movie Column

By GLORIA YARBROUGH

Hollywood, Aug. 3 — (AP) — Now I've heard everything. Cagney will do a ballet number in "The West Point Story."

You wouldn't recognize Jimmy these days, if your mental image has him talking tough and toting a rod. He is acting very un-Cagneyish.

He likes the change of character, but "it's kinda hard on the old man." He's 46 but looks younger.

Cagney is a part-time hoofer. Press agents build him up as a threat to Astaire and Gene Kelleyley, but that sort of stuff actually embarasses the guy. He's just a so-so dancer.

Versatile Jimmy

Versatility is what keeps actors alive. After two pictures in which he played psychological killers, Jimmy felt it was time for a change. In addition to the ballet, he does a routine that has all the earmarks of a Danny Kaye specialty. Yesterday Cagney was dressed in oversize clothing, with medals dangling fore and aft. He plays a six-star general in one scene and he also does a scene in French, but doesn't understand a word he says. Just learned it parrot-fashion.

Quote of the Week

When Ted Briskin made up with his wife Betty Hutton and called off the divorce, he said:

"It isn't good for married people to be constantly in each other's company. When we both realized that, we readily agreed that it was the solution to our difficulties."

Bases-on-Balls In Last Frame Beat Giants

By The Associated Press

Add Joe Becker, manager of Jesey City Giants of the International League, to the growing list of managers who are moaning, "Oh, those bases on balls."

The Giants, behind Tony West, entered the ninth inning of last night's game in Montreal leading the Royals 4-1 when bases-on-balls gremlins showed up.

With two on and two out West began to falter. He yielded singles to pinch-hitter Dick Teed and Al Gionfriddo and was lifted in favor of Herman Fox with the Giants still leading 4-3.

Fox walked Walt Fiala and Don Thompson to force home the tying run and then passed Johnny Welaj to bring in Teed with the runs that gave the Royals a 5-4 victory.

Turk Lown, Ronnie Lee and Al Epperly worked for the Royals with Epperley gaining credit for the victory, his seventh of the season.

The triumph enabled the Royals to move within 1-2 game of the second-place Baltimore Orioles who split a doubleheader with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Ray Poat pitched the Orioles to a 2-1 six-hit victory in the opener but the Leafs bounced back to grab the finale 6-5.

Al Cihocki won the opener for the Orioles when he banged his 12th homer in the sixth inning breaking a 1-1 tie. The Leafs jumped on Karl Drews for four runs in the first inning of the nightcap but the Orioles tied the score at 5-5 in the seventh only to have the Leafs come back in their half and snap the tie and win.

Syracuse Chiefs upset the league-leading Rochester Red Wings 7-5 to cut the Wings' lead over Baltimore to 3 1-2 games.

Syracuse won out in the ninth, scoring twice to break a 5-5 draw. Three straight hits off reliefer Mike Schultz, a former Chief, turned the tide for Syracuse.

Buffalo Bisons and Springfield Cubs divided a doubleheader. The Cubs took the first game 3-1 behind Bill Mosian and the Bisons won the nightcap 10-8 in a game that was called after seven innings because of rain.

HYBRID CORN

Hybrid corn will be used in France to increase domestic production.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was peeling potatoes and I was watching her and wishing she was mixing a cake instead, and she started to talk out loud to herself, saying, Oh dear, sutch a day.

Why, ma, what happened? I said, and she said, Absilutely nuthing, that's just the trubble. It's just been a day of unrelieved petty details without a single break or a solitary ray of unexpected variety. But if you live to be a hundred you'll never know the monotoniss sameness of a day's housekeeping, she said.

Not even if I keep house for myself? I said, and ma said, I haven't even a movie to look fallward to tonite. Your father wont show the slightest intrist in a single picture in town, because there's not a horse or a gun in any of them. Oh dear, sutch a day, she said.

Oh well, cheer up, ma, I said, and she said, Why should I, have you any cheerful news for me?

Sure, ma, who do you think is coming tonite after supper? I said, and she said, Do you meen to say somebody telefoned and you never told me?

Yes mam, but G, ma, I'm telling you now, I said, and ma said, Are Mr. and Mrs Hews coming over for bridge, by any chance?

No mam, I said, Guess again. I'll give you 3 guesses, I said, and ma said, Thanks for your generosity but I'm not in a guessing mood. Now I want to know who's coming tonight, and I want to know this instant without any mistery. Who's coming? she said.

Puds Simkins, I said. He's got some new duplicate stamps, and he's coming to see if he wants to swap for any of my duplicates in case I want to swap for any of his, I said, and she said, Oh get out of my kitchen and stay out, sutch a boy.

Meening me.

TANKS TRYING TO STAVE OFF RED OFFENSIVE NEAR PUSAN

A General Pershing tank, one of the trainloads of American tanks rushed to the Korean battlefront, is shown in action firing at hill positions. It is this mechanized equipment plus fresh American troops that are currently engaged in fighting to stave off a tremendous communist offensive along the whole 200-mile front. It is reported that U.S. troops, using Sherman tanks, are counter-attacking in the south in an attempt to regain lost positions near Masan. This seaport on the southern coast, only 38 miles from the vital supply port of Pusan, is among most recent towns to fall to North Korean troops. Abandonment of Kumchon, on the central front, to red troops brings the enemy within 30 miles of Taega, key rail and highway centre. Success by invaders would mean a defence split in two. — Central Press Canadian.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

Brent wheeled then, saw the letter in Jenny's hand and reached for it eagerly. "I've been waiting for this," he said, and in spite of his effort at control, he sounded a little breathless. He paused, his finger already under the flap of the envelope, and said, "Pray for me, girls!" then ripped it open.

For a minute they stood motionless, like figures in a tableau, until Brent let out a whoop of joy. "I've got it! They like the work, and I'm to get the contract."

He caught Jenny up into his arms, kissed her soundly, and whirled her around the studio in a swift dance. And Jenny, her face flushed, her eyes shining, skimming the floor with feet that barely touched it, knew in that moment that he had her heart, too.

"Jenny, what are you doing?"

The voice came through one of the open windows, and Jenny whirled to see who it was. Elsa Torres stood on the porch, shaking her head.

"I've called you and called you, and I rang the bell twice, and that wonderful watchdog of yours, or Mrs. Folsom's rather, just came to the door as silent as a ghost and wagged his tail at me. Didn't make a sound, the wretch!"

"He knew I was trying to get my accounts done," Jenny confessed, hurrying to let her in.

"Oh, dear," Elsa said in a shocked voice. "Do you really do them Pete and I buy a ledger at the ten cent store every year, and letter the different pages, an usually manage to put down our first week's expenses, but that's as far as it ever gets. In the first place, we can't remember to write things down, and if we do happen to have a brainstorm of that kind then we can't remember how much things cost. Or something!" she waved the whole subject aside with a careless gesture. "It's just one more complication of modern life. I say, as long as I've some money in my purse and a little in the bank, who cares where the rest went?"

Jenny sat down in the wing chair and leaned her head back gratefully. "I wish I could do that," she said. "But I can't. I don't keep acount of every cent that goes out, naturally, but I do save my bills, and I do know what has come into the household fund, and I try to make sure that there's not a terrible discrepancy at the end of the month. It's surprising, too, how complicated things can get. I've got Ghillie's food money to keep track of and Brent's rent."

Elsa's peal of laughter was merry. "Brent's rent!" she chortled. "It sounds like a country estate in England. Why on earth do you have to keep that separate?"

"Well, I don't have to," Jenny admitted. "But I try to put that money on Natalie's acount, because it's her studio, and if she's willing to share it, she's entitled to the money."

"Good grief, that's leaning over backwards, Jenny. The house belongs to you as well as to Natalie. Including the studio. Besides," she added suddenly, "I'll bet that lad stays here for a good many of his meals. I know your hospitality, and he knows what a good cook you are. It would be beyond normal man to refuse if he were asked to stay, and you probably ask him often."

Jenny blushed, "Well, of course. But he's practically a member of the family. He's half lived here for years."

"Hmmm," Elsa smiled at her, shaking her head at the same time. "I think I'll start hanging around here myself. Thing of the free meals. And what meals!"

Jenny said, in Brent's defense, "But he brings an awful lot of food to the house as his share. Time and again he supplies the meat, and you know what that means these days, Elsa. He's no sponger."

She was breathing fast and Elsa said hurriedly, "I was just kidding, Jenny. I know what a sterling character Brent is." But she looked at Jenny curiously, and Jenny had the feeling suddenly that her secret was bared to the world, that anyone who looked at her would know how she felt about Brent.

She changed the subject quickly. "This has been a day, Elsa. So much happening. To begin with, Fred's found a woman who will take care of their home, and that will leave Diane free to go on with her modeling. And Brent—"

But Elsa interrupted. "You mean, Di's going to go back to him?"

Her question showed how clearly their friends had understood the situation. Jenny realized that all her talk of a temporary stay with the family had simply been accepted on the surface—that people had realized very well what had happened to the Fred Barbours.

She said quietly, "She has gone back."

"Well! That's good news. But you say she's going to go on with the modeling," Elsa was thoughtful as she pondered on the news of Diane's return to her husband. "She's a natural for it, of course, but still it won't do her mariage any good. There are some women who can swing that sort of thing, but there are women who have a strong domestic streak as well as good looks, a photogenic quality, and the ability to work at a strenuous job like modeling. But Di—I don't know." She said suddenly, "Does this mean she'll go on seeing so much of Jack Tyson?"

It was putting into words the worry which had nagged at Jenny all afternoon, and she said slowly, "I—I suppose so. After all—"

"After all, he's not going to let a beauty like Di out of his clutches without an effort to keep her," Elsa supplied. "Well, perhaps it will work out, but I don't know. Those parties he has can get pretty wild sometimes."

"But—but Fred will be along now," Jenny stammered.

"I wonder." Elsa did not say more, but she left Jenny feeling distressed. Surely now Fred would make every effort to accompany Diane in the evenings. And Di wouldn't want to go places without him. But she felt very much as if Di's marriage were a fragile glass globe, poised atop a high wall. The first strong wind of mischance would send it hurtling to destruction. Elsa leaned back, clasped her hands behind her head. "I came over for a reason, Jenny. Don't you want to know what it is?"

Jenny roused. "Of course I do."

"Well, prepare for a shock. Pete's son is coming to live with us."

Jenny was surprised. "Pete's son!" she echoed. "Why I didn't know he had one."

"Not many people do," Elsa confessed. "Not many people know that he was married before." She bent forward suddenly her elbows on her knees, and stared at the carpet. "He married when he was still in college—some snip of a girl—and the honeymoon wasn't over before he knew what a fool he'd been. I don't think they lived together more than a couple of months. But it was long enough to produce Dick. She treated Pete horribly. Went off to get the divorce without letting him know he was going to be a father. Of course, she got the custody. The awful part is that she's hated having the child all these years."

Jenny shook her head. "Goodness, we had no idea," she began, but Elsa was in full spate.

"Pete has supported the boy, naturally, and she has "allowed" him to see the child once in a while. They're perfect strangers to each other, as you can imagine. Now, out of the blue, when Dick is fourteen, she has snared another unsuspecting male, and is going to get married again. And she doesn't want Dick cluttering up the new marriage, so she has magnanimously decided that Pete can have him. In fact, she has practically dumped the boy in his lap!"

"But what will you do?" Jenny wanted to know. "Do you have room?" The Torres bungalow had four rooms with attached garage. There was a large living room, a kitchen, two bedrooms and a bath. "Where will you put him?" For Jenny was remembering that Elsa used the extra bedroom for her sewing and designing.

Elsa said, with a rather grim smile, "I'm giving him my work room, and Pete is going to have the attic finished so that I can work up there."

"But you'll stifle in summer! Can't you build on?"

Elsa shook her head. "Have you any idea what it costs to build today? The lowest estimate we had for one small room was two thousand dollars. And we haven't got it Jenny."

Jenny's brain frantically explored other possibilities. "How about renting a place for your work? Have you thought of that?"

"I think we've thought of every thing possible," Elsa said, with the quietness of despair. "But in the first place, there isn't anything to rent in Green Ridge, and in the second place, we couldn't afford that, either. Not for long, at any rate."

"But where will you put him while you're making the alterations?"

"I would have managed under ordinary circumstances. I would have put a cot for him in my work room, until the attic was finished. But even the simplest sort of job on the attic is going to cost so much that I shall have to work twice as hard for a while. You know how small that room is, Jenny. If I double my work there won't even be room for his cot. And I think it would be horrid to expect the poor kid to sleep in the middle of a lot of feminine furbelows, to watch his step every minute for fear he'll tear something, or step on something. I'm not too neat, you know, and I do leave things lying around," she added parenthetically. "And besides, he should have his own things around him. No, I can think of only one solution." She glanced up hopefully at Jenny, and said, with significance, "It just came to me when you said Di had gone back to Fred."

Jenny was taken aback. "You don't mean we should take him!" she cried.

Elsa nodded. "It wouldn't be for long, Jenny. Really it wouldn't. We'd rush the work like everything, so as to take him off your hands as soon as possible. But he's coming in less than a week, and we've got to find a place for him!"

Jenny said, "I'd have to talk this over with Natalie. And I'd have no idea what to charge."

"Oh, but you would," Elsa said triumphantly. She sensed that her battle was won, and could hardly keep the elation out of her voice. "You do keep accounts. You do have some idea what you spend for food, for instance. Well, add on some extra—he may be a big eater for all I know. Boys of that age often are. And then a charge for the rent of his room. I'd attend to his laundry and all that. Oh, Jenny, please say yes!"

But Jenny only reiterated, "I couldn't without Natalie's consent. It's her house as well as mine."

And Elsa said stubbornly, "If you feel that she's entitled to Brent's rent, I don't see why you wouldn't be entitled to Dick's. You'd be the one to do the work."

Poor Health, Stomach Disorders For Years

Spent Small Fortune in Vain Search for Relief, Says Syntona Gave Better Results Than Anything Else. "Eat Better, Sleep Better, Feel Better."

MR. R. V. FENTON

MR. R. V. FENTON, 349 Barton Street East, Hamilton, Ontario is glad to pass his experience along to others because he knows what it means to get relief after suffering with poor health which followed a rheumatic attack during his Army service many years ago.

"It seemed there were so many things wrong that I hardly knew where to start. My stomach was especially bad, causing gas, indigestion, cramps, and sour acid risings no matter how careful I was of my diet. I would get very bad headaches and my nerves were often so on edge I couldn't get my proper sleep at night. Actually I never felt well, was always tired, and had no energy.

"During those years I tried just about everything I heard of, but I can truly say I have received more relief and satisfaction through taking Syntona than anything else I ever used. I eat better, sleep better and have less trouble with my stomach now than for many years before. I also feel better generally, nerves are calmed down, and I don't get tired so easily as I used to.

"I certainly can recommend Syntona very highly to any person who suffers as I did."

Why not give this Pure Herbal Medicine which has helped so many people a chance to help you, too? It is pleasant to take and the results are quickly felt.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

CANADIAN FORCE OF 4,000 MAY GO TO KOREA

Strong Red Drive For Pusan Stopped By Counter-Attack

600 Enemy Dead Counted On One Sector of Front

Tokyo, Aug. 4 (Saturday) (AP)—American forces battling to hold southeast Korea stopped strong communist units in the north Korean all-out push today to cover the few remaining miles to Pusan.

A United States counter-attack turned the battle.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hedaquarters, in a summary at 1:10 a.m. (10:10 a.m. EDT Friday) said 600 enemy dead had been counted on one front alone through Thursday.

The summary, some 24 hours behind front line reports, said 45 enemy tanks reported advancing to the battlefront turned out to be the hulks of burned-out machines abandoned along the road from Taejon to Chinju.

The original report of these tanks as a threat to the south came from briefing officers at MacArthur's headquarters late Friday.

Heavy Near Wonbung

The heavy fighting for the western approaches to Pusan, U.S. base on the southeastern tip of the peninsula 40 miles from the battlefront, was near the village of Wonbung, 10 miles east of Chinju.

The U.S. 25th division bore the brunt of attack with the probability of United States marine and other support in the battle or about to enter it.

A small reconnaissance patrol of marines saw 11 armed Koreans on a hill overlooking the marine position. No shots were exchanged in this, the first front-line contact the marines have had during the six-week war.

Sixteen Americans were killed and 40 wounded in a fight near the marines' position.

(The communists were believed to be massing up to three divisions for the south coast struggle, rushing infantry reinforcements along the west-coast corridor by night and deploying them southward from Kochang, which lies about 40 miles southwest of Taegu, Reuters said.)

New Clash Shaping Up

To the north, communist artillery shells arched into U.S. 1st Cavalry Division positions near Taegu, 55 miles northwest of Pusan along the new Allied Naktong River barrier line on the central front. A new clash was shaping up there.

Both sides probed and punched with men and tanks in the confusing engagement in the southern area. The North Koreans slipped to within 37 miles of Pusan at the village of Pongam, 18 miles east of Chinju. But an American regimental combat team erased that threat.

An American tank-infantry task force that fought 22 miles behind the enemy lines killed more than 600 reds 35 miles west of Pusan Thursday. The North Koreans, in regimental force, were trying to reach the port city of Masan, 27 air miles west of Pusan, and were intercepted by the battalion of infantrymen, who had bivouaced there after withdrawing from the front.

Russian Policy Of Having Huge Stock Paying Off

Washington, Aug. 4. (AP)—A war-tested Russian policy—accumulation of a huge stockpile of arms before embarking on a campaign—seems to be paying off for the North Koreans.

Since Russia generally is supposed to have mapped the plans for the attack on the Republic of South Korea and to be directing it now by remote control, it is assumed that all the vital planning of supplies was dictated by Russian army experts.

During the Second World War, Russia sometimes exasperated her western Allies by delaying a needed offensive against the Germans for weeks and months. Not until she had built up vast supply dumps, far beyond any foreseeable requirements,' would she launch the offensive.

The practice was applied to Russia's satellite army of North Koreans.

Ability of the North Koreans to maintain their offensive at peak intensity now raises a question about an earlier assumption that the reds' war plan was to complete their conquest before aid could come to the South Koreans. They wouldn't have needed to stockpile mountains of ammunition and hundreds of tanks to beat down an opponent armed with only light defensive weapons intended for internal security.

It seems now they reckoned with the definite possibility the United States would step into the picture.

The North Korean armament stockpile probably had its start when the large Russian army of occupation withdrew from North Korea about two years ago in a political move to hurry the American occupation force into pulling out.

To this substantial initial stockpile was added quantities of other materiel from surplus stocks of the Russian military. This build-up probably continued up to the moment the Korean war started.

RECRUITS COMING FAST

London, Aug. 4 (Reuters) —Recruits for Britain's new atomic civil defence service are coming in at the rate of nearly 3,000 a month, the Home Office announced last night.

SECOND STEEPLEJACK DIES

Kingston, Aug. 4. (CP)—Injured July 27, when he fell 70 feet from the steeple of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church at Centreville, Robert Ingram of St. Catharines, died today in hospital.

Victor Vacharesse of St. Catharines, who fell from the steeple at the same time died last Saturday.

The two men were working from a scaffold when the accident occurred.

U.K. WILL BOOST DEFENCE SPENDING IF U.S. ASSISTS

Would Spread Proposed Outlay Over 3 Years

London, Aug. 4 — (AP)—Britain announced last night she is ready to boost her defence spending to £3,400,000,000 ($10,540,000,000 Canadian) over the next three years if the United States will help her economy absorb the shock.

If agreement with the U.S. can be worked out — and U. S. State Department officials indicated it could be — Britain will be adding about £220,000,000 a year to her current defence expenditure.

The proposed outlay would be 43 per cent greater than military spending announced before the Korean War started and would increase from eight to 10 per cent the portion of the national income spent on military preparations against communism. It almost equals the entire budget outlay for the current fiscal year.

Mostly for Arms

The announcement indicated that most of the increase would go for production of new arms and equipment for Atlantic Pact forces.

Britain's offer to enlarge her contributions to western defence came in the form of a memorandum to the U. S. replying to an American request for such information.

President Truman told a press conference in Washington last night he was pleased with Britain's offer.

The statement said the total cost of the project "would be so heavy that it would be impossible to carry out the full program without substantial United States assistance in addition to completion of the European recovery program."

In return Britain offered to help meet the "deficiencies in equipment of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces of other nations."

In her memorandum, Britain pointed out she has large trained manpower reserves. She declared the "most urgent need is to increase production of defence equipment."

The memorandum indicated the British government is resigned to a slowing down of efforts at economic recovery but "they are anxious to make this effort as their contribution to the defence of a free world in the present threatening situation."

The statement indicated the program would be carried out without the full controls used during the Second World War. It said:

"It is the largest program practicable within the period envisaged and without restoring the direction of labor, the requisitioning of factories, or embarking on the slow progress of building and equipment new industrial capacity which could not have rapid results."

ONE ASIAN PEACE PACT

Prejudice Greatest Handicap to Deaf Persons Says Secretary of Assoc.

Windsor, Aug. 4. (CP) — The greatest handicap of deaf persons is not deafness itself, but prejudice and misunderstandings R. E. McBrien, secretary of the Ontario Association of the Deaf, said Thursday night.

He told the opening meeting of the Association's biennial convention that Ontario's deaf citizens, organized under the Ontario Association of the Deaf since 1866, find it necessary to band together to attain their objectives.

Using finger spelling and hand signs to address the delegates, from across Ontario and from nearby Michigan districts, Mr. McBrien said that present friendly relations between deaf organizations in Canada and the United States may some day draw them together into one unit.

He said the O.A.D. is continuing its efforts to obtain reforms at the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville to have finger spelling and signs used by teachers in addition to the present system of speech and lip reading.

A review of education methods for the deaf was given by Edmund B. Boatner, superintendent of the American School for the Deaf at West Hartford, Conn.

Mr. Boatner opposed a present tendency to appoint persons as heads of schools who have no training in teaching the deaf.

Language is more important than speech, he said. Knowledge of languages enables a child to read and write and opens the door to all the world's knowledge.

Mitchell's Death and World Events May Cause Reshuffle Of Federal Cabinet Soon

Ottawa, Aug. 4 — (CP) Death of Labor Minister Mitchell and the tense international situation may lead Prime Minister St. Laurent to reshuffle his cabinet soon.

It is known that until a month ago Mr. St. Laurent had no plans for changes in his cabinet. But the situation has changed since then.

Canadian participation in the Korean conflict has increased the duties of Defence Minister Claxton, now in charge of all three branches of the defence services. There has been some speculation that an additional minister might be appointed to share the burden if the international situation becomes more acute.

In the Second World War, there was a separate minister for each of the three defence forces.

There have been some indications that a fall session of Parliament will be called, possibly in September or October, to authorize the sending of ground forces to Korea. Any cabinet changes likely would be made before such a session.

The session might also be asked to authorize revival of the Munitions and Supply Department which operated during the Second World War and handled the production, supply and purchasing of material needed by the armed forces.

The government has ready a blueprint of plans for re-establishment of the department.

Three Considerations Helping To Decide How Long Other UN Countries Can Send Troops

Washington Aug. 4 — (AP)—Three considerations are helping to decide how long it will be before ground forces of other United Nations are fighting beside Americans and South Koreans in Korea.

They are:

1. Public Opinion. Some highly-placed U.S. officials feel a resurgence of "isolationism" will occur in the United States if other members of the United Nations do not take part in the ground fighting.

2. Supply. Military men want to be sure that adequate supply systems are assured for any troops sent to Korea. Otherwise, they think the forces would be a liability rather than an asset.

3. Global Strategy. The high command wants to be sure other vital areas where the communists might attack are not weakened unnecessarily by transfer of troops to Korea.

Already, the navy operating against the Korean communists is truly a United Nations force including Canadian, British, Australian and Dutch units as well as American and South Korea, the Royal Australian air force and carrier-based Royal Air Force planes working with the American land-based and carrier-based planes.

Thus, far, however, the only allied ground units fighting are U.S. and South Korean. Their casualties have been much heavier than those of air and naval elements.

Offers Are Screened

Ground troops offers sent to the United Nations in response to its recent appeal for such assistance are screened here by a joint committee of the defence and state departments.

Britain has offered a self-contained force. But British sources say it will take two or three months to get a force estimated at 5,000 to 6,000 men ready to sail from the United Kingdom.

The British army has about 40,000 men guarding Hong Kong, next door to communist China. The British government contends they are essential at this post.

265,000 On Duty Abroad

British representatives here say that of the British army's total strength of 372,000, there are 265,000 already on duty abroad. In addition to those at Hong Kong, 175,000 are reported in Germany, 15,000 in Malaya, and 35,000 in the Middle East. All three of the latter posts are areas of communist pressure.

Australia has promised a small force of experienced ground troops within "as few weeks as possible". This force is expected to be built around ground troops now on occupation duty in Japan.

The 2,500 Australians already in Japan include fliers and sailors as well as ground troops however. The ground units include signal and engineer troops as well as infantry men.

At present Canada has three destroyers in the United Nations navy and six transport planes shuttling between the U.S. and the Far East.

No Limitations Placed On Enlistments in Services

Ottawa, Aug. 4 — (CP) —The government, because of the world crisis, is placing no limitation on the number of men enlisted in the regular and reserve forces, Defence Minister Claxton said today.

He said they will take "all the qualified men" they can get.

In a statement on recruiting, he said speculation placing manpower targets at various figures in the new recruiting drive "are not justified."

"The simple fact is that ceilings have been removed and we are taking on all the qualified men we can get for active and reserve forces."

He also said:

1. The army, as one of a number of "important" recruiting steps, is eliminating the grade eight educational standard for recruits but they will still have to pass the so-called "M" test of general knowledge.

2. Staffs have been boosted to handle the biggest recruiting influx since the war. Training establishments are being built up to accommodate the flow.

3. The first report on the progress of the recruiting drive started July 20 will be issued next week. The applicants since that date have been "many times" more than in any corresponding peacetime period.

Others Beside Police Want This Driver

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP)—Police said it all started when the driver of a light delivery truck jammed on his brakes at rush hour today and prepared to bawl out T. J. Esau a motorist from St. Catharines, Ont.

Edgar Hughson, 21, of Toronto, driving a loaded tractor-trailer directly behind the delivery truck on the highway near the west-end exhibition grounds, tried to stop. His vehicle jack-knifed into the centre of the road and struck an oncoming car driven by Magistrate F. C. Gullen, 67, of Toronto, who suffered head injuries.

Magistrate Gullen's car sideswiped a car driven by A. E. Burr of Toronto. Cathleen Arabaski, one of three passengers in the Burr car, was injured.

Another tractor-trailer driven by Harry Haun of Brantford, crashed into the first transport.

Now police are looking for the delivery-truck driver.

HARRIMAN'S TRIP TO TOKYO HINTS OF NEW MOVES

Important Issues May Need Decision Soon

Washington, Aug. 4. (AP)—A flying trip to Tokyo by W. Averill Harriman, President Truman's special assistant on foreign affairs, indicated today major Far Eastern political decisions may be in the making. He is scheduled to leave by air at once to confer with Gen. MacArthur.

Truman announced the trip at his press conference yesterday. He said Harriman would be accompanied by Gen. Lauris Norstad, assistant chief of staff of the United States Air Force, and Maj.-Gen. Frank B. Lowe.

Purpose of the trip, Truman said, is for Harriman to discuss Far Eastern political questions with MacArthur.

Discussion Points

Diplomatic authorities said issues which appear certain to be discussed and which are moving toward the point of American policy decisions include:

1—The 38th parallel—from the beginning of the Korean fighting there has been a question as to whether the United Nations forces under MacArthur's command should stop at the 38th parallel once they have generated a successful drive against the North Korean Communists. The line divides Northern and Southern Korea.

American officials are reported to feel the final decision should be worked out with other United Nations members opposing aggression in Korea..

2—A final Korean settlement—one of the big problems in the Korean crisis is what kind of final settlement the U.S. and Associated members of the U.N. should seek once they have achieved victory over the communist invaders.

3.—The future status of Formosa—American moves to protect the Chinese Nationalist island from communist invasion have left this question wide open except that their is no longer any disposition here to write off Formosa to the Chinese Red regime. The island may continue under Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek indefinitely but many Washington authorities believe its legal status must be clarified either in a Japanese peace treaty or through United Nations action.

4.—A Japanese peace treaty—the dominant view in Washington now is that the U.S. should take the lead in getting ahead with a Japanese peace settlement as soon as possible.

41,000 ADMITTED

Ottawa, Aug. 4 — (CP) — A total of 41,000 displaced persons from the war-torn countries of Europe have been admitted to Canada to start life anew in the three-year period up to June, 1950, Deputy Labor Minister Arthur MacNamara announced Thursday night.

Recovery Slow but Sure in Morris, Hardest Flood-Hit Community

Morris, Man., Aug. 4. (CP)—Six weeks of dogged, heart-breaking toil have brought this southern Manitoba centre, 40 miles south of Winnipeg, from the brink of ruin to the threshold of normality.

The Red river, on its history-making rampage that submerged 600 square miles of rich farmland for several weeks in April and May swirled sluggishly through an almost-deserted town.

All but a handful of the 1,000-odd residents fled. Water was eight to ten feet deep in the streets.

Everything stopped for Morris. Telephone, railway, telegraph, hospital, food and other services were washed out.

Six weeks ago the routed citizens were coming back. There was little food, only one grocery store in operation, no telephone service, no jobs or wages.

But work, make-do, and the co-operation of volunteer services kept the rehabilitation going forward and almost all of the families are back.

Unsightly piles of interior fixtures have been removed from the streets, where they were thrown to allow structural repairs on business and residential property. Many leaning, crumpled structures have been torn down or moved away. Some have been repaired.

New basements are being poured under homes floated off by the river's force. Potato patches and gardens are beginning to show.

All grocery stores are open. The hotel's cafe, once almost floorless, is open. Banking and postal services have been moved into a schoolhouse. The barber has opened shop in his own house.

Damage in the country, as in the town, is still impossible to estimate. Late-maturing crops will be good, given favorable weather.

Debris and dead animals still dot the countryside. Families are living in granaries and tents until homes can be replaced.

The flood is still the main topic of conversation.

"The people are jittery," Municipal Secretary J. L. Pottinger said. "They can't help it. After a flood in 1948 and again this year they wonder what on earth can be done to prevent a recurrence."

St. Laurent Will Likely Announce Step on Monday

Other Moves to Strengthen Home Defences Expected

Ottawa, Aug. 4 — (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent is expected to announce Monday that a special Canadian force of ground troops will be raised for service in Korea and that parliament is being recalled to ratify the move, it was learned reliably today. Further steps to buttress the home defences are also anticipated.

Cabinet ministers have been considering the dispatch to Korea of anything up to a brigade group of 5,000 men but the force that is authorized will likely not be that large. But it will be in the thousands, possibly 3,000 to 4,000 strong.

It is considered likely that the government will not mention any specific figure, simply saying that volunteers will be sought for a special force. It would probably emerge as a mixture of veterans, regulars allowed to volunteer and of youngsters who missed the last war.

May Become Permanent

It is possible that the force will eventually become a permanent factor, kept in being to fight for the United Nations wherever new Koreas break out. Monday's announcement—after the third of a series of cabinet sessions on Korea—may not specify that the force is specifically for Korea but simply for the United Nations.

Whether the force continues, however, is something that depends on such factors as how long Korea lasts and the general international situation.

Speculation about cabinet shuffles, appointment of a second defence minister, and emergency legislation to be presented to the special session, expected in September or October, has become rife on Parliament Hill.

Informed quarters said that unless the world situation darkens even further Parliament is likely to be asked only to approve an expeditionary force and to take some further measures for home defence.

Pending Monday's meeting, cabinet has made no definite decision about the date Parliament should be recalled nor how many troops should go to Korea. All ministers have been asked to be present then.

Secret Trip Made

It was learned that External Affairs Minister Pearson made a secret trip to Washington this week to get background information to place before the series of cabinet sessions.

Mr. Pearson, it is understood, was accompanied on his plane flight by Norman Robertson, secretary to the cabinet and former diplomat.

The purpose of their mission, made prior to the Wednesday session of the cabinet, was believed to be to get American reaction to a Canadian proposal to send ground troops and to get authoritative American opinion on the international crisis.

There are a number of questions that would have to be clarified, such as how a Canadian force—it is bound to be comparatively small in the sense that it will be fighting among divisions—would be integrated with higher formations.

The cabinet won't take any final action on calling parliament until after Monday's meeting when all ministers have been warned to be present. If they aren't, the step is expected to be taken by those who do show up. Five or six missed yesterday's meeting.

There already is majority agreement, it was learned, that Canada should provide a ground force and that parliament will be called to approve the step.

The first was held Wednesday and lasted four hours. The second, which lasted three years ended Thursday night with the official announcement by Prime Minister St. Laurent that "earnest and detailed consideration" had been given the international situation and Canada's accelerated defence program.

He went no farther than that, except to say a third cabinet session would be held Monday.

Would Recall Parliament

These developments lent weight to indications that there already is broad ministerial agreement on the principle of sending a ground force to Korea. It is believed parliament will meet probably late September or early October to ratify the move.

Observers see the Monday cabinet meeting as being called primarily to obtain the approval of such men as Finance Minister Abbott and Argiculture Minister Gardiner, who were not in attendance at yesterday's sitting. About six ministers were absent.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Synopsis: The greater part of the province will continue to have cloudy cool weather today. In Southern Ontario a few light showers are expected this afternoon while in Kirkland Lake, Georgian Bay and Haliburton regions the intermittent light rain and drizzle will continue.

It looks as though this prolonged spell of dull weather is finally coming to an end. Improvement will be slow particularly in the northeastern regions. Temperatures will be a little higher Saturday and with continued improvement, the weekend promises to be very pleasant.

543 Unemployed Persons in City, 108 Vacancies

Registered unemployed persons in the city as of July 31st amounted to 543 according to statistics released today by Mr. H. H. Reed manager of the National Unemployment Bureau here. Of this number 306 are males.

The statistics mark an increase over those of the same time a year ago when 450 unemployed were registered.

At the present time, Mr. Reed said, there are 80 vacancies for male workers and 28 for females. Of this number 16 call for sales clerks; 12 for farmhands, seven for bricklayers and 38 unskilled labor. The remainder is divided into miscellaneous jobs.

$210,000 Paid in Claims

The peak load of unemployed persons during the winter of 1949-50 was 1,472 as compared to 657 of the winter previous. Last winter unemployment insurance claims amounting to $210,000 were paid in the city.

Mr. Reed said that office files contain a large group of unemployed males of 55 years and over. Of the 306 males registered at least 45 per cent are in the 55 and over category.

Decline in Demand

Decreased acreage of canning produce this year will cause a decline in the demand for labor during the harvest months he said. This year it is expected that 175 males and 375 females will be needed for canning factories and tomato fields. This marks a decrease of 15 per cent over 1949 demands.

The marked difference between registered unemployed of the winter of 1948-49 and 1949-50 was due to a reduction in industrial and dwelling construction Mr. Reed said.

Police Chief Urges Motorists To Drive Safely Over Weekend

Chief of police R. W. Probert has joined with provincial and federal authorities to ask that a real effort be made to cut down on automobile accidents over Civic Holiday weekend.

"We urge the people to drive safely and sanely over the weekend," the chief said, "and especially to watch out for children." In the three-day period last year, 11 persons died from injuries received in motor accidents, and Highways Minister Doucett has issued a warning that if the weather this year is favorable, the number of cars and the number of accidents on the highways may set a new record.

Chief Probert asks that all drivers make sure that their cars are in good road condition before they are driven. "Above all", the chief said, "watch the other man and be careful."

Mr. Doucett said that one of the reasons for many of the accidents was that too many people were in too much of a hurry to get someplace, and didn't give much thought to the dangers of the road.

Driver is Main Cog

At the same time, Commissioner W. H. Stringer of the Ontario Provincial Police has warned that the highway patrols will do everything they can to apprehend careless and dangerous drivers. The commissioner, in appealing to the public for care on the road, said that the driver is the main cog in the safety program, that "in his hands he holds the destiny of many innocent people."

The Ontario Motor League, through its general manager, Mr. W. G. Robertson, urges that the watchword of the road for the weekend be "Drive as you would have others drive." Mr. Robertson said that just because holiday weekends are considered carefree ones by the motoring public, that freedom from care cannot be extended to the highways.

July Greatest Month

The Highway Minister, Mr. Doucett, has made the prediction that about 20 people will die over the weekend as a result of traffic accidents. July, 1950, had the greatest total of traffic deaths since 1937. Ninety-five people were killed in accidents last month. August will start off with a bang if official predictions come true.

When the warnings are all boiled down, they come to the same thing: drive safely, drive sanely, and be careful.

Railway and Bus Lines Making Provison for Heavy Holiday Travel

Railway and bus facilities are being enlarged over the weekend in anticipation of heavy Civic Holiday traffic it was learned from railway and bus sources this morning.

Extra sections on the two fast Toronto-Montreal trains are expected tonight and tomorrow but the number of additional coaches will not be known until the travelling public commits itself to the weekend vacation. Railway officials however are well prepared for a record number of passengers.

All available rolling stock is being pressed into service on the long distance bus lines running through the city with chartered Grey Coach buses being added to Colonial's own stock.

Fishing Reported About Average In Quinte Area

Fishing is about average for this time of year, according to Conservation Officers in the Quinte District, busy checking limits of catch and angler's licences. In some areas summer visitors appear to be numerous, in others the tourist trade has slackened off.

Overseers would be interested in hearing of cases where Blue Heron are lighting on deep water in search of food. Officer Shields has seen this happen on White Lake, McNab township, several times recently. Biologists say this is quite unusual.

Continuing the duck brood census, H. G. Lumsden checked a number of nesting areas during the week, including the vicinity of Belleville, Conroy Marsh, Mud Lake near Egansville, Norcan Lake and the Mississippi River.

At a Fish and Wildlife meeting held at the Mazinaw Ranger headquarters on July 24th, an agreement was reached on several important matters. "More attention should be paid to trafficking in illegal fur", stated Inspector R. G. Sheppard, emphasizing also that when fur begins to move officers should increase investigations of shipments by rail and highway transport, to prevent illegal export. Family fishing licences, licences to hunt raccoons, border checks on limits of catch, and co-operation between overseers on inter district patrol zones were other points discussed and clarified.

The improvement project at Glenora is now well on the way to completion. The old roofing on the two residences is being replaced, buildings painted and the department property fronting on Lake on the Mountain, being fenced. Time permitting, a lawn will be established this fall and preliminary preparations completed for landscaping next spring.

Good progress is reported on the woodlot market survey and most of the field data and reports will be completed for the Quinte District early in August.

Note to applicants for trees in 1951:

Don't forget that applications must be received by the Zone Forester, Department of Lands and Forests, Napanee, not later than August 15, 1950.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP) —Prices pushed slightly higher in dull trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Mild selling appeared in golds following yesterday's strong late advance but the list held steady. Moderate demand boosted selected issues upwards in the remainder of the market.

Industrials continued upwards for a fifth successive session.

Papers, utilities, steels, agricultures and refining oils attracted most of the buying. Liquors weakened.

Golds started strong in continuation of yesterday's gains but selling appeared in mid-session, reducing gains. Senior producers were ahead fractions and a handful of juniors added pennies.

Base metals brightened slowly. Key stocks like Consolidated Smelters, International Nickel, Hudson Bay and Noranda rose fractionally. Waite Amulet, a heavy loser yesterday continued declining.

Controller Lamport Nabbed for Speeding

Newmarket Ont., Aug. 4—(CP) —Controller Allan Lamport of Toronto, who made headlines this week by protesting the use of "plainclothes" police cars to nab speeders was one of 106 motorists fined here today—for speeding.

They paid a total of about $2,500.

A town constable from Sutton said he clocked controller Lamport's car at an excessive rate of speed in that community.

Says Summons Not Sufficient Warning

Toronto—(CP)—W. G. Robertson, general manager of the Ontario Motor League said today his organization wants to improve safety but does not think it can be done "merely by sending speeders or reckless drivers a summons."

Police recently began patrolling major Ontario highways in "plainclothes" automobiles which have no police markings. Drivers exceeding the 50-mile-an-hour speed limit are not stopped, but licence numbers are taken and summonses issued.

Mr. Robertson said he believes speeders should be caught and told of the offense at the time and, if the offense is serious, should not be allowed to continue their "merry way."

'Banking' System For Food Storage

Wisbech, Cambridgeshire, England — (CP) — A safety-deposit box for food is Britain's newest idea.

Huge refrigerators are divided into "strong boxes" and can be rented for 3d. (four cents) a pound of merchandise stored. Lockers containing 120 pounds have a yearly charge of £5 ($15.50).

The food banks, too few in number to accommodate the long waiting lists, are run like ordinary strong rooms. Each depositor receives a passbook for recording deposits and withdrawals. Customers are conducted to and from the boxes through corridors hung with icicles.

Many clients are farmers. One bank here opens each morning to a long queue laden with garden, poultry and pig produce.

Most deposits are made in the summer months for use during the winter when prices are high.

Malik Shaken Up In Car Accident

New York, Aug. 4. (AP)—Joab A. Malik, Russia's Deputy Foreign Minister, was shaken up in an automobile accident last night, but a Soviet spokesman said he was not injured.

The accident occurred as Malik was returning to his Manhattan office from Lake Success on Long Island after presiding at a stormy session of the United Nations Security Council.

Another car struck Malik's from behind, in a drizzling rain, and they locked bumpers on a busy highway. The cars came loose after they had gone about 100 feet at 30 miles an hour.

The bumper of the car in which Malik was a passenger was torn off. The other car, out of control, knocked down an electric pole.

No one hurt—damage trifling —no arrests.

Prizes also went to the oldest member, Mrs. Joe Rollins, and to the oldest man, Mr. Bill Rollins of Peterborough.

The executive committee was re-elected for the coming year.

DOGS GIVE ASSISTANCE

Toronto, Aug. 4 — (CP) — A woman and her two dogs Thursday dug nine-year-old Jim Hutcheson from a sandbank in which he almost suffocated. A pile of sand caved in, burying him so that only his hand was visible. A Mrs. Tupper, passing in a car with two large dogs, noticed the boy's predicament and the three of them—woman and dogs—dug him out.

Orphan Elephant 'Adopts' Hunter

Chipinga, Northern Rhodesia, (CP) —Piet Snyders, an elephant hunter with the world's highest bag of 650, has added another elephant—and a good camp-fire yarn—to his bag.

He went away with an Englishman who wanted to own a baby elephant. After some days tracking in the bush, Snyders managed to capture a young one.

"How am I to get it back?" the tenderfoot asked.

Snyders took the tip of the baby elephant's trunk and rubbed it over the man's sweating body. "Now it will follow you like a lamb," he said.

To the tenderfoot's amazement the baby followed him wherever he went.

On the return journey Synders lost the tenderfoot. After searching for some time, he found the baby elephant sitting at the foot of a tree.

Snyders looked up and saw the tenderfoot sitting out of reach.

"I got up here to escape from it," he explained. "It thinks I'm its father. I can't get away from it."

"IFS" TAKE THE JOY OUT OF FARMING

With the haying season in full swing and grain fields beginning to look like rippling sheets of burnished copper, anyone travelling through Ontario at this time of year is constantly reminded of the fertility of our farmlands.

In general, hay, grain and hoe crops in this part of the country appear to be coming along fairly well, although cool weather and lack of moisture until this week retarded the growth of some crops such as corn and tomatoes.

Aside from those inevitable "ifs" — the trademarks of the agricultural industry — most farmers are probably as well satisfied with the "showing" of this season's crops as they ever are. "If we get enough rain; if the stuff ripens before the first frost; if I can keep the insects down." "If" is the jinx word that takes the joy out of farming and brands farmers as inveterate grumblers.

Farming is a gamble from the time the first seed is sown until the last bushel is harvested in the fall. Weather conditions, prices, control of pests, labor supply, are only four of the many unpredictable factors that govern the success or failure of the agriculture industry.

While other industries can to a great extent control or at least regulate external factors affecting the availability and sale of their products, the "ifs" of farming are almost entirely beyond the control of the individual farmer. Even if he manages to cope with all these hazards successfully, and harvests a good crop, the farmer may still be the innocent victim of variations in domestic supply and consumer demand.

In spite of his customary pessimistic outlook, however, the typical farmer is an incurable optimist and always able to shrug his shoulders and look ahead to "next year when things may be different."

SCIENCE . . . IT'S WONDERFUL

One of the wonderful things about human beings is that they are always making progress toward a saner, safer, more peaceful world. And nowhere is this more evident than in the many fields of scientific endeavor which have sprung up, and are continuing to spring up, since the industrial revolution.

This comforting fact was hammered home recently when it was predicted that the roads of the future would be made of rubber. A suggestion made in the rubber-scarce war years when tires were hard to get, to the effect that roads should be made of rubber and automobile tires of cement was laughed off as a joke. "Catch the rubber companies letting every brick layer and cement pourer making tires," ran the sarcastic remarks. Now apparently, the rubber road is a possibility, not only to the wildly imaginative men who draw the 25th century cartoons, but to a sound business man like Harvey Firestone, Junior, who acknowledges that such a thing is a possibility in his message to the nation on the eve of the 50th anniversary of the founding of his company. Enterprising cement companies should look into the possibilities of making tires, before the bottom falls out of their market.

Another remarkable product being readied for the commercial market is a new type of glass that bounces like a rubber ball when dropped. This promises to cut down breakage on glassware to the vanishing point. It also makes it likely that India rubber balls will become unnecessary as junior can use his drinking glass instead.

Another dandy little article is the cement boat. This tidy item is built in the novel fashion usually reserved for pancake mixes. All one does is build a mould to the desired size and shape, whip up several tons of cement and pour. Let stand in a cool place until dry. Remove mould and launch. Just as easy as that.

Another item that will be greeted with wild exultation by the masses is a new aerial camera that can photograph a span of 225 miles from a height of 30,000 feet. Another camera can snap a 26-mile strip of the earth in two seconds from a height of 10,000 feet.

This will make it possible for the enthusiastic to immortalize all the scantily clad at Coney Island in two seconds but it might prove to be a little inconvenient in picking up the girl friend's profile when she poses prettily on the side lawn. However, progress is the thing.

The aged have not been barred from a trough at the mouth of science's growing cornucopia. No sir. If aeronautical technicians have their way it may be possible in the 1970's — if you happen to be around in the 1970's — to go to the moon for your heart. You see gravity demands a certain amount of work from your heart even if you are just standing up. And gravity on the moon is four times weaker than on earth. Consequently, by simple arithmetic, if you could be on the moon your heart would have to do only one quarter of the work it is doing on earth and if you are a heart patient then it might mean the prolongation of life. Whew. All this has only one drawback. What are a bunch of heart patients going to do on the moon for excitement? This flight to the moon might also reveal that the moon is really not as romantic as the songwriters make out and in this science will score another victory.

Stick around a little longer folks, and maybe science will come up with something equally as gratifying as the rubber glass, and make your life more enjoyable and bearable.

JUST FOLKS

BURIED TALENT

He was clever enough; he had courage and skill,
But to put them to work he used wish for the will.
"I've a theme for a book," oft
he said, "and I vow
I'll write it some day, but I can't do it now."

He'd tell us the plot for a play
he'd conceived
And it would have succeeded
we firmly believed.
But the years flew along, and he came to life's end
And his dramas died, too, for they hadn't been penned.

Hard work is the answer!
vain, talent and theme
If he who should use them does nothing but dream.
And down to the grave, when his spirit took flight,
Went the books and the plays
he'd intended to write.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

POETRY

There is little intellect to poetry. The poet merely looks out upon Nature, gets his color, movement, and balance of elements there, and then dips his pen into his heart and writes his words. There is a poem in every flower that blooms in every motion of the earth, in every song that echoes in the atmosphere. The white daisies I have plucked from outside my summer cabin and placed on my writing desk reveal more of beauty and poetry to me than any written word. Their golden center and their perfect petals, white as new fallen snow, compose poems before me in their silent way. A lover's eyes talk the same language as the daisies do!

People think that to create a bit of poetry there must be rhymes included. This is a mistake. Some of the most beautiful poetry ever written has no rhymes. The Beatitudes, in the Sermon on the Mount, for example. Or some of Whitman's finest. Poetry comes from the heart. It is feeling.

Every lake and running stream is a poem. So is a tree with all its secret make-up. The clouds by day and the stars by night are poems, written by the great Creator. I saw a poem in the sky at sunset only last night. It was one of the most unusual formations of clouds I have ever seen. Great streaks of color—blues, crimson, greys and tapering wings of white spread from the horizon like a huge fan. I called to my friend and said: "Hurry! I want you to see a poem in the sky."

Driving through New England, the latter part of June I was fascinated by the beauty of the mountain laurel for great stretches along the highway. It was a running poem. No mere written poem by man could possibly match such a display of beauty.

The greatest book of poetry in all this world may be just outside your doorway! It certainly is outside mine. Why is there such a display of variegated colors in all Nature? Is it not so that we all might become poets at heart, and learn the joy of silent expression?

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

POTHER IN PICCADILLY

Every now and so often, in the interests of scholarship and time-killing, I send out for a batch of London papers and take a gander at what their drama critics are saying about the American shows currently on display in the tight little island. And of late I've noticed that a lot of the comments are on the carpy side, especially when they concern our musicals.

In one of the pieces before me, a critic announces he is wrung to the withers to learn that the Drury Lane theatre, after playing host for several seasons to "Oklahoma!" and now "Carousel," may follow them up with "South Pacific." Why, he asks between lamentations, should England's foremost playhouse turn its back on local talent and continue to present nothing but American imports?

Well from where I mull, that's the silliest question I've heard in a long time—as silly as if somebody asked how come I had a jar of Dundee marmalade on my breakfast table or a pair of Bond Street woolens on my ankles. I buy British jam and socks because I prefer them to the local product, and by the same logic London producers buy American musicals because they're a darn sight better than anything offered them by their own librettists and composers.

Back in '45 and again in '49, I took in most of the musicals around London town, and with the exception of a revival of "Merrie England" they hit me no place but where I groan. Their plots were strictly old tophat, most of the music run-of-the-clef, and there was a pasted-together look about them which reminded me of some of the schnitzels on Broadway 20 years ago.

Howe come, my English friends are a cinch to ask, that Broadway has become so all-fired smart of a sudden? I hasten to answer that it isn't smart — it's just plain lucky—and this luck consists in having Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein on our side of the Atlantic.

Ever since '43 this combination has been jacking up the standards of our girly-whirly productions. In "Oklahoma!" instead of legs and smutty lyrics they presented a plot of some psychological complexity and for good measure substituted concert-hall ballet for old-fashioned hoofing. "Carousel," based on Ferenc Molnar's "Liliom," nudged our story standards up another peg, and their moody "Allergo", using a Greek chorus as narrator, dared to experiment with a bitter and timely theme. "South Pacific" their current standing-sitting-running - jumping champ, features a 50-year-old hero and its dramatic conflict is built around the touchy problem of miscegenation. And as if that weren't enough, they're now working on a musical version of "Anna and the King of Siam," a yarn which lacks the prime essentials of the conventional musical show—love interest and low comedy. Fortunately for us, these lads bring to the job the prime essentials of the unconventional musical—the Messrs. R and H.

As I hunch it, until its own librettists and composers come up with something as stimulating to the eye, ear and gray matter, the British public- critics nothwithstanding, will go right on loving the R. and H. musical exports—just as I'll go right on drooling every morning over my Dundee marmalade.

And, with due and deferential respect, may I point out that throwing printers' ink in our faces isn't going to reclaim the Drury Lane theatre. The way to do that is for England to develop a Rodgers and Hammerstein of their own.

In which case I'll be glad to turn my theatre over to them.

Mackenzie's Column:

Russian Leaders Ignorant of Ways Of Western World

Frankfurt, Aug. 4 — (AP) — The greatest contribution toward fanning the flames for a new world war is the ignorance of Russian leaders in the ways of the west.

This is the belief of many diplomats who have worked in Moscow and those who have dealt with the Soviets here and in Berlin.

Because of the big Soviet spy rings which have been exposed, and the ardent collecting of documents by Soviet diplomats all over the world, it has become popular to presume that Prime Minister Stalin and his politburo are well informed on the western mind.

But there is little indication of this in Soviet propaganda nor in the overt acts of communist puppets who have lost ground steadily in western Europe for the last five years.

Instead there appears to be an attitude of blind frustration, increasing suspicion and a tendency to the use of extremes and force to overcome any obstacle.

As Soviet power has spread, this ignorance has widened with it engulfing countless more millions behind the iron curtain.

It has been the custom of dictators throughout he centuries to hear only what they want to hear.

One need only look to Hitler to find the prime example of this.

Showed Ignorance

Germany was a western power with close ties and channels of information to the western mind. But in world political situations, Hitler and his Nazi clique showed amazing ignorance of the facts.

Captured documents show that through the 1930s German embassies in Washington and London poured in a ceaseless torrent of information accurately forecasting rising western resentment and warning the Nazi rulers the west would fight.

Little of this information got to Hitler and his inner ring Lower Nazi functionaries intercepted it and discounted it because it did not fit in with Hitler's beliefs nor Nazi plans.

What little did reach Hitler or the inner circle wasn't believed or was misrepresented by such "yes men" as foreign minister Ribbentrop.

Let's look at the Soviet Union.

Russia's iron curtain and its police state isolate the Russian people and its hierarchry a thousand times more effectively than Hitler's dictatorship did.

Anyone with he slightest contact with the west has been purged, not only in Russia but in all communist-controlled satellites.

The famed Soviet economist Varga acurately predicted capitalism's strength in the post-war world. He was reprimanded.

Laughing Stock

Soviet genetics scientist Lysenko brought forth some theories on heredity which were the laughing stock of the recent Stockholm World Scientific Convention. Western scientists says Lysenko is living a hundred years behind the times. In Russia anyone who disagrees with his theories is purged.

Only one member of the present Russian politburo has ever had any extensive personal contacts with the west—that is Stalin's loyal disciple, former Foreign Minister Molotov.

For 30 years the rest have jailed themselves within their marxist walls

They have allowed out of their country only a small number of trusted ardent communist believers, limited in power and tied closely to the Kremlin.

Under these conditions can anyone seriously believe that Soviet diplomatic reports to the Kremlin are objective, critical and informative?

U.S. VICE-CONSUL, MISTAKEN FOR RED, IS KILLED IN TIBET

Forced to flee his post in communist North China, U. S. Vice Consul Douglas MacKiernan was accidentally shot and killed by Tibetan border guards. Because he and his party were travelling by camel, they were mistaken for red raiders. — Central Press Canadian.

THE SPECIALIST RACKET

The 1950 medical directory compiled and published by the American Medical Association lists the 188,741 physicians in the United States as follows: 72,550 in general practice; 22,976 carry on more or less general practice but give special attention to this or that field—they want to be specialists if they can get enough work in their favorite field; 54,891 limit their practice to a specialty; the rest are retired or not in practice or are serving time as interns, resident physicians or in salaried positions in hospitals, clinics and the like.

The 54,891 full-fledged specialists and the 22,976 prospective specialists outnumber the general practitioners. This is ridiculous.

Even if we ignore the aspirations of the 22,976 physicians who engage in more or less general practice but hope to get enough work in their chosen field to enable them to get along without answering night calls, attending emergencies and confinements, writing excuses so Johnny and Mary can dodge physical education and all the other tedious, onerous tasks of the family doctor there would still be less than two general practitioners to each specialist.

How could a real specialist hope to make a living if only two doctors referred patients or called him in consultation in difficult cases?

If you don't know the difference between a real specialist and a trick specialist, I'll explain.

A real specialist is a doctors' doctor He or she gains repute and standing and the respect of the other doctors in the community and they refer patients to him on her or call him or her in consultation with them, because they want their patients to have the advantage of any special knowledge of skill the specialist may have, and they know the specialist will not try to steal their patients

A trick specialist is just a shrewd bunk merchant who plays the "specialist" rule for all it is worth in the eyes of the Yankee wiseacre public. The trick specialist is never consulted by regular doctors nor do they refer patients to the trick specialist for opinion, advice or treatment.

Mind, now, I do not brand every one of the 54,891 doctors who limit their practice to a specialty trick specialists, but I suggest there is something seriously wrong with medicine in America when the medical schools turn out only two general practitioners for every "specialist."

The responsibility for this ridiculous growth of the specialist racket rests not alone on the medical profession and the medical schools but also on the snobbishness and the gullibility of middle class Americans.

Any one who has completed medical school with the degree Doctor of Medicine and procured a license to practice in the state or province may legally hold himself or herself out as a specialist in any field or branch of medicine or surgery he or she prefers. Under the law a specialist requires no more education or training than a general practitioner.

Of course real specialists voluntarily obtain post-graduate instruction and training in their chosen field—they have to, for, remember, they are doctors' doctors and you can't fool doctors as you can fool the great American keep-up-with-the-Joneses.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

The Old Hokum Bunkem

Dentist tells my wife she has too much acid in her system, which causes her teeth to decay too easily. (L. F.)

Answer—A notion some old timer conjured out of thin air and passed along to his colleagues. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope for booklet Save Your Teeth. Not "too much acid" but not enough calcium, phosphorus, vitamins in the system account for tooth decay.

Scientific Proof

Please inform me if there is any scientific proof that cancer is not communicable. (D. E.)

Answer—Can't prove a negative. There is no scientific evidence that cancer is communicable. Ordinary soap and water cleanliness, such as you would use in caring for a person with a boil or an infected wound, is all that is required in the care of one with cancer.

Recognized Nutrition Authority

Many thanks for recommending Let's Cook it Right (Harcourt Brace) by Adelle Davis. The diet she prescribes restored my 6 year old son to fine health in three months after his hard attack of rheumatic fever. Our physician says Adelle Davis is a recognized authority on nutrition. (L. M. W.)

Answer—On that we are unanimous. It is the only cook book in my library.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In a backwoods neighborhood where I fish for trout there lives a wicked old man who has been the terror of four townships for fifty years.

He has a neglected farm. He has no family. Never a good word of him have I ever heard. In his early manhood he was in jail for cattle theft; and has been fined and briefly jailed many times for assault and for drunkenness. He has been a bully and an outcast, a scarer of women, a curser, a character you would not care to know under any circumstances.

Yet everybody knows him. And when I came upon him limping badly along a side-road the other day, I pulled up the car and asked him if he wanted a lift.

He didn't you could see by the ugly, surly expression on his battered old face. But he had hurt his ankle severely.

He got in beside me, with a profane groan.

"Are you So-and-So?" I asked him.

"Yes" he grunted.

"I've heard of you," I informed him.

"Yep, everybody for miles around has heard of me," he said. "And a lot of people a long way off from here has heard of me. And people will hear about me years from now, long after I'm dead, too."

"Well well," I said, a little testily.

"I have to laugh," said the old scoundrel, sneering instead. "People go to a lot of trouble to be remembered, don't they? I got neighbors who have given away money and started libraries, and donated to everything, and had great big tombstones put up to them. But does anybody remember them in five years? Well, in fifteen years, anyway, does anybody remember them?

"But they'll remember me! They'll tell stories about me fifty years from now. When I was a young kid, I decided I wanted to be remembered. Well, by gun, they'll remember me!"

I let him out at the side door of his dirty old house. He did not even say thank you, or turn me a glance. What else can I do but remember him?

EMOTIONS

A glance at the headlines of almost any newspaper reveals trouble and unhappiness of all sorts: strikes, crimes, accidents with our domestic problems and private worries of which most people have at least a few and the picture looks black.

An all too common reaction to this picture is to become emotionally upset about it. Millions of people worry about their problems night and day, and argue heatedly about them with others. Such people live in a state of constant emotional disturbance.

What are results? No solution, surely for nothing is ever solved by losing control of one's emotions.

But there are many harmful results, physical and mental. Stomach disorders, nervous diseases, and heart trouble are often caused by emotional upsets, even when nothing is organically wrong with us. The constant overcrowding of our expanding mental institutions reflects the rising number of emotionally unbalanced persons.

Two safe guards against the condition are available to us. The first is self-control: personal restraint of one's emotions, and the firm refusal to be drawn into heated arguments or morbid meditations. The second method is to have greater faith—not so-called "blind" faith, but the informed and cheerful faith of the man who believes because he knows, and knows because he loves.

Appointment Ends Speculation on Health Post

Trenton — (Special) — In announcing the appointment of Dr. Mackinnon Phillips, M.P.P., Grey North, as Minister of Health, yesterday, Premier Frost praised the efforts of Welfare Minister Goodfellow who has been acting Minister of Health since the illness of Hon. Russell T. Kelley, former Health Minister.

Mr. Kelley who has been ill since the last session of the legislature was forced to resign because of his health but will remain in the cabinet as minister without portfolio.

There has been considerable speculation in this district that Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, who represents Northumberland in the legislature, would take over the health post, but Mr. Goodfellow desired to remain with the welfare department.

Following the cabinet meeting yesterday, the Premier said that Mr. Kelley's resignation had been accepted and that the new minister would be sworn in within a few days.

Town 'Idolatrous' --Baptist Minister

Brighton, England, (CP)—This holiday town of Piers, playgrounds and expensive hotels has a rebel in its midst.

Rev. Ernest Carter, 36-year-old minister of Salem Baptist church, displays outside his church a poster labelled "Idolatrous Brighton", showing a crudely-drawn idol and the town's coat of arms.

In a sermon, Mr. Carter demanded that the words "In Deo Fidemcus" (We Trust in God) should be removed from the coat of arms.

"Brighton has made the words a mockery," he said. "The present generation does not even pretend to worship God.

"I have been told my remarks will do the church more harm than the cinemas. Was there trust in God. . . .when they permitted the cinemas to open on Sundays?"

Entertainment managers declined comment on the minister's remarks.

Govt. Continues To Pay 75 P.C. Of Freight Charge

Ottawa, Aug. 4— (CP) — The agriculture department has announced that it will continue to pay 75 per cent of the freight charge on all livestock going to national exhibitions when provinces agree to pay the other 25 per cent.

The only exhibition now considered by the department to be national in scope is the Toronto Royal Winter Fair, a spokesman said today. All provinces, with the exception of Ontario have in the past participated in the cost-sharing agreement and the department hopes that this government absorption of costs will continue in the future.

The department said in a statement yesterday that it has decided to continue the costs-absorption plan even though "shipments of livestock going to the Toronto Royal Winter Fair will be more costly this year following the cancellation by the railways of special rates on exhibition livestock."

The only change it has decided on in its payment system is to give the provinces complete power over the distribution of payment.

"On account of the extra cost now involved the federal department has decided that each provincial department of agriculture should henceforth exclusively determine what stock should or should not receive such freight assistance."

The spokesman said the reason why Ontario does not participate in the plan is because that province has undertaken to shoulder the complete cost in the movement of Ontario livestock to the fair.

The special rates were cancelled on exhibits going to rural and other non-national fairs. In Quebec City Wednesday Emery Boucher, secretary-manager of the Canadian Association of Exhibitions said that a careful count will be kept this summer of livestock entries at rural fairs to determine whether the increased cost keeps farmers from entering their animals.

Queen Observes 50th Birthday

Sandringham, Norfolk, England, Aug. 4 (AP)—Salvoes of artillery fired around the world saluted Queen Elizabeth on her 50th birthday today.

Royal navy ships and military garrisons in Britain and throughout the Empire took part in the cannonading.

But the Queen herself heard little of it. For her, the birthday was a care, a walk in the garden and a family party at the Sandringham royal estate. Happy-birthday messages poured into the postoffice here.

$15,000 FIRE LOSS

Welland, Aug. 4—(CP)— Loss was estimated at $15,000 when a barn at the farm of Charles Bissell, Pelham township, was burned Thursday night. Destroyed was new hay valued at $180, 200 bushels of wheat, a registered calf, and an adjoining milk house with cooling equipment.

Jury Convicts Man on 6 Counts Attempted Murder

Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 4—(AP) — For placing a home-made gasoline bomb aboard an air transport on which his wife and two children were among the 13 passengers, 32-year-old aircraft engineer John Henry Grant has been convicted of six counts of attempted murder.

A jury yesterday convicted him of trying to kill three crew members of a United Air Lines plane, his 29-year-old wife, Betty, and their two children, Marie, 6, and Bobby, 5. Sept. 5 has been set for sentencing. Maximum penalty is 20 years on each of the six counts.

The machine, placed in Mrs. Grant's luggage, went off prematurely before the transport left for San Diego April 17. No one was injured.

Mrs. Grant purchased $25,000 in air flight insurance, naming her husband as beneficiary.

He testified he was heavily in debt and that he and his wife had argued for months over finances and home management. He denied that love for Miss Betty Suomela, 31, former chief stewardess for American Airlines here, had anything to do with his action. He said he and Miss Suomela were merely friends.

The suitcase containing the bomb was dropped as it was being loaded on the plane. Flames flared up but were quickly extinguished.

Grant grabbed the smoking suitcase and ran to his car in a nearby parking lot, where he was arrested.

He based his defence on the contention that at the last moment he had a change of heart and tried to retrieve the suitcase.

Dr. Mack Phillips Named Ontario Health Minister

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Dr. MacKinnon Phillips of Owen Sound Thursday was appointed Ontario Health Minister.

He succeeds Russel T. Kelly of Hamilton, who resigned because of ill health.

Dr Phillips entered the provincial legislature in 1945 as Progressive Conservative member for Grey North. He was re-elected in 1948.

A graduate of the University of Toronto, Dr. Phillips has had a distinguished political and community career in Owen Sound. He is 52.

His appointment was announced by Premier Frost.

Early speculation was that Welfare Minister Goodfellow would take over the health portfolio with Dr. Phillips getting the welfare post. But Mr. Goodfellow, acting Health Minister during Mr. Kelly's illness, was reported anxious to retain his present position to complete negotiations with the federal government on the question of old-age pensions.

Java Rebel Leader Freed by Court

Singapore, Aug. 4 (AP)—The Supreme Court ruled Thursday that Capt. R. P. P. (Turk) Westerling, Java rebel leader, cannot be extradited to Indonesia.

Indonesia had charged Westerling with murder, robbery and Arson and had asked Singapore to send him back for trial in connection with an abortive revolt he led against the Indonesian government last January.

For two days the former Dutch army officer, who received commando-type training near Stratford, Ont., in 1940, had listened with a bored expression to the legal arguments. He smiled broadly when the court announced the decision.

Asked where he intended to go when freed Westerling said "I really don't know—probably to Holland."

Westerling was arrested here in February when he fled Indonesia after a revolt by his "army of the heavenly host" collapsed. He was convicted of illegal entry and later of assault on his Indonesian room-mate in the cell where he was first confined.

Giving reasons he said: "In my view Winston Churchill should become Prime Minister of a coalition government."

Blackburn, a 35-year-old lawyer, has been a prominent Labor back-bencher with special interest in atomic energy. He has consistently advocated three-power talks on atomic energy control.

In his statement he said:

"It is with very much regret I have today resigned from the Labor party. In my view there is an overwhelming danger of all civilization being destroyed.

"We are fortunate that in Winston Churchill we have one of the great men of genius of all times and whose advice we have often ignored at our cost.

"In my view he should become Prime Minister of a coalition government."

Vancouver Aug. 4—CP—A rash of fishing boat mishaps on the west coast today left five dead, missing or injured and two boats at the bottom.

Altogether, five fishing vessels were involved. One exploded and sank at Prince Rupert, 400 miles north of here, and another capsized off Vancouver Island and disappeared. Two were washed ashore half-submerged and another was taken in tow off the Washington state coast.

The body of Frederick E. Radler, 43, floated up on a Vancouver beach. His boat, The Garbo, was picked up two hours later near the mouth of the Fraser River.

An unidentified vessel was towed by the gillnetter Aleutian to Point Roberts Wash., its two-man crew was missing. Their names were not known.

V2 Bomb Will be Seen at C.N.E.

Toronto, Aug. 4 — One of Hitler's most dreaded weapons, after Allied air forces had taken the control of the sky from his vaunted Luftwaffe, will form a signpost for the Tri-Service display at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. The 46-foot long V2 guided missile will be shown to the Canadian public for the first time in the display just west of the grandstand.

Designed in 1940, the first V2 was fired against London in September 1944, and was followed by more than 1,000 of these "messengers of death". An additional 1,500 were aimed at targets in the Lowlands. Work, which German scientists, brought to Canada and the U. S. to further develop the weapon for the Allies, is still a closely guarded secret.

US Army Calls 62,000 Reservists Next Two Months

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP) — The army announced today it will call out 62,000 individual reservists during September and October, "with or without their consent," for 21 months of duty.

They will come from a pool of about 185,000 male reservists who are not members of the organized reserve corps units. They will be used primarily to bring the National Guard and organized reserve units to full strength.

The first 32,000 will be in camp by Sept. 15, the remainder by the middle of October, the army's announcement said.

Those called first will be between 19 and 25 years old.

Priority will be determined by the number of dependents. Those with no dependents are to be called first, those with one dependent, second, and those with more than one dependent later.

Slits Windpipe To Save Life Of Brother

Plentywood, Mont, Aug. 4. (AP) —Bernard Lutness cut his brother's throat with a paring knife to save his life.

The story came out after the brother, Roald Lutness, returned to his farm from a hospital.

Roald found it difficult to breathe after a baseball hit his throat. He asked his sister-in-law, who once trained three months to be a nurse, to operate with a jack-knife.

Bernard Lutness handed his wife a knife he had been using to scrape paint from buildings on their northeastern Montana farm. She probed with the knife but didn't find the windpipe.

Bernard got the paring knife which had been sharpened for chicken killing. He probed with it and found the windpipe. Mrs. Lutness inserted a small rubber tube from a syringe in the opening.

The three drove 25 miles to Plentywood in less than 20 minutes.

Dr. A. N. Pronin replaced the rubber tube with a metal tube. He complimented the amateur surgeons, saying the incision was in the right place and only one-quarter inch longer than he would have made it.

Baseball Case Declared Tie By Ruling Judge

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 4 (AP) —A City Court judge doubled as an "ump" yesterday in a baseball case that involved a hit, hidden ball, run and wet grounds.

The hit: Theodore A. Russell's son batted a ball into the lawn of a neighbor, Mrs. Mary J. Harber.

The hidden ball: She was arrested on a charge of petit larceny on Russell's charges after confiscating the ball.

The run: Mrs. Harber said Russell chased her down the street.

The wet grounds: Russell claimed that Mrs. Harber turned the garden hose on his son.

In court, Mrs. Harber promised no more baseballs would vanish. Russell agreed to drop the larceny charge. A lawyer bought Russell's son a new baseball.

The judge called it a tie.

Bombing Raids Definitely Halt War Production

Tokyo, Aug. 4—(CP)—American B-29 bombing raids on Hungnam have "definitely halted" production of ammunition and other war material in that North Korean industrial centre, the United States Far East Air Forces said today.

In three big strikes the B-29s dropped 1,300 tons of bombs on Hungnam war plants.

Lt.-Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, F.E.A.F. commander, said in an official release they damaged 85 per cent of the buildings, laboratories, power plants and warehouses in the target area

Hungnam is the heart of the North Korean chemical and munitions industry, on the east coast 118 miles north of the 38th parallel.

B-29s hit the chosen (Korean) nitrogen explosives plant Sunday, the chosen nitrogen fertilizer factory Tuesday, and the Bogun chemical plant Thursday. All targets were described as "highly sensitive."

The plants were interrelated and dependent on each other, F.E.A.F. said.

The combine was the largest of its type in the orient.

Farmer Charged With Stabbing Kitchener Youth

Sudbury, Aug. 4 (CP)—George O'Connor, 35-year-old farmer, was remanded Thursday to Aug. 10 on a charge of stabbing one of three youth he claims broke into his house.

Roland Company, 18, of Kitchener, wounded after a scuffle with O'Connor on a railway flatcar, may be charged with breaking and entering, theft and trespassing, police said. He now is recovering in hospital.

His companions, Clarence Cote, 17, of Parry Sound, and Donald Fisher, 18, of North Bay, were remanded to Aug. 10 on those charges.

O'Connor told police he found his house at nearby Romford ransacked Wednesday night. Summoning police from a telephone near the railway tracks, he noticed three youths wearing clothes he recognized as his own.

He jumped aboard the train as it left for Sudbury and battled the three youths during the six-mile trip to Sudbury. Company was wounded after he and O'Connor tumbled to the ground in the CPR yards here.

Used-Car Prices Up in Toronto And Windsor

Toronto, Aug. 4 — (CP)—Late-model used-car prices in Toronto have increased about $75 in the last six weeks, dealers said today.

They said the Korean War and a general heavy demand for good used cars were mainly responsible.

The sales manager of one large automobile agency said the current volume of second - hand car sales was "exceptionally high for August." However, many owners apparently were reluctant to sell, fearing a shortage of new vehicles as a result of the Korean War. Scarcity resulted in higher prices.

At Windsor, Ont., dealers said prices have jumped about $100 in recent weeks.

OUR TOWN

MUD AND WATER

Yorkton, Sask, —Some scattered notes today on prairie impressions witty sayings of children and of Saskatchewan road warnings:

When we inquired this morning at the Regina tourist bureau about the best way to get to Riding Mountain Park in Manitoba the woman behind the desk smiled apologetically and said "Fly."

After 10 hours through a ceaseless rain on roads of deep wet mud I'm wishing we'd taken the advice.

Which brings us to the witty saying of our 10-year-old who peered through our splattered windshield and warned, "Here comes another truck, Daddy. Watch out for the wave."

But I'm afraid I'm boring you with stories about Canadian roads. Let me just add this: Stay clear of Saskatchewan in any wheeled vehicle.

Really is too bad the highways are this way. The country east and north of Regina which we wallowed through today is truly beautiful green and wooded with the wheat fields fresh and cool.

When the Trans-Canada Highway is a reality a great many Canadians will feel a new sense of identity with their native land on contemplating such sights.

Unhappily at the moment, it's possible to feel nothing but a sense of shame that we don't seem to know how to buid a decent highway.

For people like us who've never motored on the prairies before, coming upon a city is a new and refreshing experience.

Our drive into Regina the other day, for example, was a delight to our kids because the city was visible from many, many miles away.

With the late afternoon sun on it, Regina seemed a fairy town growing out of the rippling green sea of wheat.

I am reaching the conclusion as reluctantly as a coast-dweller should that a man could learn to love this long country.

Apart from the indescribable roads this day was pretty well ruined for us by a long period of unnecessary anxiety.

Shortly before noon we had our second blow-out on the trailer. Again the tire and tube were ground into shreds. We were able to get the car's spare wheel on the caravan working in ankle-deep gumbo and between cloudbursts, and set off again. The trailer was all tilted over because of the smaller wheel on the left hand side and we were very conscious of the fact that another flat would leave us stranded.

At this point a car pulled up alongside and the driver informed us that the Yorkton radio station had been broadcasting a message for us to contact our office in Vancouver immediately.

We were all very hearty for the next several miles trying to convince each other that it wasn't bad news. But naturally, every gloomy possibility was being considered behind the false front of optimism.

At a wayside farm house we put in the long distance call while the good lady of the place described in great detail where and how she's received all the morbid tidings of a long and apparently sad life.

And what was this emergency message all about? Well, the office just wanted to know where to forward our mail!

Oh, and speaking of all this grand fun I must tell you about the Regina tornado.

The warnings began on the radio stations in the early afternoon. A "small" tornado was reported approaching Regina from the south and all citizens were warned to "take necessary precautions."

Within a couple of hours the sky to the south was black and our trailer was swaying under the impact of a fierce wind.

We got the kids into the car and headed north. The city itself was strangely deserted and there was a weird blue light over everything.

The tornado itself, never materialized, but we had a thunder-and-lightning storm and then some rain that sounded like hammers on the roof. The paper reported next day that the hail storms to the south were the worst of the year.

Ah, Saskatchewan!

That much-discussed Canadian "inferiority complex" seems to be true in some respects, but certainly not when it comes to a question of water.

We've yet to be in a town where the citizens didn't consider that they had the finest drinking water on the continent. And, frankly, in some the water tasted like turpentine.

Regina was no exception. The water there is the hardest of any we've yet encountered. Most people have "softening" machines in their basement and in summer the supply which comes from artesian wells 10 miles from the city, is so limited there's a rationing system.

But every Reginan stoutly claims that for drinking it has no peer. At a tea party we were at the other day the local folks all agreed that Regina water is the only truly thirst-quenching variety in Canada. I suppose it's all in what you're used to.

'Perlon' Stockings Warmer Than Nylon

Nottingham, England. (CP)—Perlon, a synthetic yarn invented in Germany, makes stockings said to be as fine as nylons, and warmer to wear.

Thirty scientists in laboratories here are arranging with the Board of Trade for a sample supply.

The yarn will be tested for strength and stretch and sample pairs of stockings will be issued to women employees.

Perlon is unknown in Britain so far, apart from that used in odd pairs brought by returning visitors.

WEDDINGS

LYNCH—O'CONNOR

Immaculate Conception Roman Catholic Church, Peterborough, was the setting Saturday for the wedding of Bertha Margaret Mary, daughter of Mrs. Ellen O'Connor, and the late Mr. Stephen O'Connor, and Cornelius Michael Lynch son of Mr. Patrick Lynch and the late Mrs. Lynch. The church was decorated with snapdragons and sweetpeas. The Rev. James Greenan officiated and Mr. Bruce Lynch and Mr. Bill Rupert served the Mass. Mrs. Marian Aman played the wedding music and Mr. Robert Fleury, Belleville, sang "Panis Angelicus", "Ave Maria", "On This Day O Beautiful Mother" and "O Lord I'm Not Worthy" during the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Joseph O'Connor. She wore a white faille taffeta gown fashioned with tucked bodice, Queen Anne collar and long shealth-like sleeves. A front panel with lace applique accented the full bouffant skirt, which fell into a generous sweep at the floor. Her fingertip veil was of silk illusion, appliqued with lace and attached to a matching sweetheart halo. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis.

Miss Clara O'Connor, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a yellow brocaded taffeta gown with matching braided halo entwined with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of mauve gladioli cups.

The groomsman was Mr. William Lynch, brother of the groom, and Mr. William Hartwick and Mr. Stewart Brown were ushers.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Kawartha room, Empress Hotel. The bride's mother received in a navy crepe dress, navy hat, navy accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses. She was assisted by Mrs. E. Harrison, aunt of the groom. She wore a navy sheer gown, navy straw hat, navy accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

For the wedding trip the bride chose a frock of peacock blue and black, black accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Lynch will reside in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests who attended the wedding came from Belleville, Newburg, Toronto, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Douro and Campbellford.

Mrs. Cornelius Lynch, formerly Miss Bertha O'Connor, was honored by several showers before her marriage on Saturday. Miss Catherine Ford and Mrs. F. Cunningham, Belleville, were joint hostesses at an afternoon tea where the bride was presented with two sterling silver butter spreaders and two dessert spoons. Miss Geraldine Dillon and Miss Lillian Courneyea, Belleville, were joint hostesses at a miscellaneous shower for Miss O'Connor. A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. George Hynes, Roger Street, Peterborough. Miss O'Connor was presented with an electric iron by the Teachers' Association of the Ontario Shool for the Deaf in Belleville.

EAGLE—KELLAR

The altar, sanctuary and chancel of Christ Church, Belleville, were beautifully decorated with bouquets of white gladioli on Friday afternoon, July 28, at 1:30 o'clock when the Rev. Canon J. Grant Sparling officiated at a double ring ceremony, uniting in marriage Margaret Amelia Kellar, eldest daughter of Mrs. George Frederick Kellar, of Belleville, and the late Mr. Kellar, to Verne George Eagle, of Petawawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Martin Eagle, Burlington, Ont. Mr. S. Alec Gordon, guest organist, played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. G. Arthur Kellar. She wore a white floor length gown with bodice of lace, buttoned up to a small Peter Pan collar and tight fitting sleeves ending in points over the wrists. The long flowing skirt of nylon marquisette with panels of lace over taffeta ended in a train. Her floor length veil was caught to a matching halo trimmed with a sprig of lily-of-the-valley. She carried a half cascade bouquet of white Regal lilies with white maline and French lace.

The attendants were, Miss Ruth Kellar, maid of honor and Miss Winifred Kellar, bridesmaid, sisters of the bride. They wore matching gowns in nylon marquisette over taffeta with bodice buttoned up to a small Peter Pan collar, full skirt with circular tucks of taffeta and short sleeves with matching elbow mitts. Their headdresses were shoulder veils gathered to bands of matching flowers. The maid of honor was in yellow and carried a crescent bouquet of orchid gladioli. The bridesmaid was in orchid and carried a similar bouquet of yellow gladioli.

Little Heather Mills was flower girl in a floor length gown of Nile green organdie over taffeta with matching elbow mitts. Her dress was off-the-shoulder style with matching frill on the yoke and bottom of the full skirt. She wore a double band of white flowers in her hair and carried a miniature crescent bouquet of yellow and orchid gladioli.

Mr. James McPetrie, of Burlington, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Reginald Gellatly, of Kitchener, cousin of the groom, and Mr. Douglas Tufford, of Belleville.

MELROSE W.I.

Melrose—The W.I. met at the home of Mrs. E. Embury for their July meeting with an attendance of 35 ladies and 14 children.

As there was no business to be dealt with the convener of Public Relations and community activities took charge of the following program: Mrs. Ed. Lazier gave a paper on Korea; Miss B. McFarlane told how Cherry Valley W.I. had sponsored an oratorical contest with pupils from each school in the township competing, the topic to be on a family history or history of some building. All essays were to appear in their village history book.

Mrs. C. Hagerman and Mrs. C. Osbourne then gave readings of a more humorous nature. Mrs. Bruce Sherman favored with a solo, "You Are My Sunshine," this being the Sunshine Sisters tea.

Roll Call was then answered by "what my Sunshine Sister did for me" and to guess who the sister was. It was decided to carry on the sister idea for another year, so new names were drawn. Any members who were not present will draw a name at the August meeting which is to be held in the township hall.

The fourth line ladies then served dainty refresments, including ice cream as a special treat of the day and a social time was spent.

Cool as a Cucumber

The cucumber is one of the oldest known fruits and has been cultivated around the world for centuries. In England and on the American continent, large immature cucumbers are used extensively for salad and their cool freshness has led to the common expression "cool as a cucumber" Gherkins are of West Indian origin and are a small variety with many spines. In that country the gherkins are used either fresh, cooked or pickled. Very immature cucumbers of other varieties grown on this continent are pickled and called gherkins.

Cucumbers, although relished by Canadian when used in salads, are seldom cooked and served as a vegetable. The home economists of the Consumer Section Canada Department of Agriculture like the following ways of using cucumbers.

Cream of Cucumber Soup

2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons butter
3 cups diced cucumbers
1 1-2 cups tomatoes
1-2 teaspoon salt
2 1-2 cups thin white sauce

Brown the onion in the butter. Add cucumbers, tomatoes and salt. Cook slowly until cucumbers are tender. Then sieve and add to the hot white sauce. Serve piping hot with toasted bread crumbs. Yield: six servings.

Creamed New Potatoes and Cucumbers

2 cups medium cream sauce
18 small new potatoes
2 cups diced cucumbers

Boil potatoes in jackets until tender. Remove skins and add to hot cream sauce. Add cucumbers, heat and serve at once. Yield: six servings.

Cucumber Cheese Salad Dressing

1-2 cup cottage cheese
1-2 cup grated cucumber (drained)
1-2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons vinegar
Dash of pepper
Pinch of dry mustard

Mix all ingredients and beat well. Serve with sliced tomatoes or on shredded lettuce. Yield: about 1 cup.

Creamed Cucumbers

3 medium cucumbers
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1 1-4 teaspoons salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
Dash of mace

Wash and peel cucumbers. Cut in half lengthwise. Scoop out soft pulp and seeds with a spoon. Cut cucumbers in 1-4" slices. Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter in pan, add the cucumbers and cook for 5 minutes, tossing constantly. Melt the remaining tablespoon of butter, add flour and cook until it is frothy. Add milk and seasonings and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add cucumbers, re-heat and serve. Yield: six servings.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking?

The Dutch word "shrimpfen" meaning to shrink or shrivel hardly describes the big shrimps now being taken from the Florida coast. These pink beauties provide more than the usual mouthful and have a magnificent sea food flavor.

They cost more than smaller size shrimps, but they greatly reduce the tedious job of shelling and removing the veins.

All seafood seems to take kindly to celery. Celery salt on fish, celery salad with broiled seafood, celery in chowders are all samples of this pleasant combination. Shrimps and creamed celery are combined in the recipe below,

In place of making your own cream sauce, used canned cream of celery soup as a time saver.

Like other seafoods, shrimps must not be overcooked or they will become both tough and dry. The best procedure is to cook the sauce and celery together, and then add the shrimps as the last step just before serving.

Creamed Shrimps and Celery. Serves 4.

Wash 1 1-4 pounds of fresh shrimps.

Bring 1 quart and 1 pint of water to a boil. Add 2 cups of celery cut into 1-2 inch squares. Do not use spongy outside stalks of celery. Peel outside of celery stalks with vegetable peeler if celery is stringy. Cook celery until tender, about 10 minutes.

Remove celery from water but do not discard water.

Add to the water 2 teaspoons salt, 1 small bay leaf and 1 sliced onion. When water boils vigorously, add shrimps. Cook shrimps 5 minutes.

Drain shrimps, saving 1-2 cup of the cooking liquid.

Combine 1 can of undiluted cream of celery soup with the 1-2 cup reserved liquid. Bring to a boil. Add celery. Simmer a few minutes. Add 1-4 cup canned pimiento cut into 1-2 inch squares. Add 2 tablespoons dry sherry wine and salt and pepper to taste. Add shrimps and heat.

Serve on crisp, freshly made toast.

Pointers for Making Jellies

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)— Well-made, quivering moulds of jelly are the pride and joy of any conscientious housewife.

What's more, if she uses the various fruits as they come at the end of the season she will find herself with plenty of jellies on hand for the winter months.

Home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, have drawn on their experience for a few tips on jelly-making which should guarantee any housewife first-rate results.

Jelly should be made on clear days. When made on days when the humidity is high it is not as likely to set.

Another point to remember is that all jelly doesn't set immediately. It may be two or three days before it has set completely.

Proper Fruit Selection

Selection of fruit: Use a mixture of slightly under-ripe and ripe fruit. Under-ripe fruit gives pectin and ripe fruit gives food flavor and color.

Late summer or fall fruits rich in pectin: sour plums, apples, crabapples, grapes and quinces.

Water required: In pre-cooking fruits to extract their juice for jelly some water is required. But too much water should not be added since most of this must be boiled off again. This lengthens cooking time, which destroys some of the pectin, darkens the jelly and impairs the flavor.

For fruits such as apples, crabapples, grapes, plums and quinces, add enough water so that it can just be seen through the top layer of fruit. But do not allow the fruit to float.

The extract juice: After the fruit and water have been simmered in a covered kettle until fruit is soft and mushy, pour the hot cooked fruit into a moistened jelly bag made of flannel or several thicknesses of cheesecloth. Hang up over a bowl and allow to drip. If desired the bag may be squeezed; this increases the quantity of juice but the jelly will not be so clear.

Measure the extracted juice accurately in order to determine how much sugar is required. Work with small amounts of extracted juice at one time—not more than eight cups.

Sugar Requirements

Sugar required: The quantity of sugar required in making jelly is determined by the amount of Pectin contained in the fruit. The more pectin present the more sugar required.

Unless the juice is exceptionally high in pectin, three-quarters of a cup of sugar to one cup of extracted juice is sufficient. However, for juice extremely high in pectin one cup of sugar to one cup of extracted juice should be used.

To determine the amount of pectin in the juice, first boil the juice, uncovered, in a broad saucepan for three minutes. Remove saucepan from the heat and then test for pectin.

Pectin test: Measure one teaspoon fruit juice and one teaspoon alcohol (rubbing alcohol may be used) into a cup or small dish. Blend quickly together and let stand 30 seconds. If a jelly-like mass or clot is formed the juice contains sufficient pectin and the sugar may be added. If a clot does not form, boil juice a few minutes longer until pectin test is satisfactory. Then add the sugar.

Fashion Flashes

THE RIGHT BAG is a big aid when assembling an outfit. Softly handled silk bags are good with afternoon clothes, a bag such as a new draped faille pouch, black or navy, with a frame top of big white enamel daisies with yellow centres. One daisy makes the hanging clasp.

FILL-INS for deep necklines are prettier and more diversified than ever. From Italy there are jet collar-necklaces worked in wide, flat lacy effect, brightened with glass beads in red or aquamarine or green.

NOT MANY black and white hats this season, but those noted are invariably smart and arresting. Black straw cloth makes an off-the-face tricorne, heightened at the front with white and black feather wings. A sheer dotted black veil is tautly drawn over the face and ties in back.

A SURVEY of the latest Paris showings indicates many trends and revivals, such as the wraparound coat. One house does such a coat in dark beige wool fleece. It is cut on barrelled lines. The pockets reflecting this line are widely spaced, but both set on one side of the front which fastens away over to one side with two buttons. Flat collar and wide, pointed revers.

GOOD STYLING and improved techniques make a good woolknit suit a desirable buy for town, country or travel wear. Olive green for the slim skirt of a neat woolknit, with the jacket cross-barred in white on the green. The jacket has high-set pockets and buttons up to casual collar with tiny peaked lapels.

HAPPY DAYS for little sister and young teen-agers, for late Summer and early Fall fashions were never nicer, never more appealing and smart. Navy wool crepe makes a teen-age suit, a short bolero jacket model, with accordian-pleated skirt. The bolero fastens with white enamel daisy buttons and has a white pique Peter Pan collar over the fabric one.

French Fashions Feature Tweeds and Slim Silhouette

Paris, Aug. 3 (CP)—Latest Paris collections are featured by the use of rough wool coats, often replacing fur, and the use of jersey in informal frocks.

Bright-colored tweeds are used for classic suits. Skirt and frock outlines are slim, often with side drapery.

Jean Desses uses teddy-bear cloth and long-haired types for cloth overcoats. Small-checked worsted and broadcloth are used for morning and formal suits; these have a variety of cut, but all are tight-waisted with straight skirts.

Principal colors used by Desses are black, anthracite grey, dark olive, browns and duck-head blue.

Marcel Rochas picks the teddy-bear cloth for double-breasted ulsters, coarse two-tone canvas types for heavy coats and exaggerated furry weaves for long, loose jackets. Jersey is used almost exclusively for formals, often in dead leaf yellow.

Pierre Balmein show tight-waisted tweed suits and jumper suits, cut high to the throat and covered with a fur banded casual jacket. He also stresses jersey for frocks with fitted bodices and sideway skirt movement. Some are lifted over one hip in a flared line, often revealing a few inches of matching pants.

Fath Likes Pleats

Jacques Fath is using wools in place of four in simple designs. Seven-eighths length coats are featured, some swing, others belted. Pleating is general; accordion-pleated overcoats with a pleated contrasting lining are newest for afternoon wear.

Fath's frocks are extra-slim in silhouette, shaded jersey leading for informal numbers, black broadcloth with pleats from the knee for afternoon.

Bright tweeds, usually purple, are chosen by Alwynn for well-cut suits with uneven peplum. Sheath broadcloth afternoon frocks have a hip swathe finishing in fan-shaped side drapery, also found in strapless woollen evening gowns.

Tweed is also the Jacques Griffe story, with bat-sleeved jackets on informal suits drawn into a tight waist over a slender skirt. Bright colors are stressed, mostly raspberry and lime. Evening ensembles are fur-trimmed or bordered with steel embroidery.

Lanvin has fine wool cocktail dresses entirely patterned with cobweb embroidery. Paquin is showing high-waisted slim tailor-mades in the popular tweed.

Leading colors in all houses are black, steel grey, tobacco shades, bronze green, violet and rich reds. Popular fabrics are specked tweeds, furry woollens, velourcloths, fine broadcloths and plain jerseys.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Winning over a prejudiced father

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 20, and have been dating a boy of 22. We think a lot of each other and are very congenial, but my father does not approve of him because he is not of my own nationality.

This young man is very popular in our home town, and there are lots of girls who would do anything to go out with him.

What can I do to make my father understand that he is a very nice person? My father has never talked to him, so I don't think it's fair for him to judge someone on his nationality alone.

T.

Dear T.:

Prejudice of any kind is never fair, and I am sorry that your father should be so narrow-minded as to feel this way.

I don't believe, though, that anything you can say will change his mind. The only thing that would influence him would be for him to be willing to get to know this boy, so that he can see for himself what a nice chap he is.

If I were you, I would be frank about it with this young man and suggest to him that he try winning your father over by being specially attentive and courteous to him. There is no need for you to embarrass yourself, or put your father in a poor light, by telling the boy that your father is prejudiced against his nationality. Simply say that he is very strict about your going out with young men, and that you think it would help if he would try and make friends with him. Suggest that when he comes to see you he might spend a little time talking with your father, and ask his opinion about things in which he is interested. Men like boys thoughtful enough to refer to them, and you will probably be surprised to find what good results a little attention from this boy will achieve.

Don't fall for "a line"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I go with a boy four years older than I am, and, although he tells me he is very fond of me, I am still in doubt.

Whenever he goes out with another girl, everything that he says to me he says to her, too. When I ask him if other girls mean anything to him, he says "No", but he keeps acting the same way.

I would like a little advice on what I am to do.

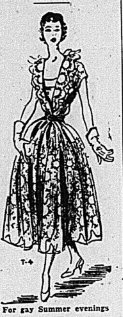
M.

Dear M.:

Don't be foolish enough to act as though you cared whether this boy goes out with other girls or not, and just laugh off the fact that he says the same things to the other girls that he says to you. Most boys do that, you know. That's what they call "having a line",—remember?

Don't flatter him by falling for it, either, because he's obviously just enjoying himself with all the girls, with no special feeling for any one of them, and that means you, too! And for goodness' sakes, stop asking him if other girls mean anything to him! If you treat him as casually as he treats you, you'll find everything will go better.

Charming Dance Dress



For gay Summer evenings

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THERE are plenty of gay doings ahead at resort and country club that should be just the ticket for a fragile, pretty little dance dress. This one is of eyelet-embroidered batiste over organdie and beneath the two frothy layers, a taffeta slip, the color pale green. A petal-like collar plunges to a deep V on this blithe young dress. The organdie banded taffeta slip fills in nicely at the decolletage. A dark green suede belt nips in the waistline.

BEAUTY

Posture and dress

If it is said of a woman that she has flair and style you can be sure of one thing; she knows how to carry herself with splendor. We unconsciously associated a slouchy stance with indifference and laziness. The impression one makes counts for much in estimating personality.

The bones of the body, plus muscles and ligaments, determine posture. They should be properly posed if the figure is to retain youthful outline and if overweight is to be avoided. Musculature should be strong; that is possible only when we have a certain amount of exercise every day. Activity is a law of life; the lazy girl who loves her soft cushions, who would not walk a mile if she got paid for it, had better keep that fact in mind.

The spinal column is the most important bony structure in the body. It forms a gentle curve, first outward, then inward, then outward. Held correctly, there is a neat nip-in at the waistline; when the shoulders are thrown forward that nip-in disappears. A beautiful back is necessary if one is to have style, be a lady of fashion.

Faulty posture may be caused by fatigue. The tired woman who doesn't feel like stretching her backbone or keeping erect, is inclined to assume a slouchy attitude. When that pose becomes a habit, the muscles of the abdomen go slack and there appears a little shelf below the waistline. When that is present there is no possibility of youthful lines. Slack muscles invite fat cells. Once fat cells take up residence upon the human shape, more cells keep forming.

Poor posture does away with the high chest, interferes with full, deep breathing. Unless the lungs are completely air-conditioned, the complexion loses coloring. It is a vicious circle.

Young girls, interested in appearance, ever aware of how they look, should be mindful of the manner in which they carry themselves. If they slump, throw the arms forward, let the upper portion of the back be rounded, nagging and scolding won't do a bit of good. Example is the best teacher. If father and mother walk erect, their children will probably do likewise.

In Dorothy Nye's book, "New Bodies for Old", she has this to say:

"Every body has a rhythm of its own. It needs no extra stimuli. As your body moves, obeying the command of mind, you sense your own rhythm. It will ripple along your muscles, sing along your nerves. Gradually, as your body movements are co-ordinated more and more harmoniously, you come to know this pure joy of movement."

Engagement Presents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son is announcing his engagement to a girl we have known for some time and like very much. The engagement is being announced at a tea at the home of her family, and they have invited my husband and me to come to the announcement party and to spend the weekend with them. They live about 300 miles from here. My problem is: What kind of a gift to take to my future daughter-in-law? Should I choose something personal for their new home? Have you some suggestions for this gift?

Also please tell me if it is customary to give him a gift at the time of the engagement-announcement?

C. L.

When the fiance's parents give their son's fiancee an engagement present (this is not necessary, but is a charming and generous gesture for them to make) it is customarily something personal for the girl or something for her personal trousseau. (Differing from the wedding present, which is an article for the new home.) The gift may be, for example: a compact or vanity case; fitted dressing-case; some article of luggage, perhaps a fitted suitcase; a piece of jewelry, real or costume, sometimes set with her birthstone; gold keychain; pen and pencil set; small clock, folding or for the dressing-table; gold or silver or enamel purse-pencil; evening bag; small comb with jeweled handle, in a case, for carrying in evening bag; photograph frame; camera (if she is a camera fan); jewel case. Or article for her trousseau; lingerie, perhaps a matching set, embroidered with her first name; handkerchiefs (perhaps a lovely lace handkerchief to carry on her wedding day); gloves; handbag; stockings; negligee and so forth.

It isn't customary for his family to give the fiance an engagement present, but if you do, I suggest you give it to your son after the date of the announcement party.

Proper for finacee to visit fiance's family

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our engagement is to be announced soon, but because of circumstances, we cannot be married until next Spring at the earliest. My fiance wants very much to have me spend my vacation with his family in their home two states away from here. I have never met any member of his family, but of course he has told me much about them and I am thrilled to go. But mother and Dad think this visit might be criticized and that I shouldn't consider going until we are married. Do you agree?

Nanette R.

I'm wondering if you "told me all" about your parents' point of view? Isn't their hesitation perhaps due to the fact that you may not have received a direct invitation from your fiance's family? Your fiance's invitation is not enough. . . .you're not going to visit him, you're going to visit them, and his mother, the hostess of the home, should invite you directly. Either by note or by telephone . . . .but not indirectly via her son. When you receive this invitation it will be completely proper for you to accept and to spend your vacation with them. (As a matter of fact, when your fiance tells his family of his engagement, his mother should immediately get in touch with you, by note of telephone, to tell you of the family's happiness about the engagement, to give you welcome to their family, and, if convenient to them, to invite you to visit them.)

REMAINS IN CABINET

Toronto, Aug. 4 — (CP) — Russell T. Kelley, former minister of health for Ontario whose resignation was announced Thursday, will continue in the cabinet as a minister without portfolio.

Premier Frost said that "despite the ill health which forced Mr. Kelley's retirement as health minister, he will continue to hold his seat as a member from Hamilton - Wentworth and remain in cabinet as a minister without portfolio."

Appointment of Dr. Mackinnon Phillips to replace Mr. Kelley was announced earlier.

Summer Food Specialties

Market stalls are a picture with the clear white, brilliant reds and various shades of yellow set against a background of greens. Among the many gay vegetables, the pale cream of vegetable marrows and the golden yellow of summer squashes will tempt the homemaker.

Whatever the outward appearance, all summer squash is quite similar in flavor.

Vegetable marrow is a great favorite on European tables but is often overlooked by Canadian homemakers. This vegetable must be used when young as it develops a stringy coarseness as it matures. Too often this juicy vegetable is cooked in a quantity of water and when served is water-logged and unappetizing. Being of such delicate texture, vegetable marrow does require special attention in cooking but good results warrant a little extra care.

Summer squash such as Cymling, Crookneck, Zucinni and the patty pans are used when quite small before the seeds have developed or the skin toughened They are used without peeling and the centre portion is not removed.

Summer squash is delicious when sliced crosswise in 1-inch slices, dipped in egg and crumbs and sauted in hot fat until delicately browned and tender.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, suggests the following ways to use summer squash and vegetable marrow.

Stuffed Vegetable Marrow

1 small vegetable marrow
2 cups soft stale bread crumbs
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 cup chopped cooked meat
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter

Cut marrow in half lengthwise and remove seeds. Place halves on a greased baking sheet. Mix bread crumbs, onion, parsley, meat, salt and pepper and fill marrow halves. Dot top with butter. Bake in moderate oven. 350 degrees F., for 1 hour. Yield: six servings.

Vegetable Marrow Casserole

3 cups sliced vegetable marrow
1-2 cup sliced onion
6 medium tomatoes, sliced
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
2 tablespoons butter

Peel marrow, remove seeds and cut in 1-8 inch slices. Arrange vegetables in alternate layers in a greased casserole, sprinkling each layer with salt and pepper. Dot with butter. Bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees F., for 45 minutes. Yield: six servings.

Scalloped Squash With Peppers

3 cups sliced summer squash
1 cup sliced green pepper
1-4 cup sliced onion
Salt
Pepper
1-2 cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons butter

Arrange vegetables in layers in a greased casserole, sprinkling each layer with salt, pepper and bread crumbs. Dot top with butter. Cover and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., about 35 minutes. Remove cover and bake 10 minutes longer or until crumbs are brown and squash tender. Yield: six servings.

Spiritual Illiterates

By ROY L. SMITH

One of the distinctive contributions the science of psychiatry has made to modern life is its emphasis upon the importance of the spiritual aspects of living.

Modern medicines is making radical adjustments in its techniques and procedures in order to conform to spiritual factors. The influence of thinking, mental moods, and spiritual attitudes is increasingly recognized by scientists.

Shortly before his death Charles Steinmetz, the genius whose life work made such a contribution to the comforts of living, declared that it was his belief that the greatest discoveries that lay ahead for humanity would be made in the realm of the spiritual. There is abundant reason to believe he was right.

Widespread Ignorance of Spiritual Forces

It remains true, however, that in no aspect of life is the average man more ignorant than in the field of the spiritual.

Everyone admits that the physical life is governed by law. Professor Compton said some years ago that the greatest discovery science has made is that all of life is governed by law.

Popular superstitions, the widespread acceptance of fantastic teachings of cultists, and the inability of many earnest people to make religion work—all this and more is the result of a stark illiteracy even among many spiritually minded people.

The Bible Is a Spiritual Text

This week's Sunday School lesson is a study of the utmost importance of the scriptures as a spiritual guide.

The Hebrews had undergone a terrible experience. Their little nation after a stormy and embattled existence of about 450 years had at last been crushed between the conflicting ambitions of great powers.

> The Sunday School lesson for August 13: "Ezra, interpreter of God's Word," Ezra 7; 8:15-36; Nehemiah 8-9,

For hundreds of years the nation had believed that Jehovah would never let them perish, no matter how powerful their foes. The calamities which had befallen them had shaken this faith almost to the vanishing point. But a small group of the faithful believed that their misfortunes were a direct result of their sin, and had determined to find out what their sins had been. This drove them back to their textbook—their scriptures.

By a rare bit of good fortune a small company of the exiles were at long last permitted to return to their native land, there to re-establish the nation. As the initial step in rebuilding, a great leader—Ezra, by name—called a convocation of the people and in the presence of them all he read to them the entire "Book of the Law," their scriptures.

It was within this sacred book that the eternal principles were to be found upon which the foundations of the reviving nation were to be laid. The scene described in the eighth chapter of Nehemiah is one of the most dramatic episodes in all the Bible.

Misconceptions of the Bible

The Bible in neither a book of science, history, economics, law, or philosophy, though all these ideas are to be found within it. Primarily it is an exposition of the principles which underlie life for all men.

It is a fact, of course, that the Bible tells the stories of immoral men, but for the purpose of showing how their immortality defeated them. It is a very human book which describes the faults and vices of men, sometimes very realistically, but always for the purpose of warning men against fault and vice.

There is history recorded in the Bible which has, in some instances been shown to be a faulty record. But no one has ever been able to show that the deep spiritual principles of life which it expounds have ever led men astray.

There is some science in the Bible, and it was the most advanced science of the day in which the book was written. Later discoveries have shown that the science of the Bible was inadequate, but no discovery has ever shown that the moral and spiritual principles set forth by the Bible have been inadequate.

Mark Twain once said, "I am not troubled by the things in the Bible which I do not understand, but I am troubled by those things which I do understand and which I find very difficult to measure up to." This is the basic difficulty of most of us.

Ezra, the Interpreter

In the absence of newspapers, radio, and great preaching missions (to say nothing of the pulpits which cover the land), Ezra, the most profound student of the scripture among all the Jews, undertook to explain the profound meaning of "the Law." At the conclusion of his exposition the people by popular vote and consent, accepted the book as their basic law.

From that day until this the Jews have been a people of a book, and that book has saved them from oblivion. Without army, navy or political power they have been preserved by the book. And modern civilization will be preserved, or it will disintegrate, precisely as it honors or repudiates the Bible.

Should Win Shot With Cardinals Next Season

(By The Associated Press)

Larry Ciaffone, Rochester Red Wings' catcher-outfielder, is making life miserable for International League pitchers and should earn a shot for a berth on the parent St. Louis Cardinals next Spring.

Ciaffone helped the pace-setting Red Wings down Syracuse Chiefs last night 7-2. He banged out three hits including his ninth homer and drove in three runs.

Righthander Eddie Yuhas went all the way for the wings to post his 12th victory against five losses.

Montreal's third-place Royals dropped five games off the pace by losing 5-4 to the fourth-place Jersey City Giants

Red Hardy posted his 10th victory for the Giants. He scattered nine hits including a homer by Toby Atwell.

Springfield Cubs downed Buffalo Bisons 5-2 scoring all of their runs in the seventh inning.

Baltimore's second-place Orioles remained 3 1-2 games back of the Wings by edging Toronto Maple Leafs 8-7 in the first game of a doubleheader. The teams battled to a 6-6, 13-inning tie in the finale which was called to allow Baltimore to make train connections.

The Orioles overcame a 7-1 deficit to win the opener, Al Cihocki then blasted his 13th homer to win the game in the seventh and final inning.

Baltimore scored twice in the ninth inning of the nightcap to take a 6-5 lead but Johnny Mayo homered in the Toronto half to send the game into overtime.

Leafs said they would protest the second game.

Manager Jack Sanford notified the umpires the game was being played under protest when Plate Umpire Bob Austin ruled that a ball hit over the fence by Toronto second baseman Bobby Rhawn in the eighth inning was in foul territory.

Rhawn was eventually declared a strikeout victim when he failed to return to the batter's box when play resumed.

Teams Exempted That Receive Less Than $20 Game

Toronto, Aug. 4. (CP)—New tax regulations covering amateur sport in Ontario will likely deal a serious blow to the Ontario Amateur Hockey Association, President Harold Ballard of the Senior 'A' Marlboros said last night.

The regulations, announced yesterday by Premier Leslie Frost, exempt teams on which 75 per cent of the players receive less than an average of $20 a game. Otherwise, they have to pay the Ontario hospital tax.

If one team in a league is ineligible for exemption, all teams are. And if teams from an exempt league meet teams from a non-exempt one, both teams are taxable for playoffs.

Ballard said the regulations will have an adverse effect on negotiations for a Niagara Falls, Ont., team in the Senior A. Two intention to withdraw if the Niagara Falls team does not enter.

A definite answer regarding the new entry is expected next Tuesday.

The government also rejected a proposal by the Junior 'A' Association that they pay the tax this year and apply for a rebate if eligible. Tax administrator J. J. O'Neill said eligibility for exemption this year would depend on whether clubs were eligible last year.

Ballard said he couldn't understand where the 75 per cent clause came from.

"Why didn't they have it $25 across the board? A team could pay some of its players $1,000 a game and still be eligible," he said.

Stewart-Warner Scores Shutout In Softball Tilt

Stewart-Warner notched their third victory of the season Thursday evening as they over-ran Stephens Adamson's defences 9-0 in a regularly scheduled Commercial Softball League "A" game at the Alemite field.

The Alemite crew scored early and left no doubt as to the eventual outcome of the struggle as they continued to pile up the runs. It was Stephens Adamson's 8th loss in as many games.

Two errors, a walk, and a single netted the Alemite two runs in the first frame. A neat double play by Stephens Adamson in the second choked off a threatened rally, but it was a temporary halt as the Alemite squad roared back for four runs in the third on a walk to Bertrim, a single by Claude Carr, an error that gave Lundberg a life, a single by Jack Moon, and John Ronsky's home run to right field. That was all for starter Bill Frain and Frank Day came to the rescue. He was nicked for five hits and three runs over the rest of the route in a very creditable job of relief hurling.

Stephens Adamson made their most determined bid in the eighth inning loading the bases with two away, but reliefer Roy McMillan bore down to strike out Art Deline to preserve the shutout.

Dracup Starts

Harold Dracup started on the hill for the winners walking three, striking out 10, and allowing two scratch singles in six innings to claim the win. Roy McMillan kept the shutout intact in three innings of relief walking two, striking out two, and giving up two hits for no runs.

Bill Frain started for the losers and in three frames walked two, struck out two, and gave up four hits for six runs. Day went the rest of the way in relief walking six, whiffing five, and surrendering five hits for three runs.

Diamond Antics of Tip-Toppers, All-Stars Delight Large Crowd

Softball "as she is played, and as she ain't played" delighted some 1,200 people in the Exhibition Grounds last night when the internationally famous world champion Tip Top Tailors team of Toronto displayed their diamond versatility against a team of All-Stars selected from the Belleville Commercial Softball League.

The score is of no consequence but just in case someone is interested the game ended in a "victory" more ways than one for the starry visitors. The final count was 8-2.

It was a grand show. The world champions showed flashes of the brilliant form that carried them to a world title last year and interspersed their diamond calisthenics with some hilarious comedy. It was outstanding entertainment and the large crowd stayed until the last man was out in the ninth innings.

Justice Clicks

Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice famous Negro pitching star of the Tip Tops lived up to advance notices. The powerful Negro unleashed his sizzling fast ball that had the Belleville batters swinging hopelessly at the cool breezes that swept across the diamond, and at other times rolled the ball along the ground or flipped it high in the air while the crowd howled approval. Coming to bat, Justice knelt beside the plate, picked out a pitch he liked and drove it to the outfield for a clean hit. On another occasion, he placed his infield outside the foul lines while he clowned on the mound.

Percy McConnor another Negro pitching star thrilled the crowd with an outstanding display of hurling despite the fact that Umpire "Red" Townsend was of the opinion that some of his pitches were illegal. McConnor stood the Belleville batters on their collective ears with his blazing speed and tricky change of pace.

Nor were the Tip Tops the only comedians on the softball stage.

Good Comedy

Ross Empey, Belleville first sacker started a good-natured feud with the Toppers and the crowd quickly caught on. His ribbing from the first sack drew howls of laughter but the climax to this diamond skullduggery came when Empey strode to the plate to bat. Immediately he took his stance at the plate the entire Tip Top team sat down at their various positions except Pitcher McConnell. The crowd howled. McConnell slashed three lightning-like pitches across the plate while Empey waved his bat futilely at the air. It was splendidly done and much appreciated by players and crowd alike.

Aside from the comedy both teams displayed marked fielding ability. The All-Stars made some sensational catches in the putter gardens and they drew well-deserved acclaim from the crowd. Bob Hunter local pitcher blazed a blistering fast ball across the plate in the three innings he worked and perhaps no finer tribute can be paid to the young hurler than that given by the Tip Tops management. Said they, "We have faced a lot worse pitching in the Beaches Senior Fastball League than that dished up by Hunter tonight."

Coach Barriage used Hunter, Lum Carson, Don Boyle and Al Adams on the mound and shifted his team nearly every innings so as to give each player a chance.

Following the game the Tip Tops and the All-Stars were guests of the Optimist Club sponsors of the game in the sergeants' mess of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment in the Bridge Street armouries. There the players fraternized and enjoyed sandwiches and refreshments.

Tip Top Tailors: Emery Miley, Spring, Palermi, Deer, Geraldi, Sadler, Stewart, McConner, Justice Pulfer, McCullagh.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

MY GOODNESS, BOYD, SUCH LANGWIDGE!

Boyd Upper of the sports staff of this newspaper does not think too highly of the present heavyweight boxing situation and the news that Joe Louis was staging another comeback irritated the young man no end. So much, in fact, that he burst into print over the matter. Says he:

Joe Louis' eminent return to the prize fight ring is the saddest body blow that sports lovers have had to stomach in the past decade.

The once great "Brown Bomber" who will always rank as one of the world's great fighting machines will be returning to the scenes of his glory as a paunchy ghost of the champion that used to be. It is a sad anticlimax to a brilliant career in the prize ring. It is a sadder comment on the state of heavyweight boxing in the world today.

The great Louis is coming back into the fight game for the lofty reason that if he doesn't the U.S. Treasury Department is likely to slap him in jail for non payment of back taxes. In this sense the fight looms up as the toughest one of his career.

The fact that Louis is forced out of honorable retirement into a situation that has neither honor nor glory after supposedly winning four million dollars with his fists, has at least one good point: it should lead to an investigation of prize fighting in the United States. There is probably no other racket extant that could earn a man four million lettuce leaves in ten years and at the end of that time leave him in hock to the government, his managers, his handlers, and his promoters.

Louis, who was cut more ways than a picnic ham, is apparently in need of money while the men who stood on the sidelines while he took the punishment are wallowing in the backwash of those oh so lovely dollars.

And there were millions of those dollars too. The "Bomber" was supposed to have earned four million dollars for himself as the champion's share of twenty-five fights. At the same time he made a dozen or so otherwise down and out fighters moderately wealthy because they happened to be the best of a poor lot of heavyweights completely outclassed by the great champion himself. The dollars also made Mike Jacobs the wealthiest promoter in the history of prize fighting, and kept alive a small army of hangers-on who did nothing to earn their keep.

In addition to his winnings Louis also picked up untold thousands in barnstorming tours. One such round of South America in 1947 netted him two hundred thousand dollars and only recently he was drawing the princely salary of one thousand dollars a day with a travelling circus for riding twice around the big top on a horse that weighed only slightly more than he did.

He also picked up an undisclosed amount for tossing his heavyweight crown to Ezzard Charles, a hand-picked successor, sponsored by the International Boxing Club, of which Joe was made a director. What sums he has gathered in that capacity since, are not known but even with the flotsam and jetsam from Jacob's Beach that have drifted over to the IBC the gleanings should not be too hard to handle.

How a man could spend all that money himself leaves lots of room for speculation but the fact remains that it is gone. Several of the Bomber's last fights were designed for no other apparent reason than to get him out of hock to the Treasury Department but every time he laced on a glove he found himself in deeper with the Federals and there is little reason to suppose that this time will see a complete reformation.

Aside from the tax angle and the likelihood that Louis, by collecting a big purse, might beat a Federal rap, there is not one good thing that can be said for the fiasco currently brewing.

Should he win, it would only prove that the heavyweight picture is more dismal than even the most pessimistic have ever imagined. Should he lose he only proves again that an old man, no matter what his prowess during youth, has been dealt the blow by which Time levels everyone.

And it is just a matter of time before this aging old warrior is kayoed by Father Time. At 36 the heavyweight championship of the world requires just a little more endurance than pushing a lawn clipper or zipping up your sweat shirt. Younger men who should never have been in the same town with the champ at the time of his prowess are going to be thrust into the ring with him where in all likelihood they will thrash him because they are younger and stronger.

And supposing that Louis does win. Does he retire again until somebody else comes along or does he shuffle into the ring again and again in a vain effort to stave off the tax collector?

The nonsense that Louis is reviving the fight game is one of the biggest hoaxes ever plotted to hoodwink the public. A victory by him would destroy the heavyweight tatters currently blowing in the press agent's breeze. A loss by him would only serve to sadden all his loyal fans of former years who remember him, and would like to continue to remember him, as a great, and undefeated champion.

BIFF AND BAM!

Wrestling action of an explosive type appears to be a certainty in tonight's mat headliner at the Memorial Arena, when Seelie Samara, Negro sensation and champion of South Africa, meets Fred Atkins, rock-ribbed power-house and champion of Australia. Both these sturdy heavyweights are in the 245-250 pound bracket and both are rugged athletes. Though Atkins favors the rough tactics and Samara the clean, scientific methods, nevertheless Samara has a few legitimate holds that are also real punishing smashers, notably his ko-ko bump. In addition, both Samara and Atkins are topnotch wrestlers. Consequently, their collision can be expected to produce plenty of hard-fought mat action before a winner is declared. The semi-final will bring together Warren Bockwinkle, the St. Louis smoothie, and Abe Zvonkin, former Hamilton football star. In the first match, the Masked Marvel will be in his first test in this part of the continent, opposing "Tiger" Jack Moore, of Toledo, Ohio.

$20 Game or Less Player Classed As an Amateur

(By The Canadian Press)

The Ontario government took a stab Thursday at answering the thorny question: "What's an amateur?"

Premier Frost said in a Toronto announcement that, for purposes of taxation under the hospitals tax act an "amateur" athlete will be one whose services are worth $20 a game or less. Any team which pays its players more than that will be taxable.

Last session, the legislature broadened the hospitals tax act to take in the activities of various athletic clubs—hockey, baseball and football, among others—whose gates and salaries had reached the proportion of big business.

"It has been found difficult to know just where to draw the line for taxation purposes," the Premier said. "We now have set up the arbitrary figure of $20 a game."

Premier Frost felt that this figure would not have an injurious effect on the actions of teams in smaller towns.

"We are after the big fellows who pay their players as much as $300 a game," he said.

Under provincial regulations all athletic clubs will have to file a statement showing salaries paid players.

Morris Mite and Adeline Hanover divided the $5,000 purse in the first running of the Maple Leaf Cup for trotters at Toronto's Thorncliffe raceway Thursday.

O. E. Corbeil of Montreal, owner of Morris Mite, won the handsome gold trophy on the toss of the coin.

The trophy was presented to Mr. Corbeil by James Dempsey, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature for Renfrew South.

The secondary feature of the day, a $2,000 racing stake for three-year-olds, was won by Castle Brook, owned by Mrs. Louis Mack, Hamilton. Expertly handled by Bill Harvey, Castle Brook won both divisions of the race.

Miss Anne Sharpe, three-handicap shotsmith from the Look Out Point Golf Club, Welland, carried of top honors Thursday at the "field day" golf tourney of women players from Ottawa and district clubs.

She toured the Ottawa Rivermeade course in 88 and was followed by Mrs. G. H. McGee of the Chaudiere Club, Hull, Que., Mrs. R. E. Watson, Ottawa Hunt and Golf Club and Mrs. Ken Shakespeare of Toronto's Scarboro Club who finished tied for second with 89's.

The Welland ace, who has assured herself a place on the Ontario ladies' interprovincial team for the second straight year, consistently outdrove her playing partner, Mrs. Watson. She was in serious trouble only twice and recorded one birdie—a four on the 400-yard sixth hole—and seven pars.

John Stuart, Toronto racehorse owner, was temporarily suspended by the stewards at Fort Erie race track Thursday and his case referred to the Ontario racing commission.

Horses in his stable—leading Ontario money winner in 1949—were barred from racing until his case is disposed of by the commission.

Reason for the suspension was "alleged misuse of an owner's badge issued to the stable by the Ascot Turf Club and derogatory remarks. . . prejudicial to the best interests of racing."

The date of the Willie Pep-Sandy Saddler featherweight title fight was shifted Thursday to Sept. 8 by the International Boxing club. Previously the date had been Sept. 6 in Yankee Stadium. The site remains the same.

Babe Zaharias Holds Spotlight At Tam O'Shanter

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP)—Babe Zaharias and Jimmy Clark, a comparative unknown, shared the spotlight today in the opening rounds of the Tam O'Shanter golf carnival.

The Babe, voted outstanding woman athlete of the half century in The Associated Press poll, broke the Tam course record with a six-under-par 70 yesterday in the first round of the all American Women's Open.

It made many a masculine pro attempting to qualify in the other section of the $75,000 golf circus look up with awe.

Babe's 36-34 tally was six strokes better than her nearest rival in the women's scramble.

The unheralded Clark, of Huntington Beach, Calif., led some 250 pros through qualifying trials with a six-under-par 66.

While the women enter their second round of 72-hole medal play today, 50 men pros complete qualifying starting at daybreak, and 150 amateur men start their first round in the three-ply traffic jam.

Clark was a stroke ahead of Pete Cooper, Ponte Vedra, Fla., among the pro qualifiers.

The men pros open in their $20,000 All-American tourney first round Saturday. Sixty-six are to qualify for it, plus 20 exempted players.

To keep the records straight, Mrs. Zaharias' best round of golf in her career was a 64 posted in exhibition play at Santa Monica, Calif., with pro Stan Kertes in 1938.

Her best tournament mark was a 67 in the 1943 Phoenix, Ariz., meet which topped the entire first-round field, including Ben Hogan, Sam Snead and all other hotstots.

Happy to be Back

Meanwhile, Bobby Locke, the amazing South African golfer, is "happy to be back in America."

"I'm ready to forget about any past troubles," Locke says. The South African won the Tam O'Shanter in 1947, finished second in '47 and now is back after being barred from U.S. competition by the Professional Golfers Association in 1949 for "infraction of rules."

Locke's "infractions" were that he did not keep dates to play several tournaments principally the Inverness round robin at Toledo. At the time Locke had accused the P.G.A. of a "lot of nonsense."

But all is forgiven now. Locke and Norman Von Nida, the Australian champion, and Aussie Pickworth, the Irish champion, all exempt from qualifying in the Tam tournament, played practice rounds yesterday.

Detroit Tigers in Position To Fatten American Loop Lead As Yankees and Indians Clash

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Give Detroit a few more invalids like Art Houtteman and you can buy your World Series tickets for Briggs Stadium.

Houtteman, forced to pass up his regular turn because of a strained side muscle, did a six-hit job on the challenging Yankees yesterday, 5-2. When Art got through for his 13th victory, New York was challenging for second place, not first. And Detroit's league lead measured 2½ games.

Earlier this week, they said Tiger pitchers were weary and overworked. The well - rested Yankee staff, never used on relief, was ready to take over. Detroit led by one-half game, going into a three-game series.

When Tommy Byrne, usually a Tiger killer, was beaten by Dizzy Trout Tuesday night, the Yankee drive was delayed. When Hal White shut out New York with two hits Thursday, it was delayed some more. Now, after Houtteman's comeback, the Yankee boom is all but dead. Cleveland, moving into second place while idle, is the new threat.

With New York running smack into onrushing Cleveland in a three-game wrestle for second place starting tonight, Detroit has a chance to pull away against Washington.

Detroit is in fine shape after its series sweep from the Yankees.

Four runs in the first inning tucked the game away for the Tigers. Ed Lopat, shooting for his 14th victory, got only one man out. He gave up four runs on 3 hits, a walk and his own error. Fine relief work by Fred Sanford and a passing-fair job by Joe Page were too late.

Mize Hits Homer

Johnny Mize's 12th homer, following a walk to Hank Bauer, provided the only Yankee scores in the fourth inning.

The only other action in the American League had little to do with the pannant race as sixth-place Chicago shut out seventh-place Philadelphia 1-0. Randy Gumpert blanked the A's with only four singles.

The four other clubs in the American League were not scheduled.

Rain slashed the National League schedule, washing out a Pittsburgh-at-Brooklyn day game and a Cincinnati-at-Philadelphia night game. As Chicago and New York were not scheduled, that left only St. Louis and Boston.

Vern Bickford, the Braves' brilliant righthander, came up with his second straight four-hitter and 13th victory with a 5-1 triumph over the Cardinals. The triumph boosted the Braves into second place in front of the idle Brooklyn Dodgers and three games back of the leading Phillies.

Bickford retired 10 men in a row until Red Schoendienst hit a homer in the fourth. Bob Elliott evened the score with his 17th homer in the home half of the inning. Boston went out front in the fifth, and added two more on Sam Jethroe's 11th homer with a man on in the sixth. Walker Cooper ended the day's scoring with his 11th homer in the seventh. All the homers came off Al Brazle, suffering his fifth loss.

IRFU Decision In Direct Conflict To That of CRU

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Jackie Stewart and Earl Valiquette will probably think twice before they sign their names to anything from here in.

Ever since they signed documents binding them to two football clubs simultaneously, a steadily-increasing army of officials have been telling them what to do about it, and what will happen to them if they don't.

What must make it confusing for Stewart and Valiquette is that approximately equal numbers of committee-room experts have ordered them to Hamilton and to Edmonton—the two cities with claims to their services—on pain of suspension, legal action and official displeasure.

Latest group to put in their two cents' worth are the governors of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union, who met in closed session yesterday and decided to back Hamilton Tiger-Cats. The Cats claim they have backfielder Stewart and lineman Valiquette under contract.

The I.R.F.U. decision appears to leave it in direct conflict with the Canadian Rugby Union, football's governing body, which ruled 24 hours earlier that Stewart and Valiquette must play their football for Edmonton Eskimos of the western Canada League, for whom they signed C.R.U. playing certificates.

Both players hold jobs in Hamilton and would like to stay there.

Wes Brown of Ottawa, secretary of the I.R.F.U., gave no explanation of the governors' decision to back their Hamilton entry or the means by which they hoped to persuade the C.R.U. to change its mind. Tiger-Cat officials have threatened legal action to force Stewart and Valiquette to fulfill their contracts.

President Al Anderson of the Eskimos, who left for the west after fighting his club's case here before the C.R.U. Wednesday, said in rebuttal it was up to the C.R.U. to defend its stand and that Stewart and Valiquette would play their football in Edmonton or nowhere.

NO NIGHT RACING

Baltimore, Aug. 4 (AP) —The State Racing Commission last night gave a firm "no" to the half mile Marlboro track's request to hold its 10-day meeting next month under the lights.

The commission did not elaborate on the bare announcement.

The attendance generally has been on the decline at the five Maryland half-mile circuits, and Marlboro officials wanted to see if night flat racing would draw the big crowds the state's four harness tracks are packing in.

GRAND HOLIDAY

New Delhi — (CP) — Schoolchildren from the United Kingdom arrived here recently to participate in India's Independence celebrations this month. The 60 children will stay for about two months and will return in time for school opening in September.

Hank Borowy Will be Help To Detroit Tigers

Detroit, Aug. 4. (AP)—Red Rolfe, manager of the American League's pace-setting Detroit Tigers, got out the welcome mat today for Pitcher Hank Borowy, a former New York Yankee teammate he thinks can help the Tigers sew up the pennant.

Waived out of the National League, Borowy was picked up by the Tigers yesterday from Pittsburgh Pirates in a deal which involved close to $30,000.

It was second time Borowy has been waived in the majors.

In 1945, he was going great guns for the Yanks, he was waived out of the American League and promptly picked up for about $100,000 by the Chicago Cubs. Just as promptly, he pitched the Cubs to a pennant.

If Borowy is half the pitcher he was in 1945, the Tigers will be a shoo-in. And Rolfe, a keen student of ball players, thinks he will be just what the doctor ordered for his mound staff. He plans to use Borowy mostly as a relief hurler but may spot him occasionally in doubleheaders.

Tiger General Manager Billy Evans, one of the most astute men in baseball, said flatly that Borowy "has a lot of good pitching left."

Has 1-3 Record

Borowy came to the Pirates from the Phillies a few months ago after pitching in only three games. He made 11 mound appearances for the Bucs and has a 1-3 record.

That's not much of a record but the Tigers figure Borowy will have a little more incentive playing for a pennant contender instead of a last-place team like the Pirates.

Borowy broke into the majors with a great 15-4 record with the Yanks in 1942. The next year it was 14-9; in 1944 it was 17-12 and in 1945 he had won 10 and lost only five when the Yanks put him on the waiver list.

For some unexplained reason, no one claimed him in the American League. Then the Yanks sold him to the Cubs where he finished out the season by winning 11 more games and losing only two.

Borowy's great work gave the Cubs the pennant and his herculean efforts kept them in the World Series against Detroit for the full seven games.

He pitched and won the second game against the Tigers. He dropped the fourth contest. Then, he was called upon for a relief stint and got credit for the Cubs' sixth-game triumph.

Knocked Out

In a desperation move, Cub manager Charley Grimm called on Borowy to pitch the seventh game. Detroit knocked him out of the box in the first inning.

The next year he had a 12-10 record for Chicago. Then he slipped to 8-12 in 1947 and 5-10 in 1948, after which he was traded to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Borowy didn't fit in with the Whiz Kids' program and was shipped to Pittsburgh. His career appeared just about over until Detroit picked up the tab yesterday.

He still laughs about the weird deal that sent him to Chicago from the Yankees.

"I guess I'm the only ball player who ever was traded for a cocktail lounge," he declared. He referred to construction of the Stadium Club by Larry McPhail when McPhail had the Yanks.

"They used that $100,000 to build it," he joked.

Three Title Bouts Scheduled For September

New York, Aug. 4 —(AP) — Looks like a busy fall season in the boxing business with three title bouts scheduled for September.

Sandwiched between the Willie Pep-Sandy Saddler scrap Sept. 8 for the featherweight crown, and Joe Louis' Sept. 27 comeback against Ezzard Charles, we'll probably have a middleweight championship fight.

Detroit and Montreal are interested in a Jake LaMotta-Laurent Dauthuille bout for the 160 pound crown now that chances of matching LaMotta with Ray Robinson this fall are dim.

Robinson has a date Wednesday in Jersey City to risk his welter crown against Charlie Fusari. Then he has a once-postponed scrap with Jose Basora at Scranton, Pa., probably Aug. 23. That doesn't leave him much time for LaMotta.

Eddie Quinn, Montreal promoter, said last night he was ready to guarantee LaMotta $75,000 to defend his championship against Dauthuille in Montreal Sept. 11. Dauthuille holds a decision over Jake, scored before he won the title from the late Marcel Cerdan.

Nick Londes, the International Boxing Club's Detroit matchmaker, also wants the match. LaMotta is a prime favorite in Detroit. That's where he beat Cerdan. Detroit fans never have seen Jake in a bad fight.

LaMotta has an exclusive contract with the IBC for title defences. As the IBC has a branch office in Detroit, that probably is the most likely site of a Dauthuille match.

Grand-Slam Homer Wins For London

(By The Canadian Press)

Add Ab Cummins' name to those of Frank Merriwell, Horatio Alger and all the other last-minute heroes.

The London major third-baseman walloped a mighty grand-slam home run in the last of the ninth Thursday to give Majors a 5-4 victory over Waterloo Tigers in an intercounty senior game.

Cummins' dramatic poke broke up one of the most exciting ball games London fans have seen this year. It came after Tigers had apparently stowed the game away with a three-run outburst in the top of the ninth.

Those three runs looked like money in the bank to young Mike Kvasnak, who had blanked Majors on three measly hits for 8 1-3 innings. He never did get those final two outs.

Majors, with one down, cracked a single and a walk. That was all for Kvasnak. With Joe Yosurak pitching, London got another single for their first run, and a walk set the scene. On the first pitch Cummings drove one deep to the outside for an inside-the-park homer and the game.

In the only other intercounty game of the night—Galt at Kitchener was postponed—Billy Gibbs pitched Brantford Red Sox to a 5-1 win over St. Thomas Legion. Gibbs allowed only six hits and struck out eight.

He was backed by a 13-hit attack by his mates, including three-for-three performances by Juan Monje and Wick Anderson. Monje had two doubles and batted in two runs.

The Cheektowaga Alcoves of the Niagara district senior league walked to an easy victory over North Tonawanda Dodgers. Johnny Gilder's three-hitter gave Alcoves an 11-2 margin.

Peterborough Marines won their sixth straight viaduct Major League game, shading Toronto Staffords 7-6 in an extra-inning affair.

Two straight infield bobbles, following a double by Fred Lowrey, gave the Marines their winning run. Gunner Whitehill, who relieved starter Doug Plunkett in the seventh, was credited with the victory.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—One advantage a working sports writer has over the paying fan is the opportunity to learn the real "inside" on some of the weird doings in the glamorous world of athletics.

To often, of course, the reporter finds it impossible to commit his juicier findings to paper.

But, if he's lucky, he gets a break. He comes upon a tasty morsel which he can, with clear conscience, pass along to his readers. Such as when Garry Schumacher, right bower of President Horace Stoneman of New York Giants, tells him why Bobby Thomson hasn't been hitting this year.

"As you know," said Garry, confidentially, "we had counted on Bobby to be our whacker. Look where he would be if he was hitting like he did last year —right up there in the first division, easy.

"But look at him up there at the plate. He's all tightened up. Look the way the muscles stand out on his forearm and the way he's got his legs spread out. He can't get any power. The way he's standing, maybe somebody told him he looks like Joe DiMaggio.."

Big Pop Flies

The sound of bat meeting ball distracted Schumacher. He watched the ball until it clattered about among the seats in the distant upper deck in left field.

"See what I mean?" muttered Schumacher. "No real power. Just a long fly that happened to go into the stands. What else do you want to know about our Giants?"

Turncoat Lonnie

National League pitchers are engaged in considerable indignant talk about umpire Lon Warneke. They claim the old "Arkansas hummingbird" is a traitor to his class.

"You'd think that a guy who was a pitcher, himself, would give another pitcher a break," runs the popular lament. "But not that Warneke. He won't give you a called strike unless you really split that plate."

"Way I've got it figured," says an old friend of Lon, "is that, having been a pitcher himself, Lon is afraid somebody's going to accuse him of favoring the pitchers. So he's leaning over backwards not to give them a chance."

"Okay, I can understand that," conceded another member of the discussion group, "but what burns me up is when you try to talk to him about it he just gives you the old brush-off about umpires calling 'em as they see 'em. What Lon's got is that blue-serge complex."

Performance of Miss Canada IV Much Improved

Gravenhurst, Aug. 4—(CP)—Charlie Volker, chief mechanic for Harold Wilson's speedboat Miss Canada IV took his sleek charge over Muskoka Lake at about 140 miles an hour Thursday and said her performance was "much improved."

Volker, who has been having propeller trouble had said earlier that if the boat did not make a good showing Thursday the attempt to break the 160-miles-an-hour record would be called off. He said last night that owner Wilson would take the boat over the course again today and then they would decide whether the craft is fit for an official crack at the world record at Picton on Monday. The record was set a few weeks ago by Stanley Sayres of Seattle in his boat Slo-Mo-Shun.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The rule player in bridge is not as wooden as the guessers try to make him appear. Rules act only as a definite pattern of what is correct. They do not warp the practical ideas of users thereof.

Rule says the order of choice of leads follows tops, longies, shorts. A singleton lead, being a short, is third choice among the three groups from which leads are made.

The singleton lead is sometimes promoted to a favorable lead. When? If neither of the first two groups can offer a desirable lead. By the process of elimination the singleton lead then becomes best.

Even then the singleton lead becomes favorable only under one condition. The condition is that the leader also holds a stopper in the trump suit such as ace with one or more or king with two more.

In actual play, however, the order of choice of leads may be ignored to fit types of opponents. For instance, against a sound bidding pair the lead of a singleton may be a good gamble.

The logic of this needs very little airing. In a situation that seems hopeless you are ready to grasp at any straw. If an ordinary act will not help you, do something desperate.

A pair of Horse Sense players reached four spades when west held this hand:

♥Q J 10 8 6
♦K 9 6 4 3
♣9

West knows their bidding is correct and their contract reached by counting the tricks they can take. Against their accurate count, only some lucky stab stands much of a chance to defeat the bid.

So, instead of leading the correct heart queen, west led his singleton club. Declarer won. East stopped the first trump round with the spade ace and led back a club that west ruffed.

It happens that the correct lead here would not have helped the defence. But it does not mean that the singleton club lead was correct. Desperation breeds desire for longshot leads.

Movie Column

By HERBERT D. WILHOIT
(For Bob Thomas)

Hollywood, Aug. 4 (AP)—Sixteen-year-old Suzanne Tracy of Milwaukee, Wis., visiting California for the first time, sums up her impressions of Hollywood in a word—“jeepers!”

If she said it once, she said it 20 times, either in ecstacy or disappointment.

When first she saw Hollywood and Vine, that street intersection over-glamorized as the heart, soul and centre of Hollywood, she said:

“Jeepers! This looks just like downtown Milwaukee. Where are all the movie stars?”

Told that one might walk the streets for days without seeing a star, she was incredulous.

Eyes Pop

When finally she visited a studio, her blue eyes popped and she fairly shivered with excitement.

“Jeepers!” she squealed, walking toward the 20th-Century Fox commissary. “There's Richard Widmark! I know it! I recognize him!”

Widmark turned and waved to someone. As far as Suzanne was concerned, it was a wave to her, personally. She walked along.

“Oh oh! jeepers!” she shrieked. “That's Jimmy Stewart, isn't it?”

Indeed it was. She passed close enough to hear Stewart talking to friends.

“Isn't his drawl dreamy?” she cooed.

When the day was over Suzanne sighed:

“Well! I saw some movie stars all right. It was all just dreamy.

“But you know what? If I ever got into the movies I'd want to be a stand-in. Imagine, they just wait around most of the day and get paid for it—$16.50 a day. Jeepers!”

Judge Reverses Decision of Two Court Judgments

Winnipeg Aug. 4—(CP)— Mr. Justice P. J. Montague Thursday gave judgment in favor of Donald F. Tedlie in a defamation suit against the Southam Company Ltd. and Dr. Wesley McCurdy, former publisher of the Winnipeg Tribune.

Damages of $2,000 and costs were awarded Mr. Tedlie, Canadian National Railways telegraph operator at Dugald, Man., where a head-on collision between two trains took the lives of 31 persons Sept. 1, 1947.

The defamation suit arose from a Tribune headline Sept. 24, 1947, on a report of the inquiry into the wreck by the board of transport commissioners.

Mr. Justice Montague's decision reversed two previous trials in court of King's bench when judgment and costs were awarded in favor of the Southam Company.

Fifty British Boys on Visit To Dominion

Ottawa Aug. 4—(CP)— Fifty British boys who left Liverpool, Wednesday for an exchange tour in Canada will visit Quebec City, Montreal, Ottawa, Chalk River, Toronto and Niagara Falls during their three-week stay in this country.

The lads are scheduled to arrive at Quebec Aug. 7, taking a train to Montreal the following day. They visit Ottawa Aug. 10 for further sight-seeing and then go to Canada's atomic energy plant at Chalk River.

Aug. 13 the boys, chosen from youth clubs and public schools, will leave for Toronto, heading Aug. 17 for Camp Pinecrest, in the Muskoka district near Torrance, Ont., for a week at camp. They return to Toronto Aug. 24 and visit Niagara Falls the following day.

Coming with the group is Field Marshal Sir Claude Auchinleck, wartime commander-in-chief of the Middle East, president of the National Association of Boys Clubs. While the boys are in camp, Sir Claude will visit the Royal Military College at Kingston as guest of Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, commandant of the college.

The British boys sailed aboard the Empress of Scotland. A similar group of Canadians arrived in the United Kingdom in mid-July. Financial arrangements for the exchange are being handled by Garfield Weston, Canadian-born biscuit manufacturer.

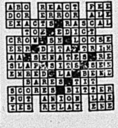
Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:



Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all nite, and after supper pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and me and Artie were talking and arguing on the living room floor, and Artie said, Hay, how about swapping me your golf ball for my little folding ruler?

Sure if you teach your ruler to bounce ferst, I said.

Meening nuthing doing, and Artie said, You better had, or I'll tell all the fellows you played with dolls when you were a big kid 4 years old. I saw your picture in the fotograph alban, holding a doll, he said.

Hay, I was not 4 years old, or any wheres neer, I said.

Which I wasn't, and Artie said, You cant prove it. I'll tell the fellows, anyways, and that's the main thing, he said, and I said, Okay, tell them, but if you do I'll tell them you had long yellow cerls and a lace coler when you were six.

That's a adrn lie, Artie said, Hay, Uncle Will, are you going to let him lie like that? he said to pop, and I said, Well jimminy roozalem, pop, all's fair in love and war.

What's love and war got to do with it? Artie said, and pop said, Well, I dont know where love comes in, Artie, but I must say the situation bares a distinct resemblants to a cold war, with imperialistic aims on your part in the form of Benny's golf ball.

You see that, you darn imperial? I said, and Artie said, Okay let's make a treety, and neither one will tell anybody anything.

And we shook hands on it to make it official, and pop gave us each money for an ice cream cone to celebrate the peace.

Wife Charged With Murder Of Husband

Little Current, Aug. 4. (CP)—William McKay, 56, was shot to death with a deer rifle Thursday in a bedroom of his tourist lodge at nearby Bass Creek.

His 51-year-old wife, Ellen, reported suffering from a nervous condition, was charged with murder.

Police allege she shot McKay as he slept at the resort he operated five miles south of this Manitoulin Island town. He died in hospital here about two hours after a bullet was fired into his head.

The shot was fired police said, shortly after Mrs. McKay went upstairs; she had been talking with the cook in the kitchen of the lodge and said she was going to get her glasses.

Carried Secret For 25 Years

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 4 (AP) — A gaunt, white-haired grandfather, sought for 25 years as a prison fugitive, surrendered Thursday at North Carolina Central prison, but left again less than three hours later with a pardon.

For 25 years, Charlie Johnson carried his secret. He settled in Essex, Ont., became a prosperous land-owner and the father of 14 children.

About a month ago, he sent word to Governor Scott he wanted to square his account. The governor turned the case over to Paroles Commissioner T. C. Johnson. The surrender, the token term and the pardon resulted.

Johnson, 59, escaped from Caledonia prison camp May 15, 1925. He was sentenced in March, 1924, in Wilkes county to five to eight years for accessory after the fact in murder.

The murder victim was Columbus Longbuttom. The defendants were Johnson's relatives — Doc Andrews, Hum Shew, Percy Johnson, Reece Johnson, Tom Johnson and Newt Nicholas.

The surviving co-defendants have signed affidavits declaring their kinsman had no part in the crime and no knowledge beforehand that it was to be committed.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

Elsa did not leave, although the talk switched to other subjects. She had made up her mind that this was the place for Dick Torres, and she was determined to stay until Natalie came out of the studio at the end of her day's work, so that she could put her proposition to the other sister squarely.

Jenny told her about the projected visit of Mrs. Owen, Faith's mother-in-law, and warned her that they were not to let the news of Faith's engagement to Max come to the older woman's ears until they were given the word. "Of course not," Elsa agreed. "I'll be as mum as a mussel."

Brent stopped work at four-thirty. He came into the living room, stretching his cramped muscles and looking pleased with himself. "Jenny's been telling me the wonderful news," Elsa said. "Congrats, big boy."

"Thanks. I got going on the next painting right away, of course. Nothing like a sale to speed the laggard brush."

"Not to mention the stumbling brain," Elsa laughed. "Many's the time I've decided that there can't be anything new in fashion, not even a new way of rearranging all the old stuff. And then I make a sale, and presto, the grey matter begins to spin in dizzy delight and comes up with something new every time! Where's Natalie?"

"Working. You'll have to drag her away for dinner tonight, Jenny. She has an idea."

"A good one?" Jenny asked eagerly. Was Nat's stale period over at last?

"Swell, the last I saw of it. She got it going over some of my Maine sketches—a very snazzy arrangement of fishnets, lobster buoys and wonderful seaweed forms. It will make one of those very fine, etched-looking prints for silk."

"Mmm, sounds good." Elsa commented, the designer in her coming to the fore. But she got to her feet. "I don't suppose there's any use my staying, then," she said. "Plead my case for me, will you, Jenny? This is really important to Pete and me."

When Elsa had gone, and Jenny was starting the pot roast, Brent came out to the kitchen. "What was Elsa talking about?" he asked.

She told him, and he whistled softly. "So Pete has a son. Boy, I think they're going to have more problems on their hands than just mere feeding and lodging him! Particularly if he's been under his mother's influence all this time, and hardly knows his dad. I gather too, that he doesn't know Elsa at all. Have they any idea how he feels about this move?"

Jenny paused, struck by this aspect of the affair. "Oh, dear," she said in distress, "it could be pretty dreadful couldn't it? I hadn't thought of that."

Brent looked at her curiously. "Would you really be willing to take him on, Jenny?" he wanted to know. "A perfectly strange kid?"

She looked down at her hands. They were small hands, but so capable looking. They could easily take on a little more work, she decided. "Yes," she answered. "I would. I think he's going to have a rough time, and if I can make the change-over any easier for him—"

Brent put his arm around her shoulders, hugged her briefly. "It's too bad," he said, looking down at her with a particularly tender smile. "Too bad there aren't more like you in this world, Jenny."

Natalie was agreeable to Elsa's offer, but when she learned that Jenny was holding the studio rent in a separate fund for her, Natalie was annoyed.

"I know I said you were to have full management of the finances," she scolded Jenny, "but I didn't mean that you should rob yourself. That studio doesn't belong to me any more than any other part of the house. If anything, I should be paying rent into the household fund because it supplies a place to work. After this, I want you to put everything —everything do you understand—into the common fund. I won't have you stewing over a lot of separate entries, and trying to figure out which was spent for what, and splitting pennies like some—some over-worked bookkeeper. This is a household, not a business!"

Jenny said, with a meek air, "Whatever you say, Nat. But I did think—"

"That's it! You're always thinking of the other fellow," her sister stormed, "and never of yourself. Hasn't it occurred to you that taking on this Dick Torres is bound to mean a lot more work for you. But I haven't heard you suggesting a raise in salary on that account."

"Oh, I don't need more money," Jenny protested. "And besides, I really want to help out the Torres. They've always been so happy together, I'd hate to see anything come up to spoil that happiness."

"You win," Natalie said with a resigned gesture. "You can have your boy, and work your fingers to the bone, but all I ask is that you keep him out of the studio."

"I will," Jenny promised.

Pete and Elsa drove to the mid-western city where Dick had spent his short life, and collected him personally in their car. The idea was that it would not only save him a trip alone on the train, but the two or three days they would take to return at a leisurely pace would give them a chance to get acquainted.

When they drove up in front of the Mayhew house late the third afternoon. Jenny was expecting them. She was struck at once by Pete's exasperated expression, Elsa's drawn air. The boy himself wore a stony, somewhat sullen look on his adolescent face.

"How nice that you're back!" Jenny cried, coming down the front walk toward them. "Did you have a good trip?"

Pete did not answer. He was busy getting Dick's bags from the trunk of the car. Elsa, her face toward Jenny, and hidden from the boy, grimaced briefly. Dick himself stared at Jenny. "Lousy," he said with succinct brevity. He got out of the car. "Is this where I'm to live?" he asked, giving the Mayhew house a glance of disparagement.

"Only until we have your room ready for you, Dick," his father answered. "But you'll be comfortable here, I konw."

Dick muttered something about a "pack of women" but went up the walk docilely enough. Ghillie sat just inside the door and barked a greeting to his old friends, the Torres'. "Hello, there, Ghillie, old boy," they both said, and stooped to pat him.

It was Jenny who saw the boy's hand go out instinctively toward the dog, saw him pull it in again and turn away with forced nonchalance. She said, "Ghillie, come and meet Dick. Give him your paw."

Ghillie knew a great many tricks. Mr. Folsom, a lady with comparatively little to occupy her in normal times, had devoted a good deal of effort to his training. He had a large vocabulary of words he understood well and could do an astonishing number of things. When he chose to. That was the rub. Sometimes, just to annoy his mistress and assert his doggy independence, he would do a trick, but not the one that was called for. So instead of obeying Jenny and shaking hands with Dick, he sat up and put his two front paws together in an attitude of prayer.

Dick's composure broke. "Aw, say," he blurted, "look at him, will you?"

"He wants to be friends," Jenny told him.

The boy stooped down, ran his fingers through Ghillie's shaggy coat. "You're pretty good, fella," he said in admiration.

That was all, but it was enough to dispel the awkwardness of the moment and Jenny blessed the old scottie in her heart. Perhaps, she thought now, the boy had never had a dog, would enjoy playing with Ghillie.

Unfortunately there had been little she could do to prepare Diane's room for a masculine visitor, especially since he was to be such a temporary occupant of it. The frilly curtains were still at the windows; the ruffled skirt of the dressing table, and the dainty glass bottles and jars all proclaimed the femininity of the owner. She had taken away the small pillows, and all extraneous bric-a-brac; had replaced the ruffled bedspread with a more utilitarian one, but it still remained a woman's room.

"I'm to sleep here?" Dick demanded indignantly, when he first saw it

"It does look awfully girlish, doesn't it?" Jenny asked with disarming frankness. "But of course it was a girl's room, so I'm afraid you'll have to put up with it Dick. Besides, you'll only be in it at night, I suppose. And if you really want to get away from the rest of us, there's always the attic."

His interest was caught at once. "Do you have an attic?" he cried. "A real one?"

"Of course. Full of old things and dust, and spiderwebs," Jenny laughed.

"Dick has lived in an apartment all his life," Pete interpolated, so that Jenny would understand the boy's pleasure.

"I'll show it to you tomorrow morning," Jenny promised. "But now I think you'll want to unpack some of your things, and wash up for supper. Can't you and Pete stay, too?" she asked Elsa. "There is penty of everything."

But Elsa shook her head. "Pete wants to check with the lumber company before they close. They were to have delivered that plywood the day we left, and we stopped at the house very briefly before we came on here. It hasn't come yet."

"Is that for Dick's room?" Jenny asked, as they went downstairs.

"Yes. Pete wants to ge started on it. I've cleaned out everything so he can work on it, and he's all set. When the carpentry work is done, Dick can choose his own color scheme."

PC's Urged to Get After Labor Vote In Elections

Gravenhurst Aug. 4 — (CP) — Agriculture Minister Kennedy Thursday urged the Ontario Young Progressive Conservative Association to get out after the labor vote.

If in some ridings the party suffers from lack of labor support, "it's your fault and my fault" he said. "We lose labor support because we have too many fools running in urban places."

The older party members should listen to the younger members, he said.

Stating "the old days of merely voting Liberal or Conservative have gone", Mr. Kennedy said people in large measure vote for individuals not parties. Young people should anticipate public sentiment, for "the time is here for young people to run for public office."

Earlier, Welfare Minister Goodfellow told the Association's summer school he is considering a reduction of the probation period in adoption cases from two years to one year.

"One year certainly should be sufficient time in which to determine if a couple is going to give the adopted child food and proper care," said Mr. Goodfellow.

He said it is "annoying" to the adopting parents to have department officials checking and making reports on them for two years.

Judge Archer Denies Motion To Picket Ship

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 4 — (AP) — Judge William J. Archer in district court Thursday denied a union motion to dismiss a temporary injunction against picketing of the Canadian freighter Howard L. Shaw.

The freighter has been made idle at a Norris Grain Company dock here since Tuesday, awaiting the loading of a cargo of corn. The vessel is owned by the Upper Lakes and St. Lawrence Transportation Company of Toronto.

Pickets were placed after the union charged the vessel carried crew members "who are communists and thus bad security risks for the United States."

Judge Archer held that his court had jurisdiction "over any and all unlawful acts which result in harm."

"At this time," said the judge, "we must conclude that the charge this ship's owners have employed communists in its crew are false, and that advertising the same as a fact (by picketing) is unlawful and can be restrained regardless of any Labor Relations Act, state or federal."

Judge Archer set a hearing for Monday on an action to make the injunction permanent.

Possibility Third Man With Car Assisted Bandits

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 4. (CP)—Police today are investigating the possibility that a third man with a car assisted the two bandits who attempted to steal $100,000 in gold from Coniaurum Mines Ltd., Wednesday.

A police authority said last night the third bandit is believed to have been waiting in a getaway car while his confederates blew a safe and removed 216 pounds of gold bars, but that he fled when he heard the explosion that cracked the safe.

The gold was later recovered in the charred automobile which the other two bandits stole from the mine watchman to make their getaway and which later caught fire and was abandoned.

Meanwhile, police revised their theory of faulty brake drum had set the stolen car ablzae. They now believe acetylene, leaking from a tank used in blowing the safe, exploded and caused the fire.

Search for the men has been widened and every available Ontario Provincial policeman is taking part. One official said he is inclined to believe it was "a local job" and that the bandits are still hiding out somewhere in Northern Ontario.

New Ontario Health Minister Plans Program to Encourage Recruits to Train as Nurses

Owen Sound Ont., Aug. 5—(CP) —Ontario's new health minister, Dr. Mackinnon Phillips of Owen Sound, says he would like to see some changes in the systems of nurses' training and of mental disease research.

The 52-year-old medical practitioner, known to hundreds of residents of Owen Sound and district as "Dr. Mac", in an interview yesterday described the problem of recruiting nursing students as "appalling."

"We must find some attractive program to bring girls aged 16 to 20 into our hospitals" he said. "If not, we will be in a sorry mess."

He favors separating the practical and the academic phases of nurses' training. A certain period could be spent on the theory of nursing, possibly at the universities, and the students then could concentrate on practical work during their stay at hospitals. This arrangement might reduce the time required now three years, for the taking of a registered nurse degree.

Dr. Phillips also suggested that higher degrees than that of Reg. N. be made available for nurses. He said degrees for post-graduate work should carry a proportionately higher salary than that now paid.

He believes health authorities in Canada should spend additional time and money on research into mental diseases. Two new hospitals for mental disease cases soon to be opened in Ontario will be filled to capacity.

Mental Cases Increase

"Today the number of cases of mental disease far exceeds those of tuberculosis and other chronic diseases", he said.

The friendly physicians who can look back on 25 years of city and rural practice said he favors continuance of Ontario's hospital-construction program. Some economies could be made, he feels, if small hospitals arranged to borrow or share expensive equipment instead of each trying to buy it for itself.

Describing his own work at the time of his appointment, the new minister said:

"I am a general practitioner, doing a bit of surgery and everything else required. And it seems to me that the day of the general practitioner is returning. There is a big place for specialists in medicine, but I think we will be making an awful mistake if we go too far with specialization."

Dr. Phillips was born on a farm in Dufferin county, 60 or 70 miles southeast of here. He attended Dundalk high school and University of Toronto and did post-graduate work at Harper Hospital in Detroit. He practised at Chatsworth before moving to Owen Sound. He and his wife, a graduate of Fort William's McKellar Hospital have a son, Jim, 20, and a daughter, Madge, 17.

UNINJURED IN FALL

Sudbury, Aug. 5 (CP) —Leo Marier, 32, a construction laborer, fell from a bridge Friday and a 200-pound tile pipe fell on top of him. In hospital, attendants said he had only a slightly-bruised shoulder.

Plane Loaded With Explosives Crashes in Fog

Oklahoma City, Aug. 5 — (AP) — A United States marine transport plane, bound for the west coast with a load of secret explosives, crashed in heavy fog here last night and virtually disintegrated after all six crew members sprinted to safety.

The plane, a twin-engine C-46, was coming in for an instrument landing when power failure killed one engine. The craft plummeted earthward and crashed on its belly in a muddy field just east of Tinker Air Force base.

The dead engine burst into flames as the crew scampered for cover. Within seconds the flames touched off an explosion that shook the countryside for miles around.

The craft was coming in for a fuel stop en route from Cherry Point, N.C., to Moffett Field, Calif.

The explosions and fire flashes attracted thousands of Oklahoma City residents from their beds to the scene before road blocks could be set up.

With explosions continuing for three hours, fire fighters did not attempt to come near. Reporters, photographers and spectators were held behind ropes. No pictures—not even by the Air Force —were allowed.

Crew members, who escaped with only a severe jolting, were not allowed to talk with reporters.

Within 30 minues after the crash about 25 explosions had shattered the crippled transport.

Police estimated upwards of 5,000 automobiles jammed the area, despite continued explosions and warnings of danger.

The night shift at the giant Tinker maintenance base was jolted from its work and plan operations halted temporarily.

MEAGRE BUYING PUTS KINK IN WHEAT PACT

Sales to Fall Far Short Of Target Set by Board

Ottawa, Aug. 5 (CP) —Meagre wheat buying by dollar-shy countries has put a kink in the workings of the multi-nation wheat pact, Canada's pet international project.

The 42-nation agreement was to have sold 525,000,000 bushels during the first year of its operations ending Aug. 1, but preliminary figures indicate total sales may fall far short of that target.

Figures released by the Bureau of Statistics covering the period up to July 14 show sales total 420,000,000 bushels—a sharp drop from what was expected. A final estimate is expected in the next few weeks. Canada expected to sell 205,000,000 bushels, actually disposed of 180,000,000 bushels.

The United States, the biggest supplier which was to have had guaranteed markets for 235,800,000 bushels, actually sold only 156,000,000.

The other main suppliers, Australia and France, fared better. Australia had quota of 80,799,000 bushels and sold 80,322,000. France was given a quota of 3,344,000 and sold 3,307,000.

Many Lacked Dollars

A big difficulty in the agreement was that sterling-area countries which agreed to take a guaranteed quantity were unable to take full delivery because of lack of dollars.

West Germany, which was to have taken delivery of 66,000,000 bushels purchased only 31,600,000 up to July 14. Italy, another sterling-area country, which was to have purchased 40,000,000 bushels, actually took only 10,600,000.

The biggest drop was shown by Brazil. It purchased only 78,000 bushels of its 13,200,000 quota.

Floor Price Drops

The pact called for a maximum price of $1.98 per bushel and a floor price of $1.65. In the new year of operations now under way, the floor is dropped to $1.54.

Although Canada sold some of her wheat the maximum $1.98 level, most of her wheat went to the United Kingdom under a special agreement whereby Canada obtained about $2.06— including freight— from the U.K. This special arrangement now is ended and the U.K. has agreed to buy wheat from Canada under the price terms prevailing under the pact.

Millions of Dollars Worth of South African Diamonds Smuggled Into US

Johannesburg — (CP) — Millions of dollars worth of South African diamonds are being smuggled into America every year.

But Dave Marais, chairman of the South African Master Diamond Cutters' Association, says overseas police now are preparing to smash the rings and round up their members.

Diamond dealers have to keep a register of all their rough diamonds and the registers had to disclose how the diamonds were disposed of.

The result was, he said, that very little smuggling was done from South Africa, but smuggling from England and the continent to America badly affected trade.

Polished or cut diamonds were exported to the continent in great quantities to genuine diamond dealers, but large parcels later found their way to the smuggling combines.

"These diamonds are then smuggled from the continent to England, or from England to the continent, before being sent to America through the hundred and one unlawful ways that have been devised by the combines "Diamonds exported to America legally have a 10 per cent import duty imposed on them. The smugglers avoid this duty and are thus able to sell at lower than the normal prices, with the result that they are undermining the industry."

"It is estimated that about 90 per cent of the diamonds exported from South Africa eventually find their way to America through legal and illegal channels. Agents of the combines are caught from time to time, but most of the diamonds are never recovered.

Diplomatic Manoeuvres

Malik Demands Withdrawal Of Foreign Troops From Korea

Lake Success, N.Y., Aug. 5 — (AP) —Russia climaxed manoeuvres designed to keep the United Nations Security Council from condemning North Korean aggression by threatening yesterday to veto any decision taken without communist China and North Korea present.

Soviet delegate Jakob A. Malik, who ended a seven-month boycott of the United Nations to take over the council presidency Aug. 1, introduced a resolution calling for a cease-fire, the withdrawal of "foreign" troops, and the presence of the two Asiatic communist states.

U.S. delegate Warren R. Austin assailed Malik's move as "irregular conduct."

Malik has fought a delaying, procedural action since he returned to the council Tuesday to prevent a debate and vote on a U.S. resolution condemning North Korean aggression and asking members to help localize the conflict.

Britain Lends Support

Austin was joined by Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb in maintaining that only the U.N.-recognized Republic of Korea (South Korea) belong to the council table.

They made it clear the Russian proposals would be rejected by a majority when the council resumes its sessions next Tuesday afternoon after a weekend recess.

The American representative told reporters after the meeting the council "has a way to put a stop to these cunning devices of obstruction—the kind of under-this-shell now, under-that-shell then, game that is being played."

He did not say what it was.

Russia's Malik has made no overt move so far, however, to set aside the council's decision of June and July calling for a cease fire, labelling communist North Korea the aggressor and setting up a U.N. fighting force, flying the international body's flag, under command of Gen. MacArthur.

Malik had said only the actions were illegal, a term he also applied to the defeats the council has given him since he was president.

He was defeated 8 to 3 his first day back when he tried to rule the Chinese Nationalists should leave the council table.

He got only four supporting votes when he tried to put the question of red China's representation on the agenda.

Yesterday Malik said any decisions on Korea must be made in the presence of all five permanent powers—including Russia and red China—and that it is a question of what the U.N. calls substance, meaning it is subject to a veto.

Calls Conflict Civil War

He also said the Korean conflict is a civil war and that both sides to the dispute—both north and south Korea—must be represented, and that foreign troops must be pulled out.

That is "beyond reason when the U.N. is trying to save itself against aggression and the force of arms," Austin said. As a peace proposal "it is a pharisaical effort in favor of communism and against freedom that only "Russia and its captive states" would really regard as a move for peace.

Foodstuffs Push Cost-of-Living Index Higher

Ottawa, Aug. 5 (CP) — The things Canadians like to eat — meat, eggs and potatoes— have sparked another climb in living costs.

June price advances for these items, coupled with higher prices for rents, coal, coke and gasoline, have added 2.1 points to the cost-of living index, bringing it from 165.4 to an all-time high of 167.5

The index is calculated on the basis that 1935-39 prices equal 100. It was 162.1 a year ago, 156.9 in 1948 and 135.9 in 1947.

The Bureau of Statistics' composite index for 30 industrial material prices rose from 165.6 for the week of June 30 to 172.5 for the week of July 28—a net gain of 6.9 points.

Price advances were common for raw rubber, raw sugar, steel sheets, lead, tin, spruce, lumber, bleached sulphite pulp and steel generally.

Sharpest increases in the general cost-of-living index during June were in foodstuffs. The food sub-index rose a record 5-3 points from 209.0 to a new high of 214.3.

Eggs advanced 10.4 cents a dozen, potatoes climbed 8.6 cents for 10 pounds and meats rose 2.9 cents a pound for beef, 1.2 cents for veal, six cents for lamb and one cent for pork.

The rents sub-index climbed 2.2 points from 132.7 to a record 134.9. The miscellaneous group went up 0.1 points from 132.4 to 132.5.

Coal and coke were higher too, in some areas, advancing the fuel and lighting group 0.6 points from 137.1 to 137.7.

The homefurnishings and services sub-index was steady at 166.9. The clothing group, which has been declining slightly during the last few months, also was unchanged at 180.7.

50 P.C. OF STUDENTS DRINK

Loma Linda, Calif., Aug. —(AP) —The United States soon will become a country of "alcoholics unanimous" if the present trend continues, says Dr. John C. Almack, professor of education at Stanford University. He told the Institute of Scientific Study of Prevention of Alcoholism yesterday that about 50 percent of high school and college students use alcohol and that it is becoming a problem among junior high school students 13 and 14 years old.

Britain Orders 3,000 Jet Planes Paper States

London, Aug. 5—(AP) —The Pro-Labor Daily Herald says today Britain has placed orders for 3,000 jet planes to reinforce its fighter command.

Contracts for the planes were said to have been sent out yesterday to the De Haviland and Gloster airplane companies. The planes are expected to cost £50,000,000 ($155,000,000).

The Herald says the jets, meteor and vampires, will be reserves for front-line fighter squadrons. The contracts were placed by the supply ministry. Existing factory facilities are expected to be adequate for filling the order.

Four types of meteors will be built the paper adds. They will be the meteor eight a standard fighter; a meteor photographic reconnaissance type; a fighter-reconnaissance type; and the new radar-equipped night fighter, which will use radar to help it seek out its targets.

Sutter started out from Cap Gris Nez, France, at 12:57 a.m. (7:57 p.m., EDT, Friday). The professional swimming instructor had expected to make the crossing in 18 hours.

Conditions for the swim were favorable with almost no wind.

DEMANDS VOICED FOR ARMING OF GERMANS, JAPS

Would be Able to Defend Selves Against Attack

Washington, Aug. 5 (AP) —Bipartisan demands were being voiced in Congress today for arming Germans and Japanese to defend themselves against possible communist attack.

Senator Warren Magnuson (Dem. Wash.) proposed voluntary enlistment of Japanese in the United States Armed forces.

Senator Richard Russel (Dem. Ga.) and Henry Cabot Lodge (Rep. Mass.) suggested, instead, that the U.S. ask the United Nations to start formation of an international police force with German and Japanese units.

Magnuson asked Gen. MacArthur by cable to say whether the proposal for voluntary enlistment of Japanese in the U.S. armed forces would be practical.

Magnuson told a reporter he thinks such a course would circumvent the provision of the Japanese constitution which bars that country from forming an army.

With the withdrawal of American occupation forces from Japan for the Korea fighting, Magnuson said steps should be taken at once to put in uniform as many Japanese as want to serve in defence of their homeland.

"We would have a pool of at least a half-million trained men to draw from," he observed.

Under the Magnuson proposal, Japanese who enlisted would be paid up to half the rate of American troops. They would not be made eligible either for American citizenship or for veterans benefits.

The Washington Senator said chairman Millard Tydings (Dem. Md.) had promised an early hearing by the Senate Armed Services Committee on the proposal.

Rebuild Armed Strength

Senator Lodge, a foreign relations committee member, told a reporter he doesn't like the idea of creating a foreign legion within the American armed forces.

"The communists would say we were hiring mercenaries to fight our battles," he said. "It would be much better if some way could be found to form an international police force into which German and Japanese units could be integrated."

Meanwhile, developments in the country's program of rebuilding its armed strength, announced Friday, included:

Another 62,000 United States army reserves will be called to active duty in September and October, the navy is adding 12 months to the enlistments of those on active duty or in its reserves and President Truman asked Congress for another $950,000,000 worth of naval planes.

The army order called for 21 months of duty.

Asking congress for an additional $950,000,000 worth of naval planes, Truman also sought $170,930,000 for army and navy public construction and $35,000,000 for the defence department's emergency fund.

Relic of Roman Times Found In Excavations of Bombed Areas

London, Aug. 5—(CP)—Excavations in an area flattened by buzz-bombs in the Second World War have exposed another buried treasure of London's unwritten history.

The archaelogical discovery has been identified as a Roman fort or citadel believed to date back to A.D. 70-80. Members of the London Roman and Medieval Excavation Council, directing the work, believe the find will be established as the city's earliest military bastion, with a history probably 1,000 years older than the famous Tower of London. If confirmed, they say, it would mean the rewriting of the story of the defences of Roman London.

Workmen, who have been probing the extensive area of devastation came across the long-buried citadel under the present site of Moorgate in the shadows of St. Paul's Cathedral.

The excavators were concentrating on tracing the course of a Roman wall and buried gravel road previously uncovered, when they suddenly came upon the fort. Covering an area of approximately 11 acres it was found to be of rectangular construction, much along the pattern of similar military stations unearthed on the continent and in western and northern Britain.

W. F. Grimes keeper of the London Museum and honorary director of the excavations, said the date of the fort could not be positixely fixed pending detailed study of other finds associated with different parts of the ancient defences. An inner wall, however, has been approximately dated by an A.D. 140 coin found embedded in its mortar.

Cross Naktong R. In New Attempt To Reach Pusan

Enemy Concentrates Forces For New Massive Strikes

Tokyo, Aug. 5 —(AP)— North Korean forces punched Saturday across the Naktong River, new United States defence "line of no retreat."

The Eighth Army said in a communique the crossing was made "east and southeast of Sangju." Sangju is near the northwest corner of the American defence box.

There was no word on the size of the force.

Associated Press correspondent Leif Erickson reported from the front that the communist crossing of the Naktong was made without opposition. He said the red troops apparently began moving across the river after enemy patrols had probed the area.

The crossings were made in the area manned by South Koreans, they had withdrawn by plan, Erickson said, to a ridge and mountain pass line.

Farther to the east, the South Koreans withdrew on orders of Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker to Odam and Simhung, about five miles south of the Naktong River.

The crossing posed a third major threat to allied defence forces. The Korean reds were reported to have three divisions massed for a strike across the Naktong near Waegwan, south of Sangju and only 15 miles from the U. S. central communications centre of Taegu.

Far to the south, the Reds were massing four crack divisions east of Chinju for the drive on Pusan, U.S. supply port only 35 miles away.

U.S. Planes Active

In the central sector American planes blasted a large enemy armored force one-half mile west of the Naktong. AP correspondent Leif Erickson said the U.S. planes knocked out four of five tanks moving northeast toward Waegwan and pounded red artillery, trucks and troops.

American artillery also hurled shells into the convoy.

The big communist offensive, likely to hit at two or more points simultaneously, appeared at hand.

A spokesman at MacArthur's headquarters said that when the reds began moving their forces in daylight on exposed roads it would signal the nearness of their offensive.

For the last few days they had concealed their movements. Now they were coming into the open.

MacArthur's headquarters reported the sinking Friday of a 10,000-ton North Korean transport at Inchon, the port of Seoul.

B-29s lashed Seoul for the second straight day, leaving the railyards flaming and shrouded in smoke, the medium bombers plastered the rail centre with 100 tons of bombs, 20 tons more than were dropped Friday.

The next big communist drive was expected in the critical southern sector east of Chinju. There the reds hurled four probing assaults Thursday and Friday but were repulsed with "heavy losses."

The reds were reported massing four crack divisions for the big push in the southern sector. They were only 35 miles from Pusan, vital U.S. supply port.

Premier Frost Confers With Prime Minister

Ottawa, Aug. 5 (CP)—Premier Frost of Ontario said Friday night that he had discussed with Prime Minister St. Laurent such things as flood control, forest conservation and national defence and other things and added "these days are too big for small bickerings."

The premier said in an interview that Ontario seeks to be "co-operative" with the federal government. These were "perhaps the most serious times in the history of the world."

Mr. Frost arrived Friday night with Robert Saunders, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission. He plans to make a quick tour of eastern Ontario beginning today.

Mr. Frost said that Ontario Hydro will build power lines in the counties of Prescott and Russell and will also service Glengarry and announced that the Ontario part of the Ottawa-to-Montreal highway to be modernized.

Raving Maniac Escapes Briefly From Ambulance

Quebec, Aug. 5 — (CP) Provincial police Friday night confirmed a report that a "raving maniac" escaped briefly from an ambulance taking him from Montreal to Quebec's St. Michel Archangel Hospital and was then recaptured.

Provincial police said they could not divulge the patient's name but an unofficial report here said that the man, about 22 and heavy set, was originally held for a crime.

Accoording to a report the mental patient entered a house occupied by the families of Antonio Legare and Claude Paquet at Ste. Foy, on the outskirts of the city, before finally being brought under control by provincial police and placed in the ambulance.

Berry Prices Move Higher, Tomatoes Lower

Raspberry growers, claiming that the end of the season is in sight for the fruit, started to boost their prices this morning on the farmers' market. While some vendors stuck to the old price of 40c per quart, a few moved their berries into the 45c class. The more expensive ones were not moving very fast, and the blue variety, which was five cents cheaper than the reds in both price ranges, moved slowly also.

Corn maintained its Thursday price of 40c per dozen ears, with a large quantity offered. Home-grown tomatoes dropped 15c to 85c per six-quart basket, and a new offering, green peppers had a price of five cents for the small ones, two large ones for 15c.

The rest of the vegetable market remained much the same, with potatoes still 75c per peck, cabbages ranging from five cents to 20c, depending on size, carrots 10c a bunch or three for a quarter, red and icicle radishes 5 cents per bunch, beets and onions 10c or three for 25c. Cucumbers were large at two for 15c., with the small ones going for a nickel.

Celery and lettuce remained steady at 10c.

Montmorency cherries, down in quanity this week, ranged from $1.30 to $1.50 per six quarts. By mid-morning, there were no black cherries showing at all. Gooseberries were still 20c per quart. A few apples were shown by the quart box, with Duchesses 10¢ yellow transparents the same, and red Astrakans and Melbas, 15c box.

Eggs had a top of 55c for A large, with medium prices corresponding. Again, no fish were offered.

Barbershop Tacticians Have Own Ideas of How to Win Korean War

Well, the Korean war has reached the barbershop, poolroom and restaurant level in Belleville. Prior to this week, there didn't seem to be much talk about the situation in the Pacific along Front Street, but now there is a noticeable trend towards solving the touble by discussing it.

The barbershop talk seems to have more development than any other phase of it. Perhaps the reason for this is that the conversation flows more freely when men are flat on their backs while the barber shaves them. It is here that recitals of what happened in the Second World War start, and it is here that tactics used in Italy, France and Belguim are being verbally applied to the Pacific area.

Equipment Discussed

Equipment comes in for a large share of the talk, with the new U.S. Army bazookas being the top topic. Methods of knocking out enemy tanks before the new bazookas were used were treated with some scorn.

Strangely enough, there appears to be little or no talk revolving around the United Nations itself, and from listening to the conversations, one might think that the whole war itself was revolving around the United States not as a member of the United Nations, but as a separate enity.

The atom bomb has fallen by the wayside with the advent of a new idea that Pusan, in the southeastern end of Korea, is going to be a Dunkerque. The verbal battles revolving around this one got hot and heavy, with the proponents of United States might, hotly protesting that there won't be any such disastrous event.

Other Ideas for Victory

In the restaurants, the war is sandwiched in between bites of pie and gulps of coffee. Arguments between courses range from the theory that the democratic forces are just waiting to get the Red soldiers in a pocket and then blast them, to the belief that the United States will fight a delaying action, for years if necessary, until communism itself collapses.

Poolroom talk is limited to grunts between shots and is hindered by game kibitzers on the sidelines.

The armchair generals and admirals are having a fine time solving the whole situations, and to those people who sneer at their efforts, they reply "somebody's gotta figure out this war."

At any rate, the Korean action has now reached the conversational level, which must mean, if experience is any teacher, that it has developed into a pretty fair war in the minds of the people of Belleville.

Bateman Motors Eke Out 7-5 Win Over Crawfords

Bateman Motors, staging a rally in the late innings, shook off a tenacious squad from Crawford Metals last evening to eke out a 7 - 5 victory in a Commercial Softball League B game at the Alemite Field. Less than a corporal's guard watched the contest, which was productive of some fairly decent ball.

The Motormen opened the scoring in the bottom of the first inning with singles by Hatfield, Bone, and Davis, and a double by John Semark accounting for three runs.

The "Scrappers" evened the count in the top of the third frame with a walk to Ketcheson, singles by Speigel, Buick, Lally and Kreh, doing the damage.

Bateman's forged ahead again in the fifth with John Semark, who walked, advancing on a passed ball, a fielder's choice, and a single by Jack Callaghan.

Crawfords came right back in the top of the sixth to knot the count with two errors and a single letting in Delaney with the run.

Doubles by Callaghan and O'Brien and an error to the pitcher with two away in the seventh accounted for two Bateman runs and the ball game. They added another in the eighth for insurance.

Hedger Goes Route

Crawfords scored their final run in the ninth with Ketcheson, who had doubled to lead off, taking third on a passed ball, and coming home on Buick's sacrifice bunt to first.

Hedger went all the way for the winners, walking two, striking out two, and being nicked for a dozen hits and five runs. Taylor started for the "Scrappers" and in seven and one third innings walked five, whiffed one, and gave up twelve hits for seven runs. Delaney threw five balls in relief over the rest of the route.

Best at the plate was Crawford shortstop Ketcheson, with three singles and a double in four trips. Lally had three for five.

Line ups:

Crawford "Scrappers": Ketcheson ss; Speigel 1b; Buick lf; Kreh c; Lally 3b, 2b; Pappas cf; Milligan rf; Taylor 3b, p; Delaney 2b, p;

Bateman Motors: Thompson cf; Hatfield ss; John Semark 3b; Bone c; Davis lf; Callaghan 1b; O'Brien rf; Wright 2b; Hedger p.

The student said he took the diploma to the store to be framed.

PANIC BUYING STARTS

Toronto, Aug. 5 — (CP) — Grocery wholesalers Friday night blamed panic buying of food items for the increase in the cost-of-living index to a record 167.5.

They said panic buying and hoarding of such items as sugar, vegetable oil and coffee was largely responsible. There was no shortage of any of these items.

The June index, 2.1 points higher than May, was announced today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. It is based on 1935 equals 100. The food sub-index increased from 209 to 214.3.

Attempt Made To Assassinate Yugoslav Official

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 5 (AP)— Five armed men attempted last night to murder a Yugoslav diplomat on the Vienna-Belgrade express, the Austrian interior ministry announced today.

The men—identified as anti-Tito refugees from Yugoslavia—broke into the compartment of Vlara Mocnik, a commercial attache of the Yugoslav foreign ministry en route from Vienna to Belgrade.

As they attacked Mocnik with knives near Werndorf in southern Austria, the Yugoslav pulled the emergency cord of the train. An Austrian customs official and two conductors forced the attackers into a compartment. They were arrested by police at the next station.

Micnik continued on to Belgrade.

Key-Ring Clue In Death of Girl

Windsor, Aug. 5. (CP)—A new clue in the 23-year-old case of Margaret Jean Smith, 16-year-old Windsor girl whose bound and weighted body was found in the Detroit river, has led police investigations to Detroit.

The clue is a key-ring bearing a Michigan licence tag, found by a diver yesterday only a few feet from where the girl's body was discovered July 12.

The diver was searching for the girl's suitcase, which she reportedly took with her when she disappeared from her home here July 6. The suitcase was not found, but police said the key-ring may provide evidence.

Detroit police are now searching for the Michigan owner of the keys. Windsor detectives believe that more than one person helped to dump the body of the girl in the river.

The girl died of a clumsily peformed illegal operation and her 18-year-old boy friend, David Carswell, has been charged with procuring the operation. He is now free on $5,000 bail.

Last week a purse belonging to the dead girl was pulled from the river near the spot her body was found. It was weighted down with a piece of cement.

Horse Killed When Struck By Motorcar

A horse which reportedly broke out of pasture Friday night about 10.30 p.m. was killed immediately when it was hit by a car driven by Arthur T. Day of Toronto. The accident happened on No. 2 Highway near Bayside, and the horse was owned by Donald Bowers of RR 2, Trenton.

Mrs. Bowers told the Ontario Intelligencer this morning that she believed the car, a new model, was moving east on the highway, and that its front was badly smashed by the collision. Mrs. Bowers said that some of the horses in the pasture had evidently broken out, and this one was hit while running down the road. It was killed on the spot.

Trenton city police and provincial police investigated.

Good Food Is Good Business

(From Monthly Letter of the Royal Bank)

Many a person in Canada is suffering ill health and poor business just because he doesn't eat the right food. He does not realize that the happy-go-lucky stone-age way of eating anything that came handy is not the thing for this age of refinement.

To get the most out of life in the way of health, success and happiness, we need to live according to certain rules. Infinite opportunity is offered us for improvement in our diet. We can improve without parading behind every Pied Piper who pipes a tune to the effect that the mere taking of his pills will turn us into new men and women.

One wise man said—and we have come upon nothing to deny it—that ninety per cent of all so-called "stomach trouble" is due not to any inherent weakness of the organ itself but to a misunderstanding between the stomach and its owner.

The purpose of this article is to investigate our food needs; to tell what authorities believe is necessary for body maintenance, growth and physical effort; and to show how the expenditure of a little thought can bring about friendly understanding between a man and his stomach, without a "veto" in a year's meals.

One principle that applies to everyone is: set your standards high, even though you can't attain them. It is worth while trying sincerely, because even a little success will mean a great deal to you in increasing your resistance to disease and enhancing your joy in living.

Hunger, Seen and Hidden

An experiment in Minnesota a few years ago, involving 32-volunteers, revealed not only the effect of semi-starvation on behavior, intelligence and personality, but the order in which symptoms developed. First was tiredness, followed by muscle soreness, irritability, apathy, sensitivity to noise, loss of ambition, loss of self-discipline, decrease in mental alertness and in the ability to concentrate, moodiness and dizziness.

That was the case of deliberate semi-starvation over a period of months. More to the point is the result of surveys made in Canada in 1939—1940, reported in an article in the Canadian Public Health Journal. Roughly speaking, only 40 percent of the people studied were adequately nourished, 40 percent were in a border-line state, and 20 percent were seriously undernourished.

Still more striking is the statement by Dr. L. B. Pett, Chief of the Nutrition Division of the Department of National Health and Welfare, to the effect that more children died in the year 1944 from nutritional deficiency diseases than from infantile paralysis. To this he added: ". . .despite the fact that our present knowledge is sufficient to avoid malnutrition."

No one would suggest that 40 percent of the people in Canada go around in a perpetual state of hunger, in the ordinary sense of the word. There is another kind of hunger, the hidden hunger that lets people pine away, go through life sluggishly, and finally die before their time, even when they are eating plenty.

Many of us drag our way through life, suffering all kinds of ailments that could be avoided by better feeding.

We feel depressed, and blame our woes on creditors, the family or the boss, when perhaps we suffer from vitamin shortage. We feel fatigued, out of sorts and listless, due perhaps to nothing but improper food. Our tables may groan with good things, and yet we may be starving ourselves through ignorance and indifference.

We must not deceive ourselves by thinking that poor diets are confined to low-income groups. It is quite possible to spend a lot of money on food, and yet not be getting the food values that lead to health.

Nutrition in Canada

Canadian diets can be improved. An effort to better them was started in 1939 by the Canadian Council on Nutrition, resulting in a guide called Canada's Food Rules. Here are the daily requirements as revised in 1950:

1. Milk—Children up to about 12 years, at least one pint; adolescents, at least 1 1-2 pints; adults at least 1-2 pint.

2. Fruit—one serving of citrus fruit or tomatoes or their juices, and one serving of other fruit.

3. Vegetables—At least one serving of potatoes, and at least two servings of other vegetables, preferably leafy, green or yellow, and frequently raw.

4. Cereals and bread—one serving of whole grain cereal and at least four slices of bread with butter or fortified margarine.

5. Meat and Fish—One serving of meat, fish, poultry or meat alternatives such as dried beans, eggs or cheese. Use liver frequently.

In addition, the rules suggest that eggs and cheese should be served at least three times a week. Vitamin D (which is obtained in cod liver oil, eggs, specially fortified foods, and concentrated in tablets) is essential for all growing persons and expectant and nursing mothers. The daily intake should add up to at least 400 International Units, equal to approximately a teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

The rules are not designed for a quick campaign, but are of a long-term program. They are not intended for spasmodic "drives" but for day-in, day-out observance, and the food should be spread over at least three meals a day.

One reason why we are not better than we are nutritionwise is that education has not yet found a way of teaching us so that the lessons "take." Unless we are rickety or too thin or too fat or too something else, we don't think the rules of eating are meant for us. We thrust aside salads, disdain fruit, refuse whole grain cereals, and don't touch milk except in our tea or coffee.

The solution in both school and public must include these: (a) making educational efforts more interesting by giving practical evidence; (b) explaining nutrition in terms of research discoveries rather than mere lists of foods that "should be eaten"; and (c) combining educational value with direct action through school lunches or supplements.

The Right Foods

Food may be divided into three main classes: body-building foods, to make good your wear-and-tear; protective foods, to ward off disease; and energy foods, to give you power and warmth.

Good nutrition involves calories (energy), protein (growth, maintenance and repair), vitamins and minerals (protection), and "balance."

It is not necessary to carry a set of scales and a measuring glass to the dining table, but only to apply common sense to a knowledge of the qualities and attributes of foodstuffs. The amounts of individual items vary from time to time in the same person, depending on many external and internal factors such as age, sex and activity. No figure in any general table should be taken as an absolute value to assess your dietary requirements. These general tables are only approximate. Their use calls for good sense and interpretation in keeping with your special environment and requirements.

Take calories for example. A published table may say that the average man needs 2,250 calories a day. But if he is sitting at home doing nothing he may need only 2,000, while if he is out chopping down trees he may need 4000. Another authority may give the amounts in calories per pound of body weight for various ages: here, again, caution is needed to interpret the figures in terms of what is being done with the body

The business executive, by the way, will be disappointed on learning how few calories are required for brain work. Dr. G. A. Dorsey says in his interesting book Why We Behave Like Human Beings: "With the brain actively at work so little extra energy is consumed that the calorimeter cannot find it." On the other hand, a jazz-band drummer uses up 7,200 calories daily. A nutritionist, commenting on this figure which was given in a British publication, remarked: "He must have drummed continuously day and night."

Cooking is Important

Besides making sure that the range of food is such as to provide the essentials of good diet, we need to watch the cooking to ensure that the goodness is kept there. A sensible word of advice was given by Joseph of the Savoy "Make the good things as plain as possible. God gave a special flavor to everything. Respect it. Do not destroy it by messing."

The extent to which good food can be converted into valueless food by unintelligent preparation is not generally appreciated. It can make the difference between health and malnutrition. Everyone knows that leafy vegetables are among the essentials of a good diet, but their goodness too often goes down the drain with the cooking water. The boiled fibrous tissue we eat has lost not only its savour but much of its essential chemical matter. Mineral salts have been boiled out. Water soluble vitamins have been lost.

An investigation made at the request of the Government of Newfoundland by nine Canadian British and United States doctors resulted in significant findings.

The first of two diet and health surveys, five years apart, revealed that the average person in Newfoundland showed no fewer than eight symptoms of deficiency diseases; malnutrition in early life resulted in three out of four dying before the age of 40; only one person in 10 reached 60; the overall death rate was 20 percent higher than in Ontario and the death rate among children was two to three times the North American average.

The investigators were puzzled at first, because the diet, while low in eggs, milk, citrus fruit and tomatoes, was good enough in fish, potatoes, cabbage, bread and cereals to justify a higher record of health.

An article in Saturday Night gives the explanation: "It was not until the investigators went into the kitchens of the islanders that they discovered that they were almost literally committing suicide by their cooking methods." Potatoes, for example, were boiled after peeling, losing 50 percent of their ascorbic acid; they were cooked in the morning and held until night, by which process they lost all their ascorbic acid. Cabbages were boiled for one to two hours, losing 90 per cent of their ascorbic acid.

The second survey showed great improvements, reported by Dr. Russell M. Wilder of the Mayo Foundation last December. The government took steps recommended by the doctors. Flour was enriched with thiamine, niacin, riboflavin, iron and calcium, and margarine was fortified with vitamin A. Canned milk was imported. Orange juice was made available to pregnant women and nursing mothers. School-children received milk and cod liver oil.

The result of these diet changes, all in forms which could not be ruined by bad cooking, was immense. The death rate fell from 12.1 to 10.5 per thousand; deaths from tuberculosis fell sharply, from 135 per 100,000 to 101; infant mortality dropped in three years from 102.3 per 1,000 to 61; and —significant this—the children who had been "like little wooden Indians" on the first visit "were now noisy rambunctious and inquisitive, as children ought to be."

It should not be thought that Newfoundland alone is suffering malnutrition due to poor cooking. Similar findings have been made by the University of Pennsylvania, which studies hundreds of upper-income Philadelphia families.

Besides good selection of basic foods and good cooking, variety is needed. Science can analyze a pork shop, and say how much of it is protein, but science cannot fathom a man's wish for a pork chop and say how much of it is true hunger, how much fancy, and how much a love of a beautiful looking meal.

The safest guide for the food provider is variety of diet and variety in cooking. Peanuts are good food, and there are 105 different ways of turning them into tasty dishes. Cheese is a concentrated form of the most important nutritive elements of milk, and in a recent book review of the New York Times there was advertised a book containing 250 unusual recipes for cheese cookery, from hors d'oeuvres to dessert.

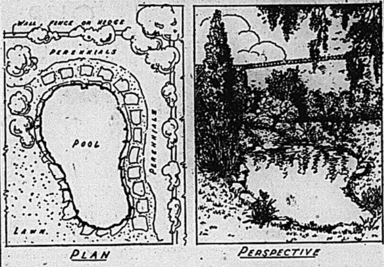
WATER CREATES MAGIC IN THE GARDEN



On a smooth, small site rocks and water should be handled gently with mild informality. The corner grade may be built up slightly to create two water levels with a small cascade between. Water supply can be handled as illustrated in this series of garden suggestions. The wall indicated might be substituted for a fence or hedge but a wall gives more privacy. It might be block painted or stuccoed with a brick coping. Such a pool gives ample scope for a naturalistic treatment and will grow in beauty year after year.

WELCOME, BOWLERS

On Monday, August 7, Civic Holiday, some 264 lawn bowlers and their ladies and friends will converge on this city. The bowlers, members of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association, will be here in quest of the handsome Corbin Gold Trophy. They will represent the cities of Toronto, Montreal, Windsor, Kingston and lesser centres in all parts of the province.

Many of them are no strangers to Belleville, others will be, but we are glad to see them. One of the nice things about being Canadians and especially Canadians residing in Belleville, is that we in this city feel equally at ease with fellow Canadians no matter what part of Canada they hail from.

Belleville has had the lawn bowlers as its guests for the past eight years. We do not regard them as strangers but as good friends who drop in for a call. We hope they'll be as glad to be here as we are glad to have them.

To those bowlers and their ladies whose visit on Monday is their first to Belleville, we say that the true evidence of the hospitality of the good people of this city lies in the return visits of your fellows many of whom are recording their eighth trip here. We truly hope you return to your homes with the same fine impressions that our old friends gained on their first visit here.

To all the visiting bowlers and their friends we say, you are truly welcome. Make yourselves at home, gentlemen. We hope you enjoy your stay.

CIVIC HOLIDAY COULD HAVE A NATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE

Next Monday Canadians will be celebrating Civic Holdiay by going to the beach to watch the pretty girls, by playing golf, by boating, by playing tennis, or by satiating themselves at whatever type of entertainment is served up to them. Almost no one will use the holiday to think about Civics; "the science of civil government," or "the principles of government in their application to society."

It was originally intended that the first Monday of August be used as a respite by urban workers from the heat and grime of summer. It was a merciful boon in the days when men worked twelve and fourteen hours a day, and a week or two-week holiday with pay was unheard-of largess. Holidays could be taken if the worker wanted to lose a week's pay while vacationing.

The title "Civic Holiday" however, is misleading. It would suggest that the day has been set aside for the general public to consider the problems of government, and it is obvious that such is not the case at present.

It is true that Civics is less appealing than sleeping in on the holiday, but that is what a "Civic Holiday" should be for — to remove all sundry distractions from the minds of Canadian citizens so that they might probe more deeply, if albeit briefly, into the workings of government from the municipal to the federal level. It should also be a time for the citizen to re-examine himself, and his duties toward his country because citizenship is not just a one way affair.

Citizenship demands that the maintenance of democratic government is the task of all citizens, and stresses that the enjoyment of the benefits of such a system is the reward for the vigilance necessary to its maintenance.

Were "Civic Holiday" observed properly and its implications fully realized there would be no elections in which the majority of the voters stayed at home. There would be a greater interest in public affairs and the management of the community's business. Those elected would know that they could act with the approval of an informed majority and not just as the representatives of a militant minority.

Civic Holiday, as one of the two all-Canadian holidays observed in this country, (the other is Dominion Day), should also serve as a stimulant to Canadians to take pride in their country as an entity in world affairs. It could be marked with civic celebrations replete with historical pageants glorifying the great Canadians who have brought this country to maturity as a unified, self-governing power.

For these reasons another "Civic Holiday" could be observed in the autumn or early winter when municipal elections are generally held. The combined stimulus of an election and a holiday designed to encourage public interest in the workings of government, would add much to our appreciation of the tasks involved in government and the mutual duties and responsibilities of our citizens and their elected representatives.

Let us retain the first Monday in August as a holiday but let us change its character to emphasize some more appropriate aspect of Canadianism. "Civic Holiday" should be truly civic. The creation of a new holiday in the fall or early winter would re-emphasize the importance of the much neglected study of civics and all that it implies.

PEAS, PODS AND ALL

Peas in the pod, fresh from the garden, pods and all, probably will grace the dinner tables of the future. This type of pea has been grown as a curiosity for several years, but it seems to be gaining gradually in popularity.

The chief difference between this pea and the ordinary varieties is simply that the pods as well as the peas are edible, much as snap beans are. The old-fashioned peas have a fibrous pod. They are useless as food, being practically indigestible. — Cornwall Standard-Freeholder.

THE MAN

When the man is needed
God provides him.
Wisdom — early seeded —
Safely guides him.
'Gainst the odds whatever
Wrong devises
One for high endeavor
Always rises.

God will have designed him
Strong, undaunted.
Destiny will find him
When he's wanted.
Courage great will core him;
Calm and steady
For the task before him
He'll be ready.

When the struggle rages,
Foes come shoreward,
One to serve the ages
Will step forward.
Never doubt or dread he
Prays unheeded.
God will have him ready
When he's needed.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BRANNIGAN'S BUMP

I was presented with a most unusual book to read on my vacation. It is called "The Bump on Brannigan's Head," and is the story of a man who was one of the most quarrelsome men in his town—always in hot water. The story is by Myles Connolly, author of a famous book called "Mr. Blue," though this is the first that I have read by this author.

Brannigan came home after too much imbibing at a local bar, and as he was about to leave his garage, after returning home, he received a bump on the head that seemed to change everything for him. It was this bump that started a new life for Brannigan. He began to love his fellowman, and this led to a whole series of happenings that aroused the whole town.

A great transformation was in the working, "unregenerate plotters" arranging things so that it looked for a time as if an earthly paradise were about to be born, but the agents of the devil put in their word, and money, and soon the transformation began to totter. It is an amusing and delightful story, well told, and with some healthy hinted human observations—food for thought, interspersed throughout the book.

There is also a newspaper angle to the story that gives tone and sparkle to it. Many readers of this book will recall certain elements that will remind them of such happenings in our everyday life. It suggests how easy it is to start a movement, through hysteria, with a hero rising to popularity overnight, only to be thrown back to his humble station after the storm is over.

For a time it was acclaimed that a miracle had taken place, but Brannigan would have none of it. It embarrassed him, but so long as good was to be accomplished he was willing to lend himself to it. It's a good yarn, however, and may lighten the day for anyone who needs a laugh to lessen the burden of bad news. It has relaxing power.

OUR TOWN

SHOWERS I'VE KNOWN

Dauphin, Manitoba — Never mind the better mouse trap, boys, if you want a real path beaten to your door build a better shower.

Now, I am a bath man myself. The shower, as I see it, is a heathen instrument at best, offering none of the contemplation and utter relaxation of the horizontal tub. But for those of us here on the bathless highways, plaintively looking for a home away from home and finding only the same old motor courts, the shower is a grim neccessity.

I have thus been in a position to study various types of shower baths and the various devilish devices affixed to same.

Indeed the traveller must give some close attention to the apparatus or risk being scalded alive.

Not all showers are necessarily dangerous. Right here in Dauphin we are using a little gem of engineering that wouldn't harm a fly.

I classify it under the Dribble, or Bloop-Bleep category. This type of shower makes a growling, sputtering noise, as if it were a terrible agony to give out a little moisture. Each precious drop falls reluctantly, one pearl at a time. Nobody ever got hurt with a shower of this type. No one ever got very clean, either.

Still, the Bloop-Bleep is a relief after the Swift Changing type shower we had in Regina. This is the kind of shower that can't make up its mind. Both hands must be kept firmly at all times on the controls or the spray will suddenly switch from lukewarm to live steam. This can be aggravating or even fatal.

A word of warning on this type: The handle marked "Cold" may be the one which controls the hot water or at least it's in the second shower from the end at a certain Calgary auto court.

Some Perils

I have heard it suggested that one reason for the frightful condition of auto camp showers may be due to the fact that the proprietors of these establishments are anxious to discourage bathers. One of the gentry went as far as to confide that he reckons a 10-cent loss on each and every shower.

This could easily explain some of the fiendish and subtle discouragements offered to the soiled wayfarer. In the first place, he frequently finds the shower to be located in a middlewing oblong cabinet with the chill dampness of an underground cave or grotto. To disrobe invites an immediate case of double pneumonia.

If the bather persists in going through with this mad project he must first accustom his bare feet to a concrete floor the temperature of an ice floe. He will note, too, the single hook for his clothes cleverly placed just within the orbit of the spray.

Now comes the agonizing period devoted to the hopeless task of getting the right blend of hot and cold.

The controls, of course, are so situated that some parts of the body are exposed to the first blast of very cold or very hot (it is always one or the other.) This becomes particularly irksome if the shower happens to be the rare "needle-spray" type in which real needles are used.

The adjustments having been made, the bather then makes the discovery that there is no tray for his bar of soap.

I have yet to find a way to beat this. A bar of soap will simply not stay put under the arm or held between the knees. It will slip out and fall to the floor and nine times out of ten the floor will be a sort of lattice-work arrangement of boards through which the soap will find its way.

Thus the shower is able to get its victim down on his knees, hands beyond reach of the taps, and in a perfect position for a quick change of temperature.

Mob Scene

The position of the nozzle, itself, indicates some considerable thought and these generally come in two general types.

One type, constructed for either children or midgets, throws a spray which strikes you just below the chest so that the user must do his washing in a half crouch. The other cascades down the side of the wall forcing the user to press himself against the barricade. One must sacrifice all dignity in the auto camp shower.

Probably the most frightening example of all was a little number I got wedged into in Medicine Hat. I was congratulating myself on having found, at last, the perfect shower. Fine steady flow of water. Temperature just right.

Then I realized that the water was beginning to creep up above my ankles and that the drain—if, indeed, there was one — was plugged. Death by drowning in a shower loomed suddenly as a distinct possibility.

Another peculiar thing about showers (particularly one booth operations) is that everybody seems to want to use them at the same time.

I have lain in wait, peering furtively through the trailer's curtain with my eye on the shower room door until there is no sign of life within a hundred miles, then scurried across the camp ground only to find myself seventh man in a queue.

Oh, well, let them lead the way. They'll take all the hot water, but at least I'll know the place is free of booby traps.

Planting of Shelter Belts on Prairies Has Flourished in Recent Years

Written for The Canadian Press
By PERCY GHENT

Visitors from Eastern Canada who travel the western plains for the first time often are surprised that the "treeless prairie" is not nearly as bare of trees as they expected to find.

Tree planting for shelter belts around prairie homes and gardens has developed amazingly in recent years, and almost everywhere there are long stretches of native aspens and other trees to break the monotony of the prairie landscape.

While there is an almost Siberian severity in winter cold on the prairies, research and experiment shows that an opulence of beauty will adorn the land in years to come. It should not be forgotten that little more than half a century has elapsed since settlement on prairie lands really got under way on an ambitious scale.

What has been accomplished in the way of forestry and agricultural research at such stations as Indian Head, Saskatchewan, is a matter for pride and gratitude.

Even for roses the prospect is promising. Some years ago at Indian Head a stray seedling rose was discovered. It is now known as the Ross Rambler. When discovered it was climbing high among the pines at the forestry station, and from it researchers are working to produce a climbing rose that will thrive in extremely low temperatures.

Many lilacs have been found hardy enough for prairie growth, and a surprising number of useful and ornamental plants introduced by settlers from their native lands have flourished. These, together with abundant prairie wild flowers, western birds and other wildlife, make Canada's plains a fascinating realm for research and exploration for gardeners and naturalists alike.

Amphibious Plants

There are amphibious plants as well as animals. They thrive half in and half out of the water. Those plants of the waterside with dainty white flowers with the golden centres that insects love — the broad-leaved arrowheads — are amphibious. Lower leaves of the arrowhead are long, green ribbons moving gracefully in flowing water.

When ponds and streams dry up in summer heat, as they so often do, those ribbon-like leaves and the plant itself become high and dry. But after the rains bring nourishment, the plant revives in its new setting, and broad, arrow-shaped leaves appear and grow to generous size.

Bordering many Canadian lakes and sluggish streams are the long stalks and deep blue flowers of the pickerel weed. It is a "wading" plant and both flowers and glossy leaves are attractive. Pickerel weed was so tagged because pickerel deposit their eggs among its leaves. So do many other finny species.

Water-lilies that adorn a thousand lake margins in every lakeland of Canada, are the loveliest of all summer wild flowers. There is no more striking scene in nature, perhaps, than a lily-adorned lake with a moose nuzzling at their roots, and, for background, some lofty, snow-covered mountain of the rockies.

SIXTH SENSE

Paris (CP)—An Indian magician, P. C. Sorcar, created a sensation recently when he bicycled blindfolded through the heavy traffic on the Loulevard Des Capucines. Sorcar later said he did it with his "X-ray eyes, proving the translucency of sight through a highly-developed sixth sense."

BUILDING COSTS UP

Ottawa, Aug. 4—(CP)—Building costs continued to increase in June the Bureau of Statistics reported Thursday. The wholesale price index for general building materials rose 8.8 points from May to June, advancing from 209.6 to 218.4. Since September, 1949, when it stood at 197.6, this index has shown an uninterrupted monthly increase.

A DENTIST SOUNDS OFF — AWAY OFF

A dentist who signs his name "Dr.———" breaks into print to tell the world:

I hope Dr. Brady had a facetious glint behind his dusty bifocals as he quilled his classic of inaccuracies "people who never brush their teeth have the best teeth in the world."

That's what I said, or words to that effect. And I referred to the people of Tristan da Cunha. Don't take my word for it. I'll refer any dentist or other interested reader who provides stamped self-addressed envelope to a dentist who examined the teeth of a considerable number of men, women and children on the island and found nary a cavity. I'd name the dentist here but I don't want to embarrass him.

The dentist who signs his name "Dr———" asserts that—

> The dental care available to the people in the United States is the most efficient in the world. When it is supplemented by good home care—including "brushing of the teeth immediately after each meal"—the writer will guarantee even to unbeliever Brady, that the amount of dental decay will be reduced.

Come, come, now, let us leave the suspended comparative to vendors of automobiles, antiseptic toothpastes, gargles and television sets. What amount of dental decay will be reduced? The dentist's brave words do not mean anything.

Some of these old timers in the dental profession lightly dismiss the extraordinarily fine teeth of the people of Tristan da Cunha by suggesting that of course uncivilized people can stand unrefined foods that we civilized people just can't tolerate, or something as asinine. The trouble with that schoolboy argument is that the Tristan people are as civilized as you and I. I have been there. I know what I'm talking about.

The dentist echoes what I have been telling people in this column for many years when he says the dental care available to Americans is the best in the world. I go further than that and tell you that two things are essential for the preservation of the teeth, namely, good nutrition in infancy, childhood, youth and adulthood, and regular examination of your teeth by your dentist and of course immediate treatment of any deficiency his examination reveals. Whether you brush your teeth or not is a question of your personal fancy—it has nothing to do with the preservation of the teeth.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Frenzied Specialism

Hard time finding a doctor who would deliver me at home. Out of no less than 2 I asked—after all, this is a free country—I finally found one who does so. Husband was in Japan when my first baby was born (in Paris). We were in America when our second came, and they would not permit him to be with me. This time we are determined...we'll be grateful for any information. (Mrs. C. LaH.)

Answer — What the country needs is more citizens with such determination as yours. They might persuade the doctors to get back to sanity. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope for booklet Preparing for Maternity.

Salts

Is Epsom salts beneficial for one who has Bright's disease? (Mrs. K. G.)

Answer—On the contrary, one with Bright's disease should never use any kind of salts except under his physician's observation

A Fishwife in Every Neighborhood

At 42 I feel fine, look fine, believe that thanks to your iodin ration and vitamin-mineral supplement I'm a good ten years younger than my age. But I'm plagued by a neighbor who insists on dinning in my ears that all the woes and evils in the catalogue await me when the change comes. (R. C. S.)

Answer—There's at least one in every neighborhood. Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet The Menopause. I'd treasure a wire or tape recording of your neighbor's yakety-yak.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The moon has been heavily overplayed by the poets and song writers. If you take a good straight look at it, you will see it is a pretty stupid big vacant thing.

In fact, the longer you look at it, the more tired you get of it. Except for growing a little red in the face from the effort of rising, it never changes its expression from one end of the year to the other. The new moon—as they call it—steals into view in the western evening sky and gives you a sudden thrill of expectancy. This time, this time!—it will be different.

Night by night, it reveals a little more of itself, with all the air of great surprise in store. But what is it, when you get it whole? Just the same old vapid, dopey dime of a moon, riding in exactly the same place as ever, never changing its pace, moving at the same gait as it did in the time of Moses and Pharaoh. If there was anything to be said about the moon, it should properly have been said then, and let it go at that.

But generation after generation, the poets and exclaimers and lovers have been calling attention to the moon, as if everybody could not see it for themselves, and for what it is worth. Now, you take the earth: it is a different proposition entirely. It is always changing, always fresh, always surprising. It never stays still for an instant. You can look at the earth forever, and never be sated.

An elderly astronomer friend of mine says he is sorry to have to go just about the time it looks probable that science will devise rockets to the moon. He is dying to know what the other face of the moon looks like.

As for me, I am not interested. It will probably look like just what you would expect: yesterday's leftover pancake.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

RUNNING OUT FAST

Cecil Rhodes, the man who created an empire in South Africa, died before he was fifty years of age, powerful and wealthy but sadly murmuring the words, "So much to do, and so little time in which to do it."

There is much being written and spoken today about the necessity of our being calm, taking things easy, and so avoiding high blood pressure and nervous breakdowns. This is much needed advice. But this is a way also in which we need to be reminded that for everyone of us time is running out fast. Even if we do live a decade or a generation or two generations or even fourscore years, there will scarcely be time enough to do what needs to be done, if we would fulfill God's design for our lives.

Read the twentieth chapter of the Gospel of John which tells of the resurrection of Jesus, and you will be struck by the atmosphere of haste which pervades the whole of this narrative. Jesus had risen from the dead and everybody started on the run to tell the good news to others.

There is a way of making haste frantically, and this leads to illness and wretchedness of mind and body. But there is another way of making haste—with purpose, with joy, in full control of our powers. In this way we are all to make haste, for time is running out fast even for those who have years of health and usefulness ahead of them.

Monday night, Joe McCauley's Centre Island Softball squad will meet Trenton Chevrolets under the floodlights at Bayshore Park in an exhibition contest. In previous exhibition games this season, the Chevies have turned in some of their finest performances. The two recent games with RCAF Technical Wing were a better brand of ball than many of the Trent Valley League games.

The game between Trenton and Campbellford which was scheduled for Monday night was rained out so there were no Trent Valley games at Bayshore Park this week. Last night, the Chevrolets played Campbellford in Campbellford, and tonight, Point Anne will be in town for an exhibition game with the Weesemen.

The Trent Valley League schedule has been extended until the end of August and Trenton Chevrolets are two games in front at present.

Thursday night, relief pitcher Chouinard lost his own ball game as he bobbled a bunt allowing the winning run to score as Hinde and Dauch defeated the Juniors 6 to 5.

Keegan went five innings on the Junior's mound and held the papermen to three hits. The Juniors were leading 5 to 1 in the sixth inning after Ken Beale hit a two run homer in the second. Keegan started off the sixth by walking the first batter, the two successive errors loaded the bases and Mountney hit a double. Chouinard took over but before he could put out the fire, Hinde and Dauch had chalked up four runs to tie the score.

Although Chouinard held the papermen hitless in the seventh, Junior errors paved the way for the winning run. Baker was safe at first on an error. Chouinard walked the next hitter. The next batter struck out, then the runners advanced on a ground out to first. The winning run crossed the plate when Chouinard failed to field a short bunt to the mound.

Byce went the distance for Hinde and Dauch, giving up six hits, fanning 12 and walking 3.

A nine-run scoring splurge in the bottom of the sixth swamped Trenton Midgets one run lead and Dick Bridgeman's boys wound up on the short end of a 15 to 9 tally when they played Campbellford Juveniles in Campbellford Wednesday night.

A week ago, the Recreation Commission had decided to close one of their two supervised playgrounds due to poor attendance. Instead the location was switched from Dufferin Street School to Hanna Park and Recreation Director Jack Dean reports that "we are now getting a good crowd."

Good Food Is Good Business

Young people up to twenty years need the right kind of food to live, to grow to maturity, and to acquire education. The combined effect of strenuous athletics, school and home study, the tension of examinations, and the general upset feeling of adolescence, all combine to put stress upon the body machinery. Lunch is important, and very often an after-school snack (such as a peanut butter sandwich, and a glass of milk) would be a lifesaver.

As the years pass, and we slow down to a decorous pace, the energy of youth is not needed, and we don't exert the muscular strength of middle life. We do need reasonable amounts of protein, and we should be satisfied with foods that our experience has taught us are easily digested. Milk, fruits and vegetables in full amounts continue to be important.

Women may lay down the nutritional law in their homes, but they are often guilty of breaking their own rules.

Men emerge from some surveys with a better record than women, except that they are deficient in vitamin C because they brush aside "rabbit foods" like salads and raw vegetables. On the whole, men eat a good lunch while women just nibble at something. Men make up in sheer volume of food for their carelessness in selection. A survey in Philadelphia among families in the $2,500 and more income range found that four out of five married women were undernourished.

About Eating Too Much

"More" is not necessarily "better" in nutrtiion. A Chinese poet remarked. "A well-filled stomach is indeed a great thing: all else is luxury." It may be also a pain.

An occasional feast matters little; it is the continual daily overloading ourselves with food that is so injurious and depressing. If you want to eat like a ditch-digger you must exercise like a ditch digger.

Overweight is a problem of great importance. It shortens life, decreases efficiency and increases liability to many diseases. A survey in Canada, reported by Dr. Pett in 1948, revealed that "rarely have we encountered 'overweight' in less than ten per cent of the adults in a given area.

There's no use in asking a doctor "is lobster Newburg fattening?" Such a question leaves out the important factors. It does not tell the doctor how much lobster Newburg there is, how often it is eaten, the amount of exercise, or the caloric requirements of the consumer. Every food that has any food value at all is fattening if taken in large enough quantities.

Medical men are opposed to all violent attempts at weight reduction. Such methods as amount to starvation for all practical purposes often do permanent damage to the liver or heart. The use of drugs is unwise, except under the care of a physician.

The simplest way to reduce is to cut down the amount of fattening food eaten at each meal, and this may be done under competent advice, without hardship. Don't try to get rid in three weeks of the excess poundage you spent ten years accumulating.

Protective Foods

The average diet of all classes in western countries has tended in recent years to include larger amounts of the protective foods. Cereals and other energy-bearing foods retain the important place they have always had, but modern science attaches special importance to the need for sup- rich in vitamins and mineral plementing these diets with foods salts.

Vitamins didn't trouble anyone up until 1906, because they had not been discovered. Then the great English physiologist, Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins, of Cambridge, turned the attention of the world to the subject of diet deficiencies. He found that the most carefully balanced diet of carboyhydrates, fats and proteins is insuffient for health if it lacks the tiny traces of those complex chemical substances that we call vitamins.

Adequate amounts of vitamins can be obtained, for most people so far as present knowledge goes by eating a variety of the common foods. Persons vary in the amounts of vitamins needed, and in some cases the use of concentrates and synthetic vitamins at the hands of a physician offers advantages. For example the acute symptoms of pellagra can often be cured in 48 hours by large doses of niacin supplemented by yeast, while it might take as long as 48 days to effect a cure with an ordinary diet. It is wise to obtain the advice of your physician to make sure you get the vitamins you need.

Cost of Good Diet

We must emphasize the possibility of obtaining a good diet for little expenditure. There are many pamphlets issued by departments of health to show how this is done.

Commodities should be judged by their intrinsic soundness and food value rather than by glamorous packaging. Ineficient and impulsive buying may prevent your family from obtaining proper food value for the money expended. Lack of interest, lack of knowledge of elementary facts about the nutrient values of individual foods and lack of skill in cooking: all these may contribute to malnutrition.

If the household income is above the poverty level, it is possible for the housewife to lay out her food budget in a variety of ways, and by careful buying to obtain a satisfactory diet at moderate cost. Those who have gardens can plan their production with definite nutritional improvements in mind. If it comes to a choice between food and some other commodity of household use, it is ridiculous even to consider reducing the diet by skimping or cutting it.

The Montreal Diet Dispensary, under direction of Miss Nan Garvock, issues a Minimum Adequate Weekly Food List which gives complete food requirements for a family made up of two adults, two boys 6 and 12, and a girl 10. Since Montreal has the highest cost of living index of all Canadian cities, the cost will be no higher elsewhere. The copy we have before us, dated May, gives the total cost for a week, $18.41, and the cost per person per day, 53 cents. Here is a skelton of the plan: a detailed sheet will be sent by Miss Garvock on request, together with a sample family menu pattern.

Milk, 21 quarts; 1 pound cheese 1 1-2 dozen eggs; 3 dozen oranges; 1 tin (28 ounces) tomatoes; 2 pounds dried fruit; 5 pounds other fruit (apples, bananas, plus, pears); 20 pounds potatoes; 4 1-2 pounds green vegetables; 13 1-2 pounds root vegetables; 4 pounds whole grain cereals; 11 (24 ounce) loaves of bread (whole wheat or Canada approved); 2 1-2 pounds refined cereals (flour, macaroni, rice, cornmeal); 6 pounds of meat; 1 pound of fish; 1 pound liver, kidney or heart; 1 pound vegetables (green peas, navy beans); 2 pounds butter; 1 1-2 pounds other fats (lard peanut butter) 2 1-2 pounds sugar; 1 3-4 pounds other sweets (molasses, dark honey, jam); and cod liver oil (for children.)

A Personal Inventory

It is time to check up. Are you well nourished, or do you need to eat better?

There are two easy ways to find out. Ask your family doctor, who knows your health history and environment. Or write to your provincial health department for what is called a Score Sheet for Each Day's Meals. When you have marked this for two or three weeks you will have a good idea as to whether you are starving yourself of some needed food—and this may go far toward explaining your fatigue and other symptoms of less-than-the-best-possible health.

Eating a special diet and cultivating a relaxed attitude will no more remove troublesome gallstones than they will put back in place a dislocated joint, but they can perform helpful wonders when intelligently applied. Moderation, thoughtfulness, variety and regularity are the key notes in diet, and if they are not observed—if you eat hugely of the wrong things, or neglect to think of the necessary things, or alternate starvation (like skipping breakfast) with surfeit — then you must expect your digestive system to act up, and you may be surprised by the variety of disturbances it can cause.

Digestion, even of the best food is interfered with by emotional stress. One should be in the best possible humor when eating. When one is angry, the stomach stops its activity. When one is afraid, the digestive functions are paralysed.

Is This Your Picture

You got up this morning, wolfed your tiny breakfast, raced for a train or street car, scanned the alarming newspaper headlines, and arrived at your office frustrated by world events and tense with worry over your own problems. New troubles came in your morning mail and by telephone. Other people—your customers and your associates—were worried, and you had to pour enthusiasm and hope into them. By 11 o'clock you had used up a day's reserve of energy. You went to lunch. You ate too fast and too much, and never for one minute stopped thinking and talking business or worrisome politics or alarming world situations. By three o'clock you were loggy from over-eating in digestion-inhibiting circumstances. By four o'clock you were punch drunk. You staggered home, wondering whether the effort was worthwhile, and sat down to another hearty meal. Even if you loaf around all evening and go to bed early, tomorrow will be just another such day. That is, unless in reading pieces like this you decide such a life isn't worth living and that you will do something about it.

The "something" that needs doing is easy once you get started. Check your diet, get some fresh air regularly, take some exercise and learn to relax. These are the four legs on which good health and energy rest.

MARMORA

South African Thinks Canada Great Country

Marmora— Enjoying his first experiences of Canada and fulfilling a desire of many years' standing is Herbert Thomas of the Boksburg Foundry about twenty miles east of Johannesburg, South Africa. Accompanying him are his wife and daughter Joyce.

Enhancing his pleasure is his reunion after 45 years with his sister Mrs. William Fox, of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Fox are on their annual vacation at their summer residence at Crowe Lake, and so their guests are having an acquaintance with rural life as well as the city life of Ontario.

Nine months ago Mrs. Fox enjoyed a clear telephone talk with her brother despite the great distance dividing them. Today, they are happy in their reunion.

They were born in the county of Cornwall England, but their parents moved to South Africa when their children were quite young. Eventually Mrs. Fox came to Canada. With his brother James, Herbert Thomas became an industrialist, opening first the Vulcan Iron Works at Venoni and 28 years ago the Boksburg Foundry.

The Thomas family embarked at Capetown this spring on the Norwegian freighter, "Thorsall". There was no landing until three weeks later when the vessel docked in Montreal. The return voyage will be made on the same ship, leaving September 1st.

Great Country

Mr. Thomas thinks Canada is a great country. Speaking on the subject of highways, he felt that more money was being expended on them in this continent than in the country of his adoption. He remarked that there was a fine stretch of macadamized highway between Johannesburg and Capetown, a distance of approximately 1000 miles.

Recently he was interested in a visit to the plant of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, Limited, which for a period received shipments of cobalt bearing copper ore residue from Rhodesia, South Africa.

Guernsey Twilight Meeting Held

The newly-formed Quinte District Guernsey Cattle Breeders' Club held its first twilight meeting on Aug. 2nd, with over one hundred in attendance. The meeting was held on the farm of Mr. Ralph Sills, Halloway, where the visitors were able to see many of the fine Guernsey cattle of Mr. Sills' herd.

Mr. Bruce Hodgins of Guelph, field secretary of the Ontario Guernsey Cattle Breeders' Club, was the guest speaker. He conducted a judging competition and showed a film on "Type Classification of Guernseys". Mr. Elmer Huggins of Roslin is president of the Quinte District Club and conducted the meeting. Mr. D. A. Taylor agricultural representative, Prince Edward County, and secretary of the local club, was present and helped with the meeting.

The Calf Club members of the county were invited and many of them attended.

WEDDINGS

FISHER—RYAN

At ten o'clock Tuesday morning, August 1, at St. James' rectory, Stirling, the Rev. Father O'Hearn officiated for the wedding ceremony of Barbara Joan Ryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan, of Rawdon Township, and Allan Carleton Fisher, son of Mrs. William Fisher, of Tweed, and the late Mr. Fisher.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a bridal gown of white imported French Chantilly lace over white nylon taffeta with full gathered skirt, gracefully draped bodice, sweetheart neckline, and puffed sleeves, an elbow-length lace-edged nylon tulle veil fell gracefully over her shoulder and was attached to a pretty headdress of net in cap effect with a white floral drape at the back. She wore long white nylon mitts and carried a crescent shaped bouquet of red roses with satin streamers.

Miss Bernice Ryan, sister of the bride, was maid of honor gowned in mauve English imported lace over mauve nylon taffeta with flared skirt and molded bodice. She wore a sailor hat with allover lace trim, long mauve nylon mitts and carried a shower bouquet of yellow roses tied with matching ribbon.

Mr. John Fobert, of Tweed, was groomsman.

The newlyweds left immediately to have photographs taken in Belleville.

At one o'clock, a reception for 40 guests was held at the bride's home which was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers, bells and a profusion of summer flowers.

The bride's mother received her guests in a light blue crepe suit with matching accessories and a corsage of carnations. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother wearing navy blue crepe with matching ceremonies and a corsage of pink roses.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and the other guests were seated at small decorated tables for the wedding luncheon which was served by three friends of the bride, Miss Vera O'Neil, Belleville, Miss Patricia Clairmont, Marmora, and Miss Margaret Stebbings, of Belleville.

Mrs. Fisher chose for travelling to Detroit and Georgian Bay, a rose crepe dress with white accessories. On their return they will reside at Oshawa, where the bridegroom has a lucrative position.

Guests were in attendance from Sudbury, Brockville, Marmora, Belleville, and Tweed.

Previous to the wedding the bride was tendered a graniteware shower sponsored by Miss Colleen Colden.

HUSBAND'S NAME ON CASUALTY LIST

In Fort Erie, Ont., Mrs. Joseph Kenney reads the name of her husband on the casualty lists in Korea. Corporal Kenney left his St. Catharines, Ont., home on New Year's Day to re-enlist in the U.S. army. He is believed to be the first Ontario man injured in Korea.—Central Press Canadian.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

This hostess shows taste, wisdom

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other day a classmate of mine in boarding-school invited me to come to visit her and her family (they live in a town not too distant) over the Labor Day weekend. I accepted her invitation. That evening her mother telephoned me saying how glad she was that I could come, telling me about a party they are giving on Saturday evening (dinner at their house, then to the Country Club to the dance), a buffet luncheon to be given on Labor Day by friends of theirs who are inviting me also, and several other events. She told me about a train they would meet on Friday afternoon, and then told me about a "very good train" I could take back on Tuesday. early-afternoon. After we had finished talking. she asked to speak to mother, and repeated all these plans to her. I thought it was strange that she told us about so many plans . . it sounded sort of boasting to me . . . and that she informed me when to leave. But Mother says this is the proper thing to do. Do you agree with Mother or with me, Mrs. Beeckman?

Betty

Your mother is right about this, completely right. And your classmate's mother, your hostess, shows that she "knows her way around", that she is an accustomed hostess, a woman of taste. First she had the sure courtesy to "second" her daughter's invitation, and then she had the sure courtesy to assure your mother of her welcome to you, and of her plans. Then she wisely told the definite time you are expected to arrive, the definite time you are expected to depart, and the plans of entertainment so that you will have definite tips about the appropriate clothes to bring. Very polite, very practical. . .for all concerned, and especially important in your case, since (I judge) it will be your first visit to their home, and since, for school girls "the mothers" should agree about your arrival-home plans.

A new procession-procedure—but seldom used

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Two or three weeks ago I went to a very fashionable wedding in a large Episcopal church in New York. I was very much surprised to see a procedure of the processional that I had never seen before, never heard of before: the bridesmaids (there were eight bridesmaids and eight ushers) waited at the back of the church and did not start up the aisle until all the ushers had taken their places at the front of the church. Is this a new idea?

F. L. M.

Yes, this is a fairly new way of planning the procession, but it is very seldom used. However, it does, I have noticed, give a dramatic accent to the group of bridesmaids, because there are more minutes for the guests to concentrate on the group of "lovelies" and their festive costumes. Better than having such a long wait in the procession, is, I think, to have a wait of double-length between the group of ushers and the group of bridesmaids, then between the group of bridesmaids and the maid of honor, and then an extra-length of time before the bride and her father walk up the aisle.

Wedding invitations to married co-workers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I work in an office where there are quite a number of men and women who are married, and I am not acquainted with their spouses. Is it necessary for me to invite their respective spouses to my wedding and reception?

R. G.

The correct form is for you to send the invitations to "Mr. and Mrs.", whether or not you know both husband and wife. If you are planning a small wedding reception, you might invite these husbands and wives to the ceremony only, not to the reception.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

His wife went home to mother

When a bride of a few weeks, or even months, has a spat with her bridegroom and goes home to mother, nobody is surprised. That's apt to be routine stuff in the early days of marriage, before a young wife adjusts to the fact that what she has married is a mere man and not a paragon of all the virtues.

But when a woman with twenty-five years of married life behind her does approximately the same thing, it is not so simple as that.

A husband who is struggling to solve just this problem writes me that, "For the past year, my wife has seemed to want to spend all her time with her mother, who has two other daughters living with her and doesn't need my wife's help. Neither pleading nor begging can get my wife to stay at home more than a week at a time.

"I love my wife, and greatly miss her," he goes on to say. She tells me she loves me, but this can't go on. I make good money and have always given her everything she wanted, and I've always tried to make her happy in every way. So I can't understand it at all.

"What's the answer? To quit and get a divorce?

"I'm 47, my wife is 48, and we have three daughters, one married, two single and working."

Before deciding that a divorce is the only answer here, I think this distracted husband might try out a few other ideas first. With a little different approach than that of pleading and begging, he may be able to help her to a new point of view that will make her see the situation a little differently herself.

No doubt, with one of her daughters married, and the other two working, this woman misses the companionship of other women relatives. It is always lonely for a mother when her daughters grow up and are out of the home. That may account for this wife wanting to spend so much time with her mother and sisters.

A great many women, when the middle years come, find themselves facing this same problem of filling a life that has suddenly become rather empty, with no children who need their attention any more. If they are wise, and clearsighted, they come to understand what's wrong and start developing new interests. That, no doubt, is what this wife need to do.

Since this husband says he makes good money, and since both wife and husband still have many useful years ahead of them, why should they not adopt a child who needs a home? Or take in for a few years one of those sad little waifs temporarily in need of foster homes,—an arrangement, incidentally, much easier to make than finding a child for adoption. With a child in her home again, the wife in question would have good reason and incentive for staying in her own home.

Then, too, this husband might see if some of his wife's friends couldn't help get her interested in some of the community activities to be found in every town. Whatever her tastes may be, there is undoubtedly some group in the vicinity whose program would appeal to her, and among whose members she could find new friends.

Of course the husband should remember, too, that at 48 a woman may be going through a difficult phase and feel restless and unsettled anyhow. Since this condition is almost always temporary, it may be that in time the whole thing will straighten itself out and their home life will resume its equilibrium. In the meantime, patience and understanding on his part will help speed that happy day.

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

A true story being circulated pokes fun at the new school of thought which maintains children should be directed — not disciplined. It seems this youngster refused to eat his porridge. His father, a prominent psychologist and promoter of the new education, removed the plate of porridge, substituting shredded wheat . . . "Naw, I don't want that either — I want to eat a worm."

The father hurried to the garden, brought in an earthworm, fried it and placed it before his young son. The boy looked at the worm saying, "I'll eat half of it if you'll eat the other half." The father hesitated a moment, then cut the worm in two and ate one half. . . Passing the dish over to the boy to finish the meal, the youngster grumbled, "But dad, you ate the half I wanted!"

We found the following information scribbled in pencil in the front of an old, old Bible. The Bible contains 3,566,480 letters, 773,706 words, 31,173 verses, 1,139 chapters and 66 books. Shortest verse in the Bible is John 11:30. The 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the alphabet but J, F and M. The longest verse is Esther 8:9. There are no words or names of more than six syllables. The word "reverend" occurs only once in the Bible.

Leafing through an old newspaper, this quotation from George MacDonald appears: "To have what we want, is riches; but to be able to do without is power."

And did you know that the word 'news' really originated from the abbreviations on the globe—North, East, West, South?

Uncle Frontenac says even refrigerators have vacations now. The latest models have regulated speeds, one of which is lettered Vacation.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

New England puritans were determined to keep funerals as grim as possible. In furtherance of this aim they passed a law in 1724 making it a crime for mourners at wakes to eat more than three sandwiches.

They didn't say anything about hot roast beef sandwiches with brown gravy ,triple decker club sandwiches or the giant open face sandwiches that constitute a complete main course.

In choosing bread for hot or cold sandwiches do not use the soft rubbery type that customers manhandle in grocery stores. Rye bread that is well baked may be made into sandwiches the first day. White bread should be at least 24 hours old. If it is still too doughly, toast it, or bake the slices in the oven.

The sandwich below is open face grilled raw ham covered with rarebit sauce. Most butchers resist cutting smoked raw or tenderized ham in very thin slices. They prefer to sell whole or half hams or thick slices. If you cannot buy raw ham, use boiled ham in slices, but do not buy it paper thin.

Hot Ham and Rarebit Sandwiches Serves 4.

Cut 1-2 pound sharp Canadian cheese into small cubes. In the top part of a double boiler over simmering water, put the cheese together with 2 tablespoons cream or evaporated milk, 1-2 teaspoon dry mustard and 1-2 teaspoon paprika.

Cook, stirring frequently until cheese melts. Beat 1 egg slightly, add part of the melted cheese to the egg and then combine egg with the rest of cheese in double boiler.

Use slices of raw ham cut about 1-4 inch thick. There should be enough ham to cover 8 slices of bread. Place the ham on a heated but ungreased heavy frying pan. Cook over a moderate flame about 4 minutes on each side.

Remove crusts from 8 slices of bread. Crusts can be saved for bread crumbs. Toast bread. Put ham on toast. Pour rarebit over ham. Sprinkle with chopped parsley or chopped chives.

DRAKE
apparel

The model Men's Apparel Shop, shown above, is typical of the twelve ultra-modern model stores which will be shown MONDAY and TUESDAY (August 7th. and 8th.) from 5 to 10 p.m., directly from two specially designed trailers parked on the MARKET SQUARE. Now on a tour of principal Canadian cities, the "Store Modernization Caravan" is sponsored by HOBBS GLASS LIMITED. More than 1000 architects, merchants and builders in the Belleville trading area, along with the general public have been invited to review the store models, according to the C. S. Gilliard, manager for Hobbs Glass Limited here. Civic organizations and public officials interested in mass modernization of their local districts are being encouraged to review the display, which is open to the public. The Belleville Utilities Commission is co-operating in the showing here.

Fashion Flashes

ALMOST ANYTHING goes well with navy, which helps to make it so popular. Navy and yellow is a particularly bright and fresh color scheme. Bright yellow candy straw for a high-crowned sailor, the wide navy velvet crown band studded with tiny violets, yellow buds and sequined butterflies.

GAINING MOMENTUM in popularity is the velveteen topper for wear with the sheers of Summer. A short-flared topper with wide-cuffed, push-up sleeves and slanting double-breasted closing below a club collar, looks good in navy blue or dark red velveteen as well as in black.

INCREASING in importance is the black and white theme for Summer wear. A very open lacy straw bonnet with a curved, forward-posed brim is in dazling white set off by a black velvet band and long black streamers. Nice with black or white sheers.

A NEWCOMER to the cardigan group is the embroidered version. Nice for evening is a cardigan of black boucle yarn with embroidered motifs in gold thread outlined with tiny rhinestones.

IMPRESSIVE tweed travel coats are shown by one importer. A reversible, slope-shoulder tent coat is fashioned of Italian handwoven tweed, one side checked in black and white with a green or red shadow line, with bright green or red tweed to match for the other side.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Elva Tyme contrafuses me at times. In the midst of my subject she gets me mixed up with something else I have said. She puts the two together and comes out with the wrong combination.

Take my dissertation on singleton leads. By the time I get around to this item I have reference to an isolated small card. Not the lead of an ace. Not the lead of a king.

By then my conclusion is that a singleton lead is not among the preferred leads. It is among the third group in the order of choice. It is promoted to a favorable lead only under certain conditions.

Right about there Elva pops up with this positive statement: "Just awhile ago you told us that a singleton ace lead was among the first choice group." And so I did.

But the lead of a singleton ace is not in the category referred to as singletons. It is classed among tops; the choice group of leads. On the other hand, any other singleton lead is among the last choice.

Against a suit contract the lead of an ace announces: "Partner, when I get through leading this suit I will have no more cards in it. Therefore, I will be able to ruff it if led to me in time."

South is in four spades when west holds this hand:

♠9 6 2
♥A
♦K 6 4 3 2
♣K Q 10 5

In this hand will be found two preferred leads; top of the club sequence and lone ace of hearts. Thus, the west lead of the singleton heart ace is one of the preferred leads here.

If the ace were a small heart the singleton lead of that suit would be undesirable. Lead of the top club would then be the only first choice.

Which of two tops should come first depends on circumstances. My aim in this piece is to point out that a singleton ace lead is classed as a top; not as a singleton.

Keep things where they belong.

Movie Column

By GENE HANDSAKER
(For Bob Thomas)

Hollywood, Aug. 5 — (AP) — Three eminent movie actors, with a feminine star yet to be selected, are preparing to go barnstorming across the land next February in a play. It's said to be the first time such a project has originated here.

The actors are Charles Laughton, Charles Boyer and Sir Cedric Hardwicke. They'll set forth in "Don Juan in Hell" 50 years after George Bernard Shaw wrote it. They'll appear in college auditoriums and gyms, and their scenery — a big, red-velvet backdrop — will travel with them.

The rotund Laughton will be costumed as Satan. Boyer will portray Don Juan, legendary romantic rascal of many literary works.

Sir Cedric will be the Spanish commander killed by Don Juan on earth before all these characters met in Satan's kingdom. The actress will be the commander's daughter, whom Don Juan betrayed.

The play, a one-hour and 45-minute insertion in Shaw's drama, "Man and Superman," will be presented without interruptions. It was put on a few times in Britain, Laughton says, but never in this country.

He calls it "A Cathedral of Ideas, a brilliant, amusing discussion of sex, life, work, the world, social questions — Heaven knows what all."

The project grew out of Laughton's reading of excerpts from the Bible, Shakespeare, and other works on a tour last winter.

"Everybody prophesied disaster," he remembers. "Lo and behold, audiences came out of the ground. There seems to be an enormous audience for this sort of thing." He has 83 more reading dates late this year — 31 more than last.

Laughton says he wrote to Shaw — "an extremely frightening thing to do." The 94-year-old author's "very nice" reply gave permission for the play to be done separately from the whole work.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

THE LONG HOLIDAY

Comes the long Civic Holiday weekend and outside of the Corbin Gold Cup Trophy attraction for the cream of the province's lawn bowlers and the soccer match between a Belleville all-star eleven and the East York United team of the Toronto Senior League, there's not a dag-nabbed thing to do in the cicty.

But if you haven't got a car and can stowaway in the neighbor's jalopy there is plenty of excitement in the suburbs if you don't care to watch the laddies roll-a-ball a penny-a-pitch at the little white kitty, or watch the fitba' luds gallivant on the soccer field.

For an all-out all-day program of topflight entertainment we strongly recommend the Lumbermens' Picnic being held today in Sam Curry's balliwick up in Tweed. They do tell us that the buckaroos of the timberlands and their ladies put on a grand show, one that for variety of entertainment and sheer fun and enjoyment cannot be surpassed anywhere.

The burly boys of the backwoods will be out in force and in a variety of demonstrations and contests show the bucks from the banana belt just how they reduce the kings of the forest into matchwood, cordwood and even toothpicks. At night there will be a grand wing-ding in the dance hall where the boys and gals of the north, south, east and Belleville will join hands in a doxy-doe and swing-'em-when-you-meet fandango.

Or, if you like the roaring hell-devils crouched low in their seats sending speedboats ripping through water at breakneck speeds hop over Picton way where the famous Gold Cup Regatta is being held Monday afternoon.

We don't know of any sport that has the spine-chilling nerve-tingling thrills of speedboat racing. We've seen regattas for the past ten years or so from a ringside seat, and we get the same thrill now that we got when first we saw the late "Pops" Cooper hurl his "Pops I" over the Picton course to capture the pewterware for the first time.

"IF . . ."

If the weather gods smile more or less benignly on Harold Wilson and his sleek racing queen, Miss Canada IVth on Monday, and he decides to put the unpredictable miss through her paces in an effort to knock the props from under "Slo-Mo-Shun's" world record of 160 miles per hour, we expect to be crouched in the bottom of a rubber raft just off the measured course near Picton come the crack o' dawn.

Last year we watched through sleep - drugged eyes as the beautiful boat roared out of the dawn in a thrilling trial over the Picton course. A few yards away in the official boat, Bob Schelling, official of the American Power Boat Association gave out a series of war whoops as Miss Canada fairly flew past, her sleek lines gliding over the water and her bows hurling a spume-capped bow wave on either side.

Then Schelling practically collapsed in the official barge. He shook his head. "Why, Oh why didn't he do it?" he almost moaned.

"Do what?" the newspapermen huddled in the rubber raft asked.

Schelling cupped his hands. "He bettered 150 m. p. h." he sang out, "but he forgot to lift his arm to signify it was a trial run."

You know the rest. Wilson went back for another try but the little lady went into a tantrum, kicked up her heels, blew a gasket shortly after she ripped over the starting line — and the day's fun was over.

* * *

In the afternoon we'll join the old gang on the official barge off Vandusen's Cove and "take in" the Gold Cup races. Picton's natural water amphitheatre is always a beautiful sight with its tree-fringed sloping shorelines, and nautical craft of all kinds dotting the water.

"WAIT FOR THAT POLE HORSE"!

With improved track conditions and a record entry of horses, it is expected the race meet to be held in connection with the Belleville Fair will be the best on record. Erle Denyes, secretary of the committee handling the race card stated today that over twenty horse-owners have filed entries for the different classes that have been listed. The races will be held on the last three days of the fair with two races being scheduled each afternoon. A running race will also be staged. On the first day a 2:28 trot or pace and a 2:17 trot or pace is carded and some of the best sidewheelers in this part of the country will likely go postward.

The second day will see the 2:20 and 2:23 classes raced while on the third and final day the 2:26 trot or pace and the Free-For-All will be the attraction. Purses will be $200 for each race with the Free-For-All having an extra $50 added. Trotters will be allowed three seconds excepting in the 2:28 class. It is expected that a number of horses racing at Thorncliffe will drop down during the three days of racing along with the many horses that are owned in the immediate district. Only eight horses are allowed to start in each race and the committee believe that all cards will be filled when the entries are all posted. The half mile strip has been thoroughly groomed for this race meet and fast time may be expected although the track record of 2.05½ will be hard to beat.

KICK-OFF!

The Bay of Quinte Football Association executive has announced that the following players will represent the Bay of Quinte All Stars in the Exhibition soccer match to be played at Belleville Fairgrounds on Civic Holiday: Blaker, Lane, Gemmel, (Belleville United), Whyte, Kendall, Silver, Snowden (Trenton Flyers), E. Helyer (Trenton Merchants), Mueller, Gill, J. Tlamsa, Planovsky (Batawa), Ellis (Vets), Rimmer (6 R. D.).

East York United of Toronto Senior League will furnish the opposition and are intending to bring a strong team down with them so a good game is assured. The kick-off has been called for 6 p. m. Jack Jones of Belleville will be the referee in charge of the match.

Waterloo Tigers Can Thank Bricker For Place in Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

Waterloo Tigers can thank Cy Bricker for their place atop the Intercounty Senior Baseball League today.

Bricker, the "old reliable" came through with a brilliant pitching stint at a time when Tigers had seen their lead dwindle to but one game over the heavy-hitting Brantford Red Sox.

What may well have been the crucial match of the pennant race was played Friday in Brantford. Bricker pitched a five hit 3-1 victory over Red Sox.

Tigers gave plenty of visual evidence as to why they deserve that top spot. Trailing 1-0 going into the ninth, they touched Alf Gavey for all their runs on but three hits. Sox made a belated attempt to rally, but Bricker rose to the occasion.

Gavey pitched beautifully up to the ninth, when Alex Kvasnak led off with a single, his third hit of the night. Red Kane was hit by a pitched ball after Herchenratter fanned, and Manny McIntyre forced Kane at second. Clare Martin's single brought two runs home, and Charlie Fornari finished it off with a run-scoring double.

St. Thomas Legion picked up a full game in their drive for the sixth and last playoff spot. Backing up Dick Long's six-hitter with a flawless fielding performance, Legion downed Galt Terriers 2-1.

St. Thomas got one hit off Galt starter Alex Martin and three off reliever Jim Bagby, but they got five walks and made their runners count. They put across single runs in the eighth and ninth, while Galt counted in the sixth on Babe Roberts' homer.

Wally Beggs and Duane Gottschall hooked up in another mound duel in Kitchener, Beggs and his hometown Legionnaires besting London Majors 4-1. Each tosser allowed but five hits.

Kitchener got their margin in the fourth, counting two runs on a walk, Buddy Heximer's triple and a wild pitch by Gottschall. A double error by Joe Bechard of Majors set up Kitchener's final two markers in the eighth.

Heximer and Bechard were the only players to hit safely twice in the game.

A scheduled game, Guelph at Stratford was rained out.

In Niagara Falls, the Fords squeezed out a 3-2 triumph over Welland Stokes in a Niagara District senior game. The win moved Fords to within a half game of the leading Stokes.

Sports Roundup

(By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, Aug. 5, (AP)—A radio sports editor, Harold (Bus) Saidt of Station WBUD at Trenton, N.J., begs leave to refute the contention of president Ford Frick of the National League that broadcasts of big league games are killing off the smaller minors.

Perhaps refute is not the precise word we are groping for. What Saidt actually says is that Frick is talking through his hat, and he submits what he considers strong evidence to prove it. He is inclined to blame television for the increasing mortality among the little fellows.

Before, however, we got more fully into Saidt's rebuttal of Frick's theory, it might be a good spot to haul in yet another baseball scholar, namely, Al Schacht, the noted diamond clown. Al troups through the deepest bushes with his act, and he observes as he goes.

"There's just too many minor leagues," Al says. "There's a lot of little two-gas station towns trying to support a professional team this year that never had a chance. Sure they're foldin'."

Nothing complex about that.

But let's listen to our radio man:

"Nowhere," writes Saidt, "has it ever been proved that the broadcasting of baseball by radio hurt box office gates. To the contrary, most major and minor-league magnates will go to any lengths to get their games on the air. The same can be said for broadcasting major-league baseball in minor league areas.

"Mr. Frick says that some people have television confused with radio." That may be so, too, but telecasting major league baseball in minor league cities creates a far greater peril than broadcasting the same games in the same minor league cities.

"To prove that radio is not to blame the directors of the York, Pa., team (Interstate League) just gave their local radio station the right to carry major league games in that area. They had withheld that right for years and now had become convinced that broadcasting major-league games in York not only would not hurt their local attendance but actually would increase it by creating interest in the game itself. . .

"The truth is that Mr. Frick's claims are entirely false. . .It long has been evident that radio develops an appetite to see baseball live, where television satisfies the appetite. . . ."

Erskine's Return To Brooklyn Close at Hand

Carl Erskine's return to Brooklyn Dodgers appeared imminent today.

Last night Erskine rang up victory No. 10 for Montreal Royals, blanking the Baltimore Orioles on only four hits. It was his fifth shutout.

Before the game, Branch Rickey president of the Dodgers, said: "On paper it seems great, but opposing batters are helping him. They're swinging at the bad pitch, something they won't do in the majors.

"I feel certain, you'll see Erskine back in Brooklyn before long."

That was before Erskine's brilliant effort last night. Perhaps Carl will be in Brooklyn livery sooner than anyone thinks.

The victory boosted Royals to within a half game of the second place Orioles. Jack Lindsay and George Shuba, another Brooklyn castoff, helped Erskine with a home run apiece. Irv Medlinger suffered his ninth loss.

At Rochester, another big-league prospect—Tom Poholsky of the Red Wings—came up with an 8-1 victory over Springfield Cubs. The Rochester righthander, property of St. Louis Cardinals, is the leading pitcher in the league with a 15-4 record and 16 complete games in 17 starts.

Toronto Maple Leafs turned back Jersey City 7-5, beating off a ninth-inning rally by the Little Giants. The Jerseys loaded the bases in that frame, but got only one run, thanks to Jocko Thompson's fine relief pitching.

Robin Roberts Looks to be Phillies' First 20-Game Winner Since Grover Alexander Days

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Robin Roberts looks like the Phillies' first 20-game winner since the good old days of Grover Cleveland Alexander.

Back in 1915, old Alex reeled off 31 wins and the Phils copped their first and only pennant for Pat Moran. Alex repeated with 33 in 1916 and 30 in 1917. But the Phils didn't.

Now comes Roberts, a 23-year-old lad from Michigan State, driving the Phils toward another National League flag.

Roberts hung up his 14th victory last night with a five-hitter against St. Louis Cards, 4-2. He took a 27-inning scoreless string into the game and carried it to 32 2/3 before Enos Slaughter hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning. It was a season high of shutout pitching.

Granny Hamner tripled with two on — and two out — in the eighth to score the tie-breaking runs following up singles by Del Ennis and Dick Sisler.

Ennis and Sisler also figured in the Phils' two runs in the fourth Ennis singled and scored on Sisler's double. Dick moved to third on a sacrifice and scored on Andy Seminick's fly.

The victory opened a five-game set with the ever-dangerous Cardinals. Eddie Sawyer's Phillies boast a three-game lead over second-place Boston.

Slaughter was the only man to trouble Roberts in his 15th complete game. Enos added a single and double to his homer but it wasn't enough for the Cards who dropped their seventh game in 10 starts.

Spahn Keeps Braves In

Lefty Warren Spahn kept Boston Braves in the hunt with his 14th win, a four-hitter over Chicago, 10-2. The Cubs only runs came in the ninth on two hits and two walks.

Sam Jethroe stole his 28th base during the Braves' six-run uprising in the third that kayoed Bob Rush.

Brooklyn, moving at a seven-of-eight pace, scorched Cincinnati 8-1 for Don Newcombe's 11th win. Two doubles and a single by Pee Wee Reese plus a double and two singles by Carl Furillo led the attack. Five runs came off loser Ken Raffensberger. The other two off Howie Fox.

Whitey Lockman's bases-loaded single in the eighth helped New York Giants edge Pittsburgh 3-2 for their 11th win in 12 starts. Despite this pace, the Giants remain in fifth place, 10 games off the pace.

Rookie Vern Law took a 2-0 lead into the eighth but retired in favor of Murray Dickson after a single and two walks filled the bases. Lockman drove in two runs and Henry Thompson knocked in the winner with another single.

Pittsburgh filled the bases with one out in the ninth but reliefer Dave Koslo made pinch-hitter Ray Mueller hit into a game-ending double play. Sheldon Jones, lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth-inning rally, was the winner.

Yankees Stop Injuns

New York Yankees stopped Red hot Cleveland 1-0. Tigers bowed to Washington 5-2 in another game on the all-night schedule and Detroit's lead was sliced to two games.

Vic Raschi helped the Yanks regain second place with a dazzling performance before 66,743 fans, biggest night crowd of the Major League season. Raschi, earning his 13th win, allowed three singles.

Bobby Feller wiggled in and out of several tight spots but escaped every time — except the fifth. With one out, Raschi doubled and took third on Gene Woodling's single. Raschi was out at the plate on an attempted squeeze play but Hank Bauer singled off Joe Gordon's glove, scoring Woodling.

After polishing off the Yankees three straight, Tigers ran into its usual trouble with Washington. They murder the Senators at Washington but can't seem to beat them at home. In seven Briggs Stadium games, the Senators have won six. At Washington the Tigers have won seven games without a loss.

Bob Kuzava scattered 11 Detroit hits. Ted Gray's home run ball to Sam Mele with two on in the third cost him the ball game.

Chico Carrasquel, hitting safely in his 23rd straight game, scored the winning run in the 10th inning for Chicago's 3-2 nod over Boston.

Sam Chapman hit a grand-slam homer and Ferris Fain homered with two on for Philadelphia's 12-9 decision over St. Louis in the battle for the American League cellar. Don Lenhardt, Roy Sievers and Dick Koskos homered for St. Louis.

Gossip From The Courts of The District

BY "DIG"

The weather in the last week or so has not been conducive to good tennis, in fact on one or two occasions the courts at the Quinte Tennis Club have been under water. Whenever possible the keener tennis fans have been seen getting in the odd set in between the showers. Luckily the league schedule has not been too badly interfered with due to weather conditions. One match, Quinte One vs Batawa called for last Wednesday did however have to be postponed.

In the Intermediate field Holloway Street are going great guns and so far have beaten both Quinte and Point Anne, they still have a little way to go yet though before they come up to full league standard but if they go on the way they are going they will be there before long.

Tennis equipment, racquets, balls etc. cost a lot of money these days. As far as balls are concerned one Canadian club has solved the problem. This is the Mountain View Club of Montreal. Their membership fee of $16.00 includes an unlimited supply of balls. They consider $3.00 as an average figure for balls for a year. Some use more than that and of course, some less. By buying in large quantities they can get them cheaper than an individual member, and apparently both the club and the membership are quite satisfied with the arrangement.

In League circles it seems to be a race between Point Anne and Trenton for first spot. Trenton were way out in front at the halfway position in the schedule but on losing two matches to the cementworkers by 5 to 0 and 4 to 1 the Point Anne racquet wielders now have a slight edge in the League standings which are as follows:

Teams	Played	Points
Point Anne	9	31
Trenton	10	30
Quinte	9	22
Batawa	8	16
Quinte	10	16

Batawa are putting up quite a creditable showing for their first season in the competition since its revival in 1948. They only have one tennis court and no lights and consequently have to play all their matches on Sunday afternoons. They always manage to serve up refreshments for the visiting club and this gesture is very much appreciated by the other members of the league.

St. Catharines Athletics Hottest Team in League

(By The Canadian Press)

The danger signs are up in the Ontario Senior Lacrosse League—"watch out for St. Kitts."

The Garden City Athletics, hottest team in the league right now, continued their torrid streak Friday with a hard-fought 10-8 victory over Hamilton Tigers. And they did it with the benefit of their usual last-half kick.

Athletics started out like a house afire, and wound up with a 4-1 lead at the end of the first quarter. But Tabbies bounded back and took the lead at the half.

The St. Catharines offensive really picked up steam then, and they wrapped the game up with a four-goal spree in the third quarter. Jim McMahon and Pat Smith were the only Athletics to score twice, while Merv McKenzie and Jack Dorney each had two for Tigers.

Owen Sound Crescents maintained their league-leadership with a 19-13 win over the cellar-dwelling Toronto Riverdales. Sounders took an early lead and were never threatened.

Rusty Slater, Don Cambell and Jack Foote led the Owen Sound attack, while Lorne Howes stood out for Riverdales with four counters.

Brampton Excelsiors had an off night in Mimico, dropping a 13-3 decision to the Mounties. Paced by Kenny Dixon, who netted four goals, Mounties moved into an early lead and kept pouring it in throughout.

Archie Browning, Harry Graham and Gord Cruickshank scored for the losers.

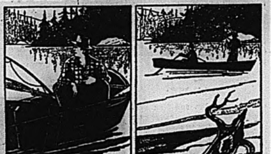
Live Bait or Artificial Lures for Bass



By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted sportsman, author and creator of Solunar Tables)

In the fall of 1939 we had the good judgment to leave behind us the crowded conditions of the metropolitan area of New York City and take up residence in my boyhood home, Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

When I lived in New York and its environs, the only way I could reach even passably good bass fishing was to spend two or three hours fighting traffic on crowded roads. The result was that my bass fishing was confined to three or four trips a season.

Upon reaching Williamsport I made inquiry about the bass fishing. It used to be pretty good when I was a boy. To my surprise most of the reports were unfavorable. The West Branch of the Susquehanna River, which used to be good bass water and which flows right through town, had suffered heavy pollution and no longer held fish in any quantity.

However, the North Branch of the Susquehanna, about sixty-five miles from here, still held some bass. I arranged a fishing trip to that river with one of my boyhood friends.

Found Fishing Poor

He insisted that live bait was the only proven method for taking bass in that river. Plenty of fishermen — "good fishermen"— had tried artificials in that water without success. Live bait was the thing.

So we fished live bait — hour after weary hour. We were drift fishing, rowing to the heads of the long pools and then drifting with the current while we displayed our wares to the North Branch bass. We did manage to catch three or four small fish but the large bass were not having any part of live bait.

The shore lines of some of these pools were, and still are, beautiful — ideal for bass-bug fishing. I made up my mind to investigate them further.

The following summer another friend and I — this one an ardent fly-rod fan — drove over to the North Branch. This time we did not bother with live bait. Instead we took with us only bass - bug tackle.

We had two days of excellent fishing and I returned home with five smallmouth which ranged from two to four pounds in weight. In all I suppose we caught and released better than fifty fish, most of them quite respectable bass.

Ideal Bass Stream

The North Branch is an ideal bass stream, blessed with plenty of bottom life, and the bass that come from its generous waters are deep, heavy fish, beautifully conditioned. As might be expected, the river is heavily fished. Yet the four pounder that comes in now and then with a lucky bait fisherman is the exception rather than the rule.

Conversely, by using midget plugs or bass bugs we manage to bring in large fish — some of them crowding the five-pound mark — every time we visit the river. There is no scarcity of adult bass — there are plenty of them. The fact remains that the live - bait boys simply do not get them.

I have never been able to understand the evident preference that so many bass fishermen show for live bait. Here in central Pennsylvania a shore-line caster is regarded as one of the mildly insane.

Long since I have given up talking to the bait fishermen to try to show them the error of their ways. Now I am content to have those lovely undisturbed shore lines pretty much to myself season after season.

Repeats Experience

For a great many years my son, Dick, and I have fished the head waters of the Delaware River for Smallmouth bass. Here the same rule applies — bass bugs will out-catch live bait by about ten to one.

For some reason the rule does not seem to apply straight across the board. In some of our smaller bass rivers right here in central Pennsylvania it is a large order to pick up a mess of bass with artificials during the bright daylight hours. Yet with a pail full of small minnows or helgramites there seems to be no limit to the supply of hungry bass.

At night, in these same streams a man can take all the bass he wants on artificials but in the daytime live bait seems to be the more productive method.

Of course, these streams are shallow and clear and visibility is extra good. That may account for this reversal. In the large streams the opposite is true and artificials are the more effective.

When you are shore-line fishing, either in the lakes or the larger rivers, it is important to know when the Solunar Periods are scheduled to arrive. A great many bass do not make their homes along the shore lines. Instead they spend most of their time out in deeper water.

A Solunar Period is nature's way of telling the bass that it is time to go out and rustle up a meal. Then it is that they leave the deeper water and cruise into the shallows in search of food.

Being "on the prod," so to speak, not only are they present in quantity along the shore lines; also, they will take surface lures, particularly bass bugs, quite readily. In a good bass river about the only time that the large smallmouth will strike readily is during the Solunar Periods.

Knowing this, we make our plans accordingly Before "zero hour" arrives, we make it a point to be ready and on the job in a good stretch of bass water.

Long ago we learned that it pays off, in oversize bass, to keep track of the daily Solunar Periods. This season try it for yourself and see if we're not right.

Prexy Thinks Players Belong To Hamilton

Toronto, Aug. 5 — (CP) — Eric Cradock says the Interprovincial Football Union thinks Jackie Stewart and Earl Valiquette belong to Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

But the president of the union hastened to add Friday that doesn't mean they're arguing with the Canadian Rugby Union.

The C.R.U. ruled the two players must play with Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Senior League because they signed C.R.U. playing certificates. Hamilton claimed they first had signed a contract agreeing to sign a certificate for Tiger-Cats at a later date.

Cradock said the Big Four executive at a meeting Thursday decided Tiger-Cats had a valid claim on Stewart because of a clause in the contract which read: "He will abide by any legal certificate that allows him to play football for that club."

Cradock added: "But that doesn't mean we're telling the C.R.U. their certificate doesn't count . . . the C.R.U. certificate is the only valid certificate.

"However, because of the clause, the Tiger-Cats and Stewart may have a legal loophole . . . Should the C.R.U. rule that the Tiger-Cats do not have a legal claim, we'll abide by the C.R.U. ruling."

Centenary Wins From Frankford In Playoffs

It appears that the law of averages finally caught up to the Frankford softball team in the Sidney League. For four consecutive years, a Frankford team has drawn Centenary in the semi final playoffs, and four times were successful in eliminating the boys from down Belleville way. However, this year, the fifth in which these two rivals have met was Centenary's year, and they copped the series in Frankford Thursday night with a sparking 8-4 victory. Fred Edmundson went the route for the winners, with Hearns and Bates working for Frankford. Frankford had men on bases most of the time, but some rather shaky base running resulted in a number of runners being cut down on the paths.

The opening game of the series in Centenary resulted in a 13-all tie. Frankford won the next game on their home diamond by a 15-6 count. Centenary won the return game and the final one Thursday night, to cop the series. They will now advance to meet the winner of the Wallbridge-Johnstown series. Johnstown is one game up in that series.

Samara Hurt in Third Fall, Rough-House Fred Gets Nod

"And he huffed and he puffed and he blew the house down. . ."

So says the story of the Three Little Pigs. This piece, however, is to do with the Big Bad Wolf of the wrestling rack. . . pardon game.

He personified in snarling growling Fred Atkins the muscle-happy bloke from down under, huffed and puffed and brought the house down almost about his ears in Memorial Arena last night. The crowd was not happy about the roughhouse dockyard tactics of Atkins who was awarded the third fall and match against Seeli Samara after the colored grappler was hurt and unable to continue.

Atkins persisted in kicking and trying to annihilate Samara while he lay on the canvas writhing in agony from a badly wrenched shoulder and the angry mob of spectators milled about the ring pelting Atkins with everything but baseball bats and the rink rafters.

Used Everything

The Aussie threw even what was left of his knowledge of clean wrestling to the four winds last night, and he bettered his former performances of using everything but a sten gun and a battery of artillery in his efforts to subdue Samara. He chocked Samara, gouged his tonsils, punched him legally and illegally, kicked him in the teeth grabbed him by his near kinky hair and in fact used everything but the police station, the city hall and Victoria Park against the doughty colored grappler.

He won the first fall after 20 minutes of rough house action and appeared to be well on his way to drop the second, when matters suddenly changed. Atkins heaved Samara clean out of the ring after brushing Referee Sam Gotter aside and applied the feet t Samara's face when he attempted to re-enter the ring. Finally Samara hurled himself over the top strand struck Atkins squarely amidships with the force of a battering ram and pinned him for the fall.

Same Tactics Evident

The same tactics were evident in the third fall but with Samara having a little the better of the argument. Eventually Atkins spun Samara in mid-ring, grabbed him in a bear-hug and hurled him against the ropes. Samara bounced off the hemp and crashed to the floor clutching his shoulder. It was evident that he was hurt and the referee awarded the fall and match to Atkins. That worthy, however, snarling and leering insisted on kicking the prostrate Samara while the crowd milled angrily outside the ring. Atkins finally gave up the job and strode muttering to himself to the dressing room.

Warren Bockwinkle and Abe Zvonkin wrestled to a draw in a spirited semi-final draw while the Masked Marvel making his first appearance in a Belleville ring, defeated Jack Moore after subjecting him to heavy punishment after 20 minutes of rough and ready "rasslin".

Miss Canada IV Begins Making Noises Like Champ

(By The Canadian Press)

Miss Canada IV, whose past has labelled her as one of the biggest busts in power-boat history, is beginning to make noises like a champion.

Trying to live down a long sequence of broken propellor shafts, clogged need-lines and overheated engines that slowed her to a crawl when the chips were down, Harold Wilson of Ingersoll, Ont., drove his sleek contender for international honors in an unofficial test run at Gravenhurst, Ont., Friday and nudged world-record time.

Wilson said after the run—his second of the day—that his speed was "not far off" the 160.3 miles an hour clocked by Stan Sayres of Seattle last month in his Slo-Mo-Shun.

Wilson hasn't decided whether to take an official crack at Slo-Mo-Shun's mark at Picton, Ont., immediately or wait until after he has challenged the United States for the Harmsworthy trophy next month.

The golfing Morland brothers of North Bay scored easy victories Friday to move into one semi-final bracket of the northern Ontario golf championship at Kirkland Lake.

In the other half of the draw, Frank Wyatt of Beattie Mines meets Elmer Armstrong of Kirkland Lake. Both scored narrow victories today.

Bill Morland, last year's titlist, knocked off Frank Kemp of Haileybury. Brother Dave took a one-sided win over Cy Cybolski of Iroquois Falls.

Most spectacular match was Wyatt's extra-hole win over Sandy MacDonald of North Bay. With nine holes to play, Wyatt trailed by four, but he came back with a strong putting game to tie the match on the 18th. His birdie three on the extra hole gave him the match.

Armstrong eliminated Jack Warrell of Cochrane on the 18th hole.

Murph Chamberlain, formerly of the Montreal Canadians signed Friday night to coach the Charlottetown entry in the Maritime Senior Hockey League next season. Announcement of the signing was made following a meeting between the former National Hockey League star and local club officials. At the same time the club announced the Charlottetown team would be known as the P.E. Islanders.

A Weekly Peek At The Soccer Picture

BY ELDEE

The big attraction in local soccer circles is the forthcoming visit of East York United of the Toronto Senior League to Belleville Fairgrounds on Civic Holiday next Monday, August 7th, to do battle with the local Bay of Quinte All Stars. This will be an evening match and the kick-off has been scheduled for 6 p.m. A fairly strong team has been picked to represent local soccerdom and a good game is assured. The East York squad are coming from a really sportsminded community who this season are fostering soccer from the bantam stage through juvenile and junior grades to senior standards.

Alec Macgregor Secretary of the Ontario Football Association informs us that an attempt is being made to bring the world's champion Uraguay soccer team to Toronto later on in the year after the Canadian National Exhibition next month. This should be a real attraction and will draw some of the local soccer fans out of town to see it.

The Ontario F.A. have given permission for any members of the now defunct Navy squad to obtain a free transfer to any other team in the Bay of Quinte Football Association. This will give the Navy boys a chance to get in the game once again.

As an additional attraction the Bay of Quinte Football Association are trying to arrange for a Toronto juvenile team to visit the district to take on a very keen bunch of youngsters from the city of Belleville. Of course finances are the main snag at the moment but it is hoped that this problem will be solved soon. Jack Dean of Trenton 's trying to muster up some additional opposition for the Belleville boys. Jack, who is Recreational Director of the Air Force City, tells us that he is only too pleased to let any outsider have the use of Bain Memorial Park as long as he is given at least forty-eight hours notice. Apparently he is trying to develop the park as a sports centre and endeavoring to make Trenton sports and recreation conscious. All power to him.

No league matches were played during the past week as the week was reserved for Trenton Challenge Cup matches. This cup was won last year by the old Northern Electric squad, so this year is bound to find the name of a new winner on the pot. Today Batawa travelled to Kingston to take on the United, and if transport arrangements are successful the Flyers are hoping to take a trip to the Capital City to play an exhibition with Ottawa Armed Services Club. Next week clubs get back to league business. Flyers have two home games, against Vets on Tuesday, and against 6 R. D. on Thursday whilst on Tuesday 6 R.D. play host to Trenton Merchants. By their victories in the first round matches of the Trenton Challenge Cup this week Batawa and Belleville United earned the right to meet Flyers and Trenton Merchants respectively in the semifinals in two weeks time.

Standings in the Bay of Quinte Soccer League to date are as follows:-

	P	W	D	L	F	A	Pts
Flyers	10	9	1	0	50	11	20
Batawa	9	7	1	1	26	12	19
Belleville U.	7	3	1	3	16	10	14
6 R.D.	9	4	0	5	21	21	10

Bank Cashier Preferred Death To Dishonor

Morris, Ill., Aug. 5—(AP)—A small town bank cashier who killed himself 10 days ago and whose accounts later were discovered to be short $186,000 preferred death to a prison sentence.

The choice by the bank cashier, Wendell Dirst, 57, and the disclosure that he "lost most of the money at the tracks," were revealed in a note read at an inquest into his death yesterday.

Dirst cashier of the Farmers First National Bank of nearby Minooka, killed himself with a shotgun July 27 while alone in the bank.

The note left by Dirst to his wife, Jane, said he believed his family "would just as soon see me in the cemetery as the prison. It must be one or the other."

Dirst was one of the leading citizens of Minooka a community of about 500 in northeastern Illinois.

'Better to Be Live Sinner Than Dead Saint'

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 5 (AP) — It's better to be a live sinner than a dead saint," says Dr. F. C. Vance, president of the University of Tampa. He suggests church-goers supplement their prayers with a little rifle practice.

World conditions are pretty bad and every man, woman and child in the United States should be taught the use of firearms and how to engage in civil defence and guerrilla warfare, he says.

He expressed his views in a letter asking that his name be withdrawn from supporters of the United World Federalists, a group which seeks to set up a world government through the United Nations.

"I believe we should have total preparedness based on the laws of the jungle —that we should learn every art and science of killing," states the letter made public yesterday.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was home this afternoon on account of being Satturday, and the doorbell rang and I answered it and it was the brush man, and I went and told ma, saying, It's Mr. Satterlee the brush man, ma.

Oh dear, this is a moment I dread, ma said, and I said, Shall I tell him you're bizzy, ma?

Certainly not. Mr. Satterlee has been coming here for years, ma said. It would seem like a social error to send him any sutch messidge as that. You'll have to go and talk to him, William, she said, and pop said, Who, me? Yee gods, I never talked to a brush man in my life. We wouldn't have a thing in common. It would be very imbarrassing for both of us, he said.

Now William, it would be absilutely fatal for me to see him, ma said. I've got three brushes in their original wrappings cluttering up the broom closit rite now, she said, and pop said, Good, I'll use those 3 brushes as a talking point. I'll take them and sell them back to him, he said.

But William, you can't propose a thing like that, ma said, and pop said, Who says I cant? I'll stick those 3 brushes in his face and I'll say, "Here they are, Spatterlee, in their original rappings, and I want full cash for them, and no arguments, please. You're not deeling with a woman now, Scatterflee, and I'm tired of having these brushes disrupting traffic in the broom closit in their silly original rappings. So take them and fork over, Smatterbee, and when we need you we'll send for you," pop said.

Oh, I'll talk to him, ma said.

Which she did, and she bawt a long narrow brush to go into long narrow bottles, and a little brush to get the hair off combs, and a still smaller one to get the hair out of the little one.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with Glasses Magee just walking along, and Glasses said, Oh boy, how's that for a fancy stummick?

Meening some fat ma cutting the grass on his frunt lawn and looking as if he wished he was sitting down in the shade instead of pushing a lawn mower in the sun, and me and Glasses stood there watching him use his stummick to help him push, and he watched us watching him, and after a while he said, This is a lot of fun, boys, seeing the grass fly and everything.

It looks pritty bumpy, I said, and the man said, Oh no, just bumpy enough to keep it intristing. I'll let you boys finish the job for me if you want to, and I'll give you a dime, so you'll be making money as well as having fun, he said.

Do you meen a dime apiece? Glasses said, and he said, Heh? yes, sure, a dime apiece.

Okay, we said, and we started to push the lawn mower, and the lawn was even bumpier than it looked, and the fat man sat down under a tree, saying, I told you it was fun, I'm almost sorry you talked me into it.

Which just then some lady leened out the upstairs window, saying, Cant I tern my back on you a minute, you big lazy hulk? No wonder you keep on getting heavier and heavier, she said, and the man said, Shh, do you want the naybors to hear you?

I want the whole werld to hear me, the lady said even louder, and the fat man said, Shh, shh. Listen, boys, on 2nd thawts I want to have the fun of doing it myself. Give me the lawn mower back, and I'll give you a quarter to make up for your disappointment, he said.

Do you meen a quarter apiece? Glasses said, and he said, I do not.

And he gave us one between us, and we kept on going, feeling lucky, and the fat man kept on mowing his own lawn and looking as if he felt just the opposite.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

"Dick can help paint his room, too, I imagine," Jenny said, but Pete protested.

"He'd only get all messed up."

Jenny looked at him in surprise. "You mean, you're not going to let him help? Oh, Pete, do. What if it does look a little streaked or something He'll be crazy about it just because he did it. You ought to let him help you with the carpentry work, too."

Pete stared at her, shocked. "And have him smash a couple of fingers right away? Or saw things off at the wrong place? Why plywood is hard enough to get as it is. No, thanks."

But Elsa, keeping her voice lowered so that the boy upstairs would not hear her, said, "Jenny's right. I don't know why we didn't thing of it, Pete. It will be a good way for the two of you to get acquainted — you know doing men's work together. And besides he'll have more fondness for his new home if he had a hand in it."

Pete agreed, grumblingly, to let him try, but Jenny could see he was skeptical. For the first time, she had a real doubt of how the father and son would get on. Pete had not known any children for so long. He was a man in his middle thirties, but in many ways older in manner than his years. She supposed, naively, that working chess problems had made him that way. It was going to be hard for him to find his lost youth again, to relive it with his son.

Dick did not come downstairs until he was called, and Jenny, preparing a hearty supper, wondered several times if it would not be a good idea to ask him to help her. But she decided that tonight she would let things ride. He was probably tired with the strain of the automobile trip in close proximity with the two strangers who were to be his parents from now on. There was a chill in the air, and she had made a large casserole of ham and scalloped potatoes. There were hot spiced beets and cool, homemade applesauce. And for dessert, a pie. A large butterscotch pie with a mound of fluffy meringue.

She set milk at his place, and called the others to the meal. She was glad she had asked Brent to stay tonight. It would be easier for the boy, she thought, to have a man present.

Dick came in, looking comparatively neat, with Ghillie trailing at his heels, and announced at once that he was not hungry. Jenny's heart sank until he passed her his plate for the third time, and then she decided that the announcement had been a declaration of his emotional state, and had nothing to do with his stomach. When the pie came on the table, a rapt "Oh, boyoboy!" escaped him, but he covered up at once by asking Brent some questions, and Jenny understood that his pride would not let him acknowledge that he was enjoying the meal. For a while, at least, he was determined to be a boy who had been torn from his real home—unloved, unwanted, misunderstood.

She made use of the scottie's attachment for him at once. While she and Natalie did the dishes, Brent cleared up the dining room. "Ghillie really should go out now" she said to Dick, "but I'm busy. Would you put his harness and leash on, and take him for a walk?"

He looked at her a moment, the sullen expression back again. "Why don't you take him later, then?" he blurted rudely. "He's your dog!"

"But he's not," Jenny told him calmly. "He belongs to Mrs. Folsom, and she left him here when she had to go to Indiana to see her sister." She added, "I'll be glad to take him now, if you'll do the dishes."

"Do the dishes!" His indignant voice broke on a speak. "I'm no girl!" he informed her.

"This is no hotel either," she said, drying her hands and reaching for Ghillie's harness. "We all have to do our share here. Didn't you notice that Mr. Evans is clearing up the dining room? That's woman's work took, if you want to call it that. I don't qualify it myself—it's just work, that's all."

He took the harness from her, stooped and fastened it around Ghillie's rotund middle. He grumbled a little to himself, but he went out. When the back door had slammed behind him, Natalie looked at her sister.

"Oh,oh," she said softly. "Trouble ahead?"

"I don't think so." Jenny considered, her head a little on one side "I don't think so," she repeated. "Not if we get our status all straightened out in the beginning. Then he won't feel abused later on."

But the dishes had all been washed and put away, the sink scrubbed, and the stove wiped, and Dick and Ghillie had not returned. Jenny stifled the worry which had begun to gnaw at her. She had been foolish to send the boy out like this alone, in the dark evening. Perhaps he was lost. She was not sure that he even knew her address.

At last the suspense was too much for her, and she threw an old coat around her shoulders and went out to look for him. She gave Ghillie's whistle several times but there was no answer, and the faint pools of light under Green Ridge's sparsely scattered street lights revealed no one at all.

When she had pretty well covered the neighborhood, she turned down the little street where the Torres' lived. And stopped dead. Unaware of how he was revealed by the streaming lamplight from their living room, Dick was standing, staring into the home that was to be his. It was too distant for Jenny to make out his expression, but something about his posture, something about the way he held Ghillie's leash in his tight fist, proclaimed his loneliness, his forlon feeling.

She went back around the corner, out of sight, then whistled again. She knew that Ghillie would tug at him, that he would come away now. But she did not want to meet the boy, did not want him to know that she had seen him at his wistful spying. She went back quickly to her own home. Brent was just leaving. "If you see Dick," she said, somewhat breathlessly, "send him along, will you? Ghillie's too old to go gallivanting at night." She kept her voice light, but he knew that she was worried.

"I'll do that," he promised her.

A few minutes later he came strolling up the front walk with the boy and the dog. "Forgot my pipe," he called out as he mounted the porch steps. He went into the studio, came out again, ostentatiously stuffing his pipe with tobacco. "Well, so long," he called, and was gone for the night. Jenny was grateful for the use by which he had made his return with the boy seem a natural thing.

"Does that guy live here?" Dick demanded when she had closed the door for the night.

"No, he works in the studio. He rents part of it."

"Well, does he board here. then?"

"No. He's an old friend, and sometimes we invite him to stay for a meal. He often brings his share of the food." Jenny told him with embarrassment.

"What's he do?"

"He's an artist. An illustrator."

Dick sniffed. "An artist! Humpf! One of those guys!"

"Why, what do you know about artists?" Jenny asked curiously.

He backed down at once. "Oh, nothin' particularly. But they're sort of sissies," he derlared.

Jenny laughed a peal of clear amusement. "If he's a sissy, I'm a man-eating tiger," she told him. "He was in the Navy for three years, and he's been all over the world. He's been a truck driver, and a printer, and he's worked in an advertising agency in New York. One summer he sold brushes from door to door, and another summer he worked in a filling station. He's no sissy! In fact," she added suddenly serious, "I've known lots of artists. My father was one, and we've always had them around the house, and I can only remember one who wasn't a real he-man. That's a pretty good average. What do you want to be?"

Canada to Double Active Army Strength

Recruit Brigade For Korean War Under U.N. Pact

5,000 Men Needed, Offices Will Open on Wednesday

Ottawa, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Canada moved today to double the standing fighting strength of her regular army as the world headed into weeks of crisis which Ottawa and other western capitals feel will show whether Russia intends to touch off a Third World War.

To the airborne brigade that has been earmarked to defend the country, Prime Minister St. Laurent announced last night the army will add a second brigade, a "special force" that will be "specially trained and equipped to be available for use in carrying out Canada's obligations under the United Nations charter or the North Atlantic Pact."

Recruiting for the second brigade will start tomorrow.

That will give the army two brigades, each of about 5,000 men, one slated for home defence, the other to fight in Korea or elsewhere for the U.N. as the international situation dictates once it is ready after months of training.

If not needed in Korea, when ready, it could be sent elsewhere. The two brigades, in effect, will give Canada two-thirds of a division.

Authoritative quarters said formation of the new force means these things:

Milton F. Gregg New Minister Of Labor

Ottawa, Aug. 8 (CP) — A new minister has stepped into the Labor Department on the verge of a critical situation in the railway management-labor deadlock.

To take the place of the late Humphrey Mitchell, the government Monday named Veterans Minister Milton F. Gregg, soldier and educator who has been in parliament since late 1947.

The second leg of a two-way cabinet shuffle brought the Veterans' Affairs portfolio to solicitor-General Lapointe, 38, whose job is being absorbed by Justice Minister Garson.

Mr. Gregg moved into the Labor Department as indications pointed to likely government intervention in the wage-hours dispute between 17 unions and the railways, threatened with a general strike Aug. 22 unless a satisfactory settlement is negotiated before that.

As Minister, Mr. Gregg will be called on to play a key role in any settlement that the government may hammer out.

Appointment of the new minister was announced by Prime Minister St. Laurent just six days after the death of Mr. Mitchell, and apparently it was hastened by the imminence of the rail crisis and the possibility of a general tie-up unless settlement is reached.

In taking up labor, Mr. Gregg moves into his third portfolio in less than three years. He was president of the University of New Brunswick when he was chosen Fisheries Minister late in 1947. His riding is York-Sunbury in New Brunswick.

A Victoria Cross winner in the First World War, Mr. Gregg commanded the West Nova Scotia Regiment and held other commands in the Second World War emerging as a brigadier.

His successor, also a veteran of the Second World War, represents the Quebec constituency of Lotbiniere. He is a son of the late Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe.

Premature Baby Leaves Hospital

Montreal, Aug. 8 — (CP)—Albina Mary Macikas, a 3½-month-old premature baby, left a Montreal hospital today, three days before her birth was expected.

Albina, daughter of Mrs. Helen Macikas of Montreal, was expected Aug. 11 but was born early in May, weighing two pounds, five ounces. She was taken to hospital and lived for two months under an oxygen tent.

Doctors said it was one of the few cases ever recorded where a 3½-months-premature baby survived.

The infant, only child of the Macikas, now weighs four pounds 15 ounces.

COL. LECKIE DIES

Port Hope, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Col. John E. Leckie, world traveller, soldier and engineer, died here Monday. He was 78. Col. Leckie commanded the 16th Battalion of the Canadian Army (Canadian Scottish Regiment) during the Second World War and served in the South African War after graduating from Royal Military College.

Assoc. for Deaf Re-elects Officers

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP) — Robert E. McBrien of Peterborough, secretary of the Ontario Association for the Deaf since 1925, has retired. He will be succeeded by Murray Brigham of Ottawa, chosen at the closing meeting yesterday of the Association's convention here.

All other officers were re-elected. They are: Honorary President, George F. Stewart, Belleville; President, David Pelkoff, Toronto; vice president J. N. Rossick, Toronto; treasurer, Howard J. Lloyd, Brantford.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS:

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP) —Synopsis: Pleasant summer weather continues to hold sway over most of Ontario today although some cloudiness and a few isolated showers are reported from northern regions. This band of cloudiness will move slowly eastward across the northern part of the province tonight and Wednesday. Some clouds are likely to be seen in southern regions Wednesday, but skies will remain mostly sunny and the mercury will again reach the 80s.

Meteoric Crater Greater Than Any Discovered Found in N. Quebec

Toronto, Aug. 8, (CP)— The Globe and Mail, in a world copyright story, said Monday that a meteoric crater far greater than any yet known has been discovered in the Far North of Quebec Province, near Hudson Strait.

It was discovered, says the newspaper, by an expedition organized by the Royal Ontario Museum of Geology and Mineralogy, headed by Dr. V. Ben Meen, director of the Museum.

Ken W. MacTaggart, Globe and Mail staff writer, accompanied the aerial expedition, and in his account says that the crater is four to five times larger than one in Arizona, which is about 4,000 feet in diameter and which was the largest previously known.

Dr. Meen estimated that the meteorite struck Quebec's Ungava barrenlands 3,000 to 5,000 years ago and that it smashed into the earth with an explosive power sufficient to wipe out New York or London. MacTaggart's account adds:

"Today, to mark the fierce incident that smashed billions of tons of granite into fragments and hurled these fragments many miles, there stands a cone-shaped crater, rising to heights of 550 feet above the tundra-covered plains. In the cone lies a lake two miles wide with ice three feet thick on July 26.

The crater lies about 1,100 miles north of Montreal, 300 miles north of Fort Chimo and about 60 miles from Hudson Strait.

The expedition made the 3,440-miles round trip from Toronto in the newspaper's aircraft.

HOUSE LIKELY TO BE RECALLED IN NEAR FUTURE

Prime Minister Tells Of Plans Over Air

Ottawa, Aug. 8 (CP) — Canada has launched a vast program of rearmament - for-defence — including the doubling of her standing army—and a special session of parliament will be asked within a few weeks to approve the moves and foot the bill.

Prime Minister St. Laurent made these disclosures last night in a National CBC broadcast after weeks of speculation. He announced formation of a special army brigade to fight in Korea or elsewhere, said production of ships, planes, guns and ammunition is being stepped up all along the line and declared these steps are made necessary by communism's threat to world peace.

"It is going to be hard for nations hungering for peace and not yet recovered from six years of total war, once again to give first place to re-armament," he said.

"But events force us to be realistic."

He referred to the "menacing implications" of the Korean war, the action of the United Nations to stamp out this aggression and declared:

Must Build up Strength

"If we are to avert the danger which threatens the free world, we must marshall and increase the resources available to resist aggression; we must build up military strength backed by industrial strength; we must accept the economic and financial policies which will enable us to maintain our strength."

Father Unaware Triplets Born

Toronto, Aug. 8 — (CP) — The stork knocked three times today at the home of Ross Hillier, while Hillier was out pounding the pavement on his door-to-door canvassing job, unaware of the new arrivals.

"Somewhere in the city" was the only address his employer could give hospital authorities when they called to tell the new pepa that two boys and a girl had been born to his wife. His Centre Island home hasn't a telephone.

Friends hope to find him by tonight.

CHURCH RUGS STOLEN

Toronto, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Thieves early today stripped carpets valued at more than $2,400 from the floors of Westminster United Church. Police said the gang ripped up rugs in the vestry, reception hall, office and library and carted them away in a truck.

9,000 Reds Cross Naktong River, American Offensive Slowed by Heavy Resistance

Tokyo, Aug. 9 — (Wednesday) — (CP) — North Korean troops poured across the Naktong River defence barrier in Korea Tuesday while far to the south an American offensive was slowed by heavy resistance.

Upwards of 9,000 North Koreans were reported over the Naktong in two crossings. A war summary released here at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday (9:30 a.m. EDT) said the "possible threat from the small bridgeheads . . . has neither increased nor decreased," but a U.S. army spokesman in Korea described them as of "primary concern at present."

Another possible threat developed when the South Korean army reported a red Korean force of possibly 1,000 had slipped through allied lines to within five miles of Pohang, the east coast port where American troops landed three weeks ago. Allied patrols were checking the reported infiltration.

Yanks Make Small Gains

The two-day American Marine and infantry offensive in the extreme south made small and bloody gains in all-day attacks. Reuters news agency quoted an army spokesman as saying it would be a "fair description" of the battle to say it was "not going according to plan."

However, in the face of heavy opposition the offensive had gained 10 miles and was 10 or 12 miles east of battered Chinju. Marines succeeded in freeing an army detachment which had been pocketed by a communist flanking movement.

The red bridgeheads on the Naktong posed threats to allied forces at two places.

One was five miles north of Waegwan, 15 miles northwest of Taegu, the provisional South Korean capital. The other was six miles south of Changnyong, which is southwest of Taegu.

At least three red regiments—9,000 men with probably more slipping across behind them in darkness — were over the river in the two spots. Front-line reports said one of eight tanks sighted had been ferried across the river by the communists.

MacArthur Optimistic

Gen. MacArthur continued to take an optimistic view of the situation.

"Tell the president (Truman) not to worry. We are confident about the situation over here," he told W. Averell Harriman, the president's special assistant and adviser on foreign affairs, as Harriman left for Washington after a three-day visit that took him to the front.

One of Gen. MacArthur's intelligence officers estimated North Korean losses in six weeks were 44,500 men—an average of more than 1,000 a day in the war which started six weeks ago.

When the fresh army troops were thrown at the remnants of two red regiments near Changnyong two American Mustangs joined the attack and strafed the U.S. by mistake, hitting 19 of them.

Associated Press Correspondents Don Whitehead and Tom Lambert reported heavy raking artillery and mortar attacks by red forces in the south.

Red guns dominated the choked and dusty roads west of Chidong at a junction where the 5th Infantry turned northwestward toward Chinju. The Marines headed southward toward Kosang.

Infiltrators cut back of the American positions Monday night and set up two roadblocks between Chidong and Masan.

One red attack hit a unit of the 24th Regiment as the Negro combat men climbed into trucks under orders to clean out another pocket at Haman, northwest of Masan. The reds came over a hill and opened fire, correspondent Whitehead reported, but were met by counter-attacking American small arms fire and aerial and tank attacks.

Briefing officers at MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters said the American offensive evidently beat the reds by a few hours before they tried to jump off on a new drive toward Pusan, the main U.S. supply funnel. This meant the two forces hit head-on.

The fighting on the southern front was heavy and progress was slow on Tuesday.

A United States 8th Army communique said the offensive went forward after Marines rescued a cut-off army unit by a flanking attack mounted by the North Koreans.

France Will Get Two U.S. Warships Under Aid Program

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP) — France will receive its first two United States warships under the foreign military aid program Aug. 1 at Philadelphia, the U.S. defence department announced today.

The vessels are the 1,240-ton destroyer escorts Samuel F. Mills and Riddle, both in service in the Second World War. They will be renamed the Arabe and Kabyle.

France is the second country to get warships from the U.S. under the program. Two destroyers escorts were transferred to The Netherlands June 1. Eight more ships of the same class now are being readied for early delivery to western European Allies.

Indo-China has received six support landing ships and eight C-47 transport planes from the U.S.

Turkey will get a submarine rescue ship Aug. 15. Two submarines now being refitted by the navy also are expected to go to Turkey.

Burma is expected to get a number of small patrol craft in the near future.

The tempo of arms aid to the smaller countries of southeast Asia is likely to be stepped up soon, defence headquarters indicated, following receipt of the preliminary report of the U.S. survey mission now in southeast Asia.

No immediate information was available as to specific recommendations in the report, but defence ofifcials sid the Vietnam army of Indo-China needs small arms, light artillery and some heavier weapons. Needs of the former French colonial state are being considered in addition to requirements of the French army now opposing communist led rebels in Indo-China.

France already has received about 100 U.S. navy planes — ferried across the Atlantic by the French escort carrier Dixmude.

Britin has taken delivery of a substantial number of B-29 superfortresses in the last few months. It is generally understood here that it will run to about 10 superfortresses.

HAIRCUTS MAY GO UP

Ottawa, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Journeymen barbers of Ontario, at their 38th annual meeting here Monday, endorsed a resolution which will probably mean 75-cent haircuts throughout the province. Haircut prices at present vary in Ontario.

DELUGED BY CALLS

Toronto, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Police were deluged by phone calls last night reporting a vivid flash of light in Lake Ontario a few miles east of here. Some callers said they thought a ship had exploded. Investigations revealed it was caused by a fireworks display across the lake.

WAR BLUEPRINT MEETING OPENS AT OTTAWA

Plenty of Orders May Come to Canadian Plants

Ottawa, Aug. 8—(CP)—The historic Canada-United States meeting to map out a joint industrial blueprint for war started today at 10 a.m. EDT.

Industrial planners from both countries filed into the Senate Railway Committee Room in the parliament buildings to approve a set of principles which, it is expected, will release millions of dollars worth of United States war orders to Canadian plants. The meeting was closed to the public and guards were placed at the door to keep the curious away.

Entering the chamber were Harry J. Carmichael, chairman of the Industrial Defence Board and munitions production co-ordinator during the Second World War. He will preside at today's meeting, the first formal get-together in a year of the joint Canada-United States Industrial Mobilization Committee.

With him was Sydney D. Pierce, Associate Deputy Minister of Trade and the official charged with Canada's stockpiling of strategic war materials.

An unexpected addition was Brig. C. M. Drury, Deputy Minister of Defence.

On the American side were Fred Winant, of the National Security Resources Board, replacing W. Stuart Symington, the board's chairman, and Hubert E. Howard, chairman of the U.S. Munitions Board. With them were other officials.

All Restrictions Removed

Principles under discussion, it was disclosed, included:

1. Canada and the United States would agree to the removal of all restrictive legislation impeding the flow of armament orders across the international border.

2. This removal would include reduction in tariffs and elimination of the Buy-American Act of 1934 which limits U.S. defence forces to equipment purchases inside the United States.

3. Joint international action of economic controls, required to complete defence orders in both countries, including controls on allocations of materials and priorities.

4. A declaration of non-discrimination in allocation of materials. United States armament producers would get the same priority rating on Canadian nickel that Canadian producers would themselves. The non-discrimination plan would apply to materials obtained in both countries.

City and Country Residences Left To Government

Largest Share of Estate To Establish Scholarships

Ottawa, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Former Prime Minister Mackenzie King's estate is valued at about $750,000 and is to be used largely for public purposes and for the establishment of scholarships, executors of his will disclosed today.

Mr. King, who died July 22, left these bequests

His private papers, a mine of Canadian history, are turned over to four literary executors, but his personal diaries are to be destroyed except for certain parts he has indicated.

Laurier House in Ottawa, the home of Sir Wilfred Laurier and Mr. King, is left to the government along with a $225,000 trust fund for its upkeep, in the hope that it will be kept up as a memento of its occupancy by two prime ministers.

For Public Park

The 500 acres and buildings of Mr. King's summer home at nearby Kingsmere are given to the government as a public park, with Mr. King expressing the hope that part of the property will be set aside as a country home for future prime ministers.

Income from a sum of $100,000, presented to Mr. King on his 74th birthday for his personal use by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is to be used to set up travelling scholarships worth $1,500 each and known as "Mackenzie King Travelling Scholarships."

They will go to graduates of Canadian universities for post-graduate study of international relations or industrial relations in United States and United Kingdom universities.

Residue of the estate, amounting to several hundred thousand dollars, will found a series of post-graduate scholarships not exceeding $1,000 each and known as "Mackenzie King Scholarships." They will go to graduates of Canadian universities, with one earmarked for a graduate of Harvard University, which Mr. King attended.

Another $15,000 is left to the University of Toronto to found the "John King Scholarship" in memory of Mr. King's father. It will be awarded annually for proficiency in English literature or constitutional history.

Many Personal Bequests

In addition, the executors said, there are many personal bequests to relatives, personal friends and servants. Succession duties on these are to be paid out of the estate itself.

STUDYING BOMB SHELTERS

New York, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Mayor William O'Dwyer disclosed Saturday that New York City is studying the possibility of building mass atomic bomb shelters designed to accommodate at least 25,000 persons each.

Winnipeg Swept By Savage Storm, Big Property Loss

Winnipeg, Aug. 8. —(CP)— A flash thunderstorm of near-hurricane proportions struck Greater Winnipeg early Monday. Two men were killed. The gale caused hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of damage and a power blackout through much of the city.

The storm, accompanied by winds up to 68 miles an hour, was described as the worst of its kind to hit Winnipeg in 28 years.

Paul Chumilar, 41, died when he touched a live wire blown down by the storm and 64-year-old Clarence B. Lee collapsed and died of a heart attack while attempting to close the windows of his home during the rainstorm.

Seven other persons were injured by falling trees.

40-Minute Blow

The 40-minute blow, which started at 12:20 a.m., damaged scores of buildings, telephone poles and flooded streets, basements and subways. Thousands of trees were blown down.

Thousands of dollars' worth of plate glass windows were demolished. At least 100 in the downtown area were smashed. Roofs were torn off many buildings and homes—others were struck by lightning.

Trees and power lines are down all over Greater Winnipeg. City hydro and Winnipeg Electric repairmen were hard pressed to restore service as emergency calls flooded in.

Much Damage to Trees

Parks through the city suffered heavy damage to trees and flower gardens and at least one golf course was temporarily put out of action.

Heavy damage was done to market gardens, and in many sections home gardens were flattened by the gale, hail and heavy rain.

Neon signs, chimneys, aerials and sign boards were torn down.

Wind pressure on windows and rain caused short circuits, setting off burglar alarms. Fire department headquarters received more than 28 calls within two and one-half hours.

Portage Ave., was a scene of shattered windows and torn and twisted awnings. Debris littered the streets for blocks.

The storm came up suddenly and the weather office had no time to issue warnings. It lasted for nearly two hours. But the brunt was felt during the first 20 minutes.

Streets Flooded

Water rose in the streets and as power lines snapped street cars and buses were left stranded. Ellice Ave., and Maryland in central Winnipeg presented a scene of desolation. Timber, masonry and bricks strewed the intersection.

The storm was centred on Winnipeg. Other sections of the province reported lightning but the intensity was not so severe.

Fort Rouge and the west end of Winnipeg suffered the worst of the storm. Streets were covered by a carpet of leaves. And from almost every tree broken branches dangled.

American Girl Ready to Swim Back After Record Breaking Channel Trip

Dover, Kent, England, Aug. 8 (AP)— Florence Chadwick, San Diego swimmer, conquered the English Channel today in record time but Shirley May France was forced to give up eight miles off shore.

Miss Chadwick, who is 31 and a professional swimmer, cut the women's record set by Gertrude Ederle in 1926. She made it in 13 hours, 28 minutes, one hour and three minutes under the Ederle mark.

She swam to Dover from Cap Griz Nez, France, on a course of at least 22 miles.

Thousands of persons lined the white cliffs of Dover. Reporters asked Miss Chadwick if she was all right. "Yes," she said, "but these slippery, jagged rocks are not so good to scramble over after a long swim.

"I feel fine and am quite prepared to swim back."

When she was only a quarter mile out, she had been asked if she wanted to rest her legs.

"No fear," she answered. "I'll keep going now. It looks only another yard or so to the finish."

A few feet from the shoreline, under the 250-foot cliffs, she clambered into one of her rowboats because of the rocky surface under foot. But no one doubted that she had finished her swim and made it one of the greatest in the history of channel attempts.

Miss Chadwick swam almost mechanically, apparently tireless, as her arms split the cold, calm water. Her pace at the outset was ambitious—60 strokes to the minute—but she cut it back to 26 later. Her flawless rhythm never faltered.

Miss Cadwick paused four or five times an hour to take cubes of sugar, her only nourishment.

The California swimmer financed her attempt—she estimated it cost her $5,000—without outside help. She had refused commercial tie-ups, saying there would be time to discuss such things if she succeeded.

Hers was the 32nd successful swim across the channel. She is the 12th woman to do it.

Miss Chadwick wore an oversize swim suit—inside out so that the seams wouldn't rub her skin. She also wore a bathing cap.

ENERGETIC CLUB DEFAULT GAME TO JEWELLERS

The Energetic Club, currently perched on the bottom rung of the B Section of the Commercial Softball League, added a loss by default to their record last evening when they failed to muster nine men before the fifteen minute deadline allowed by league regulations. Avon Jewellers took the 9-0 verdict.

The Energetic Club drew two players from the stands and waged an exhibition game that wound up at the end of four innings with the Jewellers on the short end of 10-8 score.

Sneak Thieves Pilfer Girls' Dresses, Shoes

Wellington-on-the-Lake is a lovely place that draws thousands of visitors annually to its lakeside park. Two of this year's visitors have no intention of visiting there again following a disastrous series of events last Sunday.

Two Belleville girls were spending the afternoon in the village and enjoying themselves immensely. They had taken a lunch with them and following their swim decided to eat. They found their lunch where they had left it but missing from the cache was half of their clothes. One girl had her dress taken and the other one had a pair of new shoes stolen. The girls had been away from their things for less than fifteen minutes.

Since they had come to Wellington on the bus they were faced with returning home in their bathing suits. An attempt to locate the village constable revealed only that he had left town.

Thanks to a friend however, the girls were not obliged to undergo the humiliation of riding to Belleville on the bus in their bathing suits. The friend drove them home in a car.

Such shoddy treatment of summer visitors has left a sorry impression of Wellington in the minds of two Belleville girls, who were left wondering to what extent a sense of humor could be warped by the criminal mind.

Heavy Damage Incurred In Car-Truck Crash

Civic Holiday weekend passed quietly in Belleville and district, if police records are any indication. No accidents of any proportion were noted by provincial police, and of six city collisions only one resulted in heavy damage.

Four hundred dollars damage resulted from a collision this morning between a station wagon owned by Halloran Bros., and driven by Patrick Halloran, of R.R. 5, and a Reid's dairy truck driven by Henry Canning of 20 Wilkin St. Bulk of the damage, $300, was borne by the station wagon, which was smashed on the right side. The Halloran vehicle was moving east on College St. W., and came into collision with the dairy truck which was backing out of a driveway of a house on the south side of the street.

Damage to the truck was done to the tail gate and the skirting on one side.

Little Bonnie Janco, of 71 Geddes St., was involved in a slight accident on Saturday and came off lightly. She suffered a scratched left shoulder and right leg when she ran into the side of a truck owned by Cleanrite Cleaners, driven by Gerald Way. The four-year-old child ran from the west curb of Geddes St., into the side of the truck, near the rear fender. Police Constable Charles Lockwood investigated.

Damages ranging from $10 to $50 were recorded in four other accidents in the city over the weekend, with no injuries reported. In addition, a hydro pole at 178 E. Moira St. took a beating sometime Saturday night. It is believed to have been hit by a car.

And charges under the Liquor Control Act over the weekend only amounted to six, with three of them resulting from alleged drinking on Zwick's Island.

Detroit, Aug. 8—(AP)—A sure symptom of a tightening manpower situation now is at hand in industrial Detroit. The gals are driving taxi-cabs—just as they did in the last war.

Perfect Weather

Resorts and Country Areas Crowded on Holiday Weekend

It was a perfect holiday, especially from a weather standpoint.

Old Sol blazed down in all his glory on Saturday and sent a warm wave over the city and district that was gratefully appreciated by fun-seekers and stay-at-homes as well.

If highway traffic and that on the byways can be judged a criterion, it was a Civic Holiday on wheels. A steady stream of cars poured through the city from early Saturday morning as a holiday-conscious populace sought respite from the workaday life.

City residents fanned out in all directions. The northern holiday haunts, cabins and cottages were filled with rest-seeking people.

Picton was the mecca for thousands when the Gold Cup Regatta was staged on Monday. Parks and roadside tables were jammed. Wellington, the Sandbanks, the Outlet had heavy quotas of people. Country resorts fed twice their customary weekend clientele.

The perfect weather and open highways caused several motorists to "step on it", much to their regret and inconvenience. City police were on the alert for speedsters and as a result several were apprehended and some charged with careless driving.

Police Inspector Hayes said today that the holiday was a near-perfect one from a police angle. There were no accidents in the city and the populace was well behaved over the long weekend.

"The only trouble we had," the inspector said, "was that arising from motorists who ignored the speed laws. And a lot of them are sorry now with less cash and more wisdom."

Charges of Robbery With Violence Face Three Belleville Men Following Fracas Near Campbellford

Campbellford, Aug. 8 (Special)—Three men are in custody in Cobourg following a fracas about half way between Hoard's Station and Campbellford on the Stirling Highway, Thursday night when Nichols Syopatal, an employee of a shoe repair shop in Belleville, was beaten and robbed of about $160 by three men.

The three being held are, Ronald Elliott of Belleville, Garth Badgley of Cannifton and Howard Sandford of Belleville. The three are charged with robbery with violence.

According to police, the trio invited Syopatal to go for a ride with them. Driving in the country it is alleged they assaulted Syopatal and left him beaten and bruised in a ditch.

Wanted Ride to Belleville

Auctioneer Ray Williams was driving to Campbellford to meet the 10 o'clock train, when three men stepped out in front of his car, and wanted him to drive them to Belleville. Williams refused, and a little further down the road noticed another man staggering and apparently in a dazed condition. Williams did not stop, but hurried to Campbellford and notified Chief George H. Hardy, who in turn notified the Belleville detachment of the O.P.P.

Chief Hardy then telephoned a store in Hoard's Station to get further information, and was informed that O.P.P. Constable Ray Johnson in company with his father Frank Johnson, had just left the store for Stirling. He phoned Stirling and had the Johnson car stopped. After receiving message, Constable Johnson retraced his path, stopping each car he met, and investigating it, until he finally came to a Campbellford taxi with the three men he was looking for in the back seat. After questioning the men, he arrested them and took them to Campbellford, where they were lodged in gaol over night.

Chief Hardy, together with Johnson and Constable Christie of Brighton searched the area for the man the three thugs had beaten, but after several hours had to give up the search.

Victim Identified

Early Friday morning, an unidentified motorist picked up the man, who turned out to be Nicholas Syopatal of Belleville, and took him to a store, where police were notified.

Syopatal, who was taken to Belleville hospital was reported to be in "fair" condition today, and as near as the police can establish, he was robbed of about $160.

Constable Don Erskin, of the Brighton Detachment O.P.P. removed the three men to gaol in Cobourg on Friday, where they will await trial on charges of robbery with violence.

Chronic Mental Patients Will be Housed at Cobourg

Guelph, Aug. 8 (CP) —Reform Minister Hamilton said in an interview Monday that the Rowe Home at Cobourg, Ont., will be used as a home for convalescent or chronic mental patients.

Built at a cost of $300,000 in 1909 as a summer home for a wealthy Pittsburgh family, the home was expropriated two years ago by the Ontario government for $43,000.

Mr. Hamilton said the government originally intended to use the three-storey building as a home for backward girls. However, the building was found to be more suited for a mental patient's home.

L.E. McLean and Corbin Lock Rink Repeat Winners of Corbin Gold Cup Trophy

It is said that lightning seldom strikes twice in the same place but the Corbin Lock bowling team, including Orlo Smith, Gordon Edwards, Howard Hanton and L. E. McLean won the Corbin Gold Cup at the Civic Holliday tournament at the Bowling Greens and repeated their success of last year. The teams won on their merits and included in their game winning streak were Harry Williams of Port Hope, whom they defeated in the first game 25-9, Morley Galt of Kingston, whom they trimmed 23-8 in the second game and Jim Fraser of Niagara Falls, whom they took into camp in the third contest 17-9.

The day was ideal for bowling and the 54 rinks entered enjoyed every minute of the tournament. Some excellent bowling was witnessed on the keen, fast greens, that were provided by Jack Smith, greenskeeper at the club. The bowlers were welcomed to the city by His Worship, Mayor H. J. Allin in a fitting tribute to the efforts of the committee in charge of the affair and hoped for all an enjoyable time in the "Friendly City."

During the day, the visitors from other cities along with residents of this city graced the lawns and watched the progress of the games. Cliff Argue, general chairman of the committee, kept the games rolling at a rapid pace and the tournament was concluded shortly after the midnight hour.

One of Season's Largest Crowds Sees Chevrolets Lose 5-1 To Centre Island Softball Squad

Trenton (Special) — When Trenton fans think they are sure to see a top-flight brand of softball, they fill the bleachers at Bayshore Park —otherwise they are just not interested.

The truth of this statement was proved last night when one of the largest crowds of the season packed the stands to see Trenton Chevrolets defeated 5 to 1 by Joe McCauley's Centre Islanders.

Currently setting the pace with a comfortable lead in the Trent Valley League, the Chevrolets were no easy pushovers for the Toronto fastball squad but the sinking pitches of Frank Mazza stalled them from the start. Mazza held the Chevrolets plus Buck Stacey, Barney McColl, Joe Semaine and Frank Thompson to three hits in the nine inning stretch while fanning 13 and walking three.

Using gloves did not help the Centre Island crew as they muffed four while the mitless Weesemen only missed two drives. The fastball artists from the Queen City picked up seven hits off two Trenton hurlers. Frank Thompson handled the Chevrolet mound duties for five innings and gave up four hits, including a double by MacDowell in the fourth. Thompson struck out seven and walked four. In the strikeout department the two teams were equally strong, as Harry Farr fired six third strikes past Toronto hitters in his four inning tour on the Chevrolet hill. Farr was tagged for three singles and walked three.

Clever base running by Ivan Istead in the sixth coupled with three errors by Joe McCauley's boys spoiled Mazza's shutout. Istead was safe at first on an error by third baseman Armstrong, then went to second on another error as he rattled the visiting Torontonians and Armstrong booted another throw enabling Istead to tag up at third. Lou Istead drove in his brother with a solid single to mark the beginning and the end of Trenton's scoring.

Centre Island first baseman Pyne was the only visiting player who racked up two hits, a pair of singles, tagging Thompson and Farr for one each. Ernie Curtis started what looked like a Chevrolet rally in the fourth, as he slammed a sizzler that was too hot for the Centre Island shortstop. However, Curtis was forced out at second on a fielder's choice and the next two Trenton hitters struck out.

Chevrolet's other single was collected by pitcher Thompson who switched from the right side of the plate to the left when he came to bat in the fifth and hit safely. In the seventh, Norm McCue sent in two pinch hitters, Barney McColl and Joe Semaine but even these two hefty hitters failed to spark the Chevrolets as Mazza proved too good for them.

Grandstand umpires were quite numerous right behind home plate and they were not the least bit reluctant in telling the plate umpire, Al Steenburg, how they thought he should be calling the balls and strikes. Chevrolet catcher Whitley spurred the fans to greater vocal efforts as he clowned on every pitch that Steenburg failed to call a strike. The small crowds at Bayshore Park all season have been fairly easy on the umpires but last night's crowd went all out to get the umpire's goat. However, the fickle fans gave two Toronto players a rough ride when they mildly protested the "ump's" decisions.

Apple Thrown By Boy Hits Driver in Eye

Trenton — (Special)—An apple thrown by a six-year-old Queen Street boy almost caused a car accident Thursday evening when it went through the open window of a passing automobile and struck the driver in the eye.

Captain D. J. Baldwin, USAF, 158 McLennan Ave., was driving south on Joseph Street about 5 p.m. Thursday evening. As he was passing a group of young boys who were throwing apples at each other, one of the boys threw an apple that went through the car window.

It was at first feared that Captain Baldwin would lose the sight of his eye but later reports indicate that the injury is not as serious as it appeared at first.

Captain Baldwin is from Kelly Field, Texas, and has been stationed at RCAF Station Trenton since last September.

No Serious Accidents

Trenton — (Special) — There were no injuries and only a few minor car accidents in Trenton over the long holiday weekend.

Trenton Edges Campbellford 5-4 To Retain Lead

Trenton — (Special) — Behind the five hit pitching of Harry Farr, Trenton Chevrolets protected their two game lead in the Trent Valley league by edging Campbellford 5 to 4 in Campbellford Friday night.

Campbellford opened the scoring with two runs in the second but Trenton staged a three run comeback in the third and added two more in the fifth. Campbellford was held scoreless from the second until the eighth frame when they picked up two runs to cut Trenton's lead.

Both teams pulled off a double play in the first inning. With runners on first and second and one away, Joe Scott hit a short grounder to third baseman Fralick of Campbellford who made one step backwards to touch third, then fired to first for the second out. Trenton matched Campbellford's effort in their half of the first. Campbellford short stop Bibby bunted safely with one away. Catcher Joe Scott dropped a third strike that fanned McCoun and Bibby broke for second on the automatic out, but was tagged easily by Gord Flynn on the third throw to second.

In holding Campbellford to five hits, Farr struck out nine and walked five. McComb went the route for Campbellford, yielding 11 hits while fanning six and giving up four free trips to first.

Joe Scott led the Chevrolets at the plate with a double and two singles. Lou Carswell and Ivan Istead also collected a pair of singles. Bibby and Fralick were Campbellford's best hitters with two singles.

THE DRIVE TO REDUCE HIGHWAY ACCIDENTS

An intensified campaign to halt the mounting number of highway accidents, injuries and fatalities is now being carried on by the Ontario Provincial Police. Black and white police cruisers with their roof top aerials can be easily spotted by alert motorists and in a determined effort to enforce the speed limits, "plainclothes" highway patrols are being used. Police cars are now plain black or other color with the aerial on the side, making it difficult to distinguish them from other cars.

As might be expected, this move is having some success, as the police are catching hundreds of speeders. However, heavy footed accelerator pushers are not the only drivers who are highway hazards. Running them a close second are the drivers of ancient jalopies that are nothing more than mobile accident traps.

Lurching along at a horse and buggy pace, these fugitives from the junk yard are soon leading a slow-moving parade of impatient motorists. Drivers of old cars are not the only ones who snarl up traffic either, because the driver of a late model car who creeps along can do the same thing. The cars that keep piling up behind in these hare and tortoise processions often nose out of line to pick up a few car lengths by passing "the fellow up ahead."

Immediately the chances of an accident occurring increase sharply. After weaving through traffic for several hours, a driver's patience is at a low ebb and it is a well-known fact that fatigue affects a person's judgment and skill. When two such lines of traffic are passing each other, the situation is highly explosive and the only ingredient necessary for a bone shattering crash is for an over eager driver to swing out of line — which happens all too often.

It can be readily seen, that on main traffic arteries, the driver who pokes along at 30 miles an hour is almost as much an accident hazard as the speed merchant who keeps an eye open for "the cops" and pushes the speedometer up to 60 or more. In order to deal with both aspects of this problem at the same time, the possibility of enforcing a minimum speed limit would seem to be worthwhile investigating, especially on busy highways.

NIGHT SHIRTS

There is no proof of the coincidence that our national troubles began to multiply about the time many citizens gave up wearing night shirts. It may be that these new-fangled pants and jackets which folks call pyjamas had nothing to do with the progressive debilitation that has marked our social and economic order for the last generation. We understand now that it is quite the fashion in some high-society circles to wear lounging pyjamas when one entertains informally.

But on zeroish winter nights, when the wind is howling around the northeast corner of the farmhouse, the countryman wants his old-fashioned, floor-length flannelette nightshirt. When you jump into bed in a pair of pyjamas you have nothing to wrap around your toes while the bed warms up. In a long flannel nightshirt a man can sort of twist his toes into a roll on the flannel and exist through those first difficult five minutes.

Probably the modern generation would not feel properly dressed to entertain in nightshirts; but a man who has said hello to half a century of living on a northern farm doesn't figure on doing much entertaining in his sleeping attire. When he goes to bed, he wants to be comfortable, and a nightshirt offers definite advantages. — Wall Street Journal, New York.

THE KING'S ENGLISH

Apparently it isn't the King's English any more. Even the King cannot understand the ministers and their underlings who are supposed to be acting on his behalf.

The other day His Majesty visited a fair in Cornwall. At the Ministry of Agriculture exhibit a dark-haired girl was presented to the King. The ministry official in charge remarked to His Majesty that the girl was "Rodent operator for Cornwall." "Rodent operator," said the King, "what's that?" He was told that it was the new and official name for rat catcher. The King sighed and shook his head, "Who thought that one up?"

Even the King cannot understand the gobbledegook that passes for official English. And he would have just as much trouble with the Canadian version as he obviously has with the British. — Winnipeg Tribune.

FOOT RACES AND AGE

In the news the other day was the story of a 43-year-old man who collapsed and died soon after taking part in a foot race. A day later a news item came from Youngstown, Alta., where civil servants held a picnic. The 25-yard dash open for men 70 years and over was won by Frank LaRock. He is 93 years of age.

Medical men keep warning us that strenuous exercise by those not accustomed to it places a strain on the heart. One could come to the conclusion that Mr. LaRock has been hustling all his life. — Fort William Times-Journal.

Rain or shine, or bitter cold,
Through the dawn's unbroken snow
Comes a youngster to the old
With the news they wait to know.

Surgeon, lawyer, holy man,
Filled with wisdom of the years.
Ask them all how they began
Their illustrious careers.
Many of them will reply:
"The esteem I now enjoy
Started years ago, when I
Was a paper carrier-boy."

Time flies swiftly. At the door,
He who drops your paper down
May in just a few years more
Be a man of great renown.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE UNEXPECTED

History is filled with stories of those who did unusual and heroic things—unexpectedy. They followed no set formula, but boldly exercised their courage and originality. To such we owe endless gratitude for inventions, discovveries and great moral and spiritual progress.

How little did anyone dream—in the days of candle light—that some day there would be such a thing as the electric light? Yet, perhaps at that very time, there was an Edison dreaming it out, who was to triumph with the idea! I once went through the laboratory of the great Edison and his only living assistant, at that time, spent hours telling me of Edison and showing me dozens of his inventions—all of them unexpected triumphs.

People who read observe, and think things out for themselves, are forever doing the unexpected. It took years for the critics to acclaim such artists as Legros, Millet; Corot, and Manet. They didn't paint the expected, but concentrated on art that they believed the public ought to know about. Now the public does, and thanks them for their heritage, though they are not now here to receive the applause due them.

Pioneers, however, rarely get adequate appreciation in life. Immediate acclaim goes to the ones who do the usual and have no vision for permanence.

I have a shelf of books by an English author every one of which I have read with enthusiasm and delight. Not because they are great books, but because every one of them seem to deal with the unexpected. No two of this writer's books are the same. Too many writers create one good book and then follow it with others that you wouldn't guess belonged to the same family.

Many an obscure worker in an organization has risen rapidly to high responsibility merely because he kept doing the unexpected, rather than the usual, and unimaginative The chap with ideas and suggestions for the betterment of the business, that weren't asked for, or ever expected! The discovery of this Western World was an unexpected affair!

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

THE SADDEST ST ORY EVER TOLD

A couple of weekends ago, the missus and I were driving up to the country in our '41 gas buggy when it stalled on a hill outside of Tarrytown and the radiator began to boil up like a miniature Bikini.

"Don't you think it's time we got a new car," asked Eleanor, "or should we wait until the axles fall off?"

The following Monday, primped, preened and pomaded I walked into the Rolls Royce agency.

Yes, you read it right— the Rolls Royce agency! And before you throw the soapbox at me, let me explain.

Ever since I was knee-high to the Allen Street gutter, I've yenned, above all else, to own one of these regal runabouts. Somehow, for reasons best left to psychiatrists, I've never been able to pass one without picturing myself in its lush, plush confines, daintily holding the speaking tube with lifted pinky and giving the hoi polloi the Marie Antoinette treatment. Since I have to buy a car," I said to myself, "it might as well be the luxurious lizzie I've always dreamed about, even if it means hocking a couple of insurance policies."

The salesman, a natty little man whose accent you could cut with a crumpet, let me inspect one of the British beauties.

"Would you like to see how it runs?" he said. "I'll have one of our men drive you."

As I climbed in, I could feel my blood blueing up.

"We'll go down Broadway," said the chauffeur, "and you can see how it performs in traffic.'

A shudder ran through me. There's a red light on 51st Street and I knew that if this bejabbers buggy stopped in front of Lindy's the songwriters and vaudeville agents were a cinch to come running out and pelt me with pastrami sandwiches.

"They're digging up the street on Times Square," I said.

"How about the East River Drive?" said the chauffeur. "We can cut across Delancey Street and come up the West Side Highway."

My shudder turned into a quake. Somewhere on the East Side I figured to be spotted by an old poolroom pal, and I envisioned the words, "You stink, Jack," being chalked on the elegant fenders. Even a rock through the windshield was a distinct possibility.

"Ride around Central Park," I said. "It's nice this time of the year."

As I settled back into the form fitting upholstery, I began to do some hard thinking and the more I thought about it the more I realized that if I bought me a Rolls Royce there was literally no place I could go with it in this town. If Eleanor and I got out of it in front of a theatre on opening night, the mob we know would split their sides laughing, and the columns next day would be asking whether Lord and Lady Rose were finding it hard to buy petrol instead of gas.

The only thing on the credit side was that if I owned a Rolls I'd be sure to get plenty of exercise—I'd never have the courage to park it less than ten blocks from my usual hangouts.

"It's too much automobile for me," I said to the salesman when we pulled in. "Besides I just remembered—I get carsick."

An hour later I had made a down payment on one of the standard Detroit jobs, and I guess the moral of the story is that a hepcat may look at a king, but he'd better not try to ride around like one.

Attitude Changed On Rearming of Western Germany

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

There could be no more startling indication of the dangers of our time than the growing sentiment among the democracies for the rearming of western Germany to help meet the red menace.

That's an amazing change of attitude—which France, for one, thus far disapproves—towards a defeated nation which has been condemned to punishment for twice plunging the world into war.

It's strange but understandable for the consensus of military experts is that without the support of this former keystone of central Europe the Western Allies would face a grim task in event of another all-out clash at arms.

Only five years ago the victorious allies declared grimly that Germany never again would be permitted to rearm and would be occupied militarily to ensure this. As a matter of fact as recently as June 7, State Secretary Dean Acheson ruled out the rearming of Western Germany (favored by some military men) as a means of reinforcing the defenses of the west.

Demands Made

Last week, however, bipartisan demands were made in the United States Congress for arming Germans and Japanese to defend themselves. And in Frankfurt, Germany, nearly all Western military men, and most officials agree that Europe can't be defended against the Soviet Union without the arming of Western Germany.

Why this sudden change? Well, Western military men and statesmen have reluctantly faced the fact that Russia—with her satellites—is much better prepared for war than are the Western Democracies. In short, if war should break out now, the Soviet undoubtedly would have enough striking power to reach the English Channel.

These circumstances, belatedly admitted by the western powers, have sent them scurrying to put their military houses in order. Britain, hard hit as she is economically, is grimly turning to strengthening her striking power. France yesterday pledged herself to a three-year rearmament program to help guard against red assault. And the other countries of the Atlantic Pact are falling in line.

Since Western Germany is the barrier between the Soviet bloc and the democracies, the need of her rearmament is obvious from the viewpoint of the latter. She has vast resources in coal and iron in the industrial Ruhr. And her soldiers rank among the world's best.

Reds Probably Pleased

It would be interesting if one could lift the roof off the Kremlin in Moscow and discover how the Muscovite leaders view this situation. One suspects that they regard it complacently and perhaps even with pleasure.

By forcing the Western Allies to rearm, Russia is putting a heavy economic pressure on countries already badly hit by the last war. In short, the communists stand to gain even though they sit tight.

However, while the western bloc is well aware of this mad twist of fate, it is bound to weigh carefully the idea of reversing itself and rearming the country which it swore to keep under wraps.

WOMEN CHEER

Berlin, Aug. 8 — (Reuters) — Women cheered Robert Havemann, Russian-zone atomic research professor, when he left a West Berlin court yesterday, a charge against him dismissed. He was held in a police raid on an American sector coffee-house and charged with holding an unlicensed political meeting.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

IT'S UP TO US

"How beautifully you play, Charles," certain of us said to a friend recently who had entertained us through the evening with his rare musical gifts. "It's strange that the piano never sounds that way when any of us try to play it." And our musician friend smiled quietly and said, "The tone is there, all right, if you bring it out."

Yes, the instrument which one person tries to play, to the distraction of everyone in the household, is precisely the same instrument from which the artist draws rapturous melodies. The unskilled player uses it to bring forth heavenly melodies but it is the same piano.

How aptly this situation applies to the way we so often use life's opportunities. Trouble comes to two people, making one bitter and the other better. Pain drives one person to cynicism and another person to sainthood. Money ruins some people and makes philanthropists and world-benefactors out of others.

The quality of music depends not primarily upon the instrument but upon the artist. Success or triumph depends not so much upon our opportunities as upon ourselves.

P D IS SHORT FOR RHEUMATIZ

Chronic rheumatism is not a specific ailment but just a general name for various kinds of joint trouble of gradual onset and long duration.

The same explanation applies to arthritis. The word arthritis means joint inflammation, but no particular type or kind of trouble. In short "arthritis" is a $3.50 name for the more familiar $0.98 rheumatiz, so far as diagnosis or treatment goes. And it goes without saying that any one who purports to have a specific remedy for arthritis or rheumatiz is either a well-meaning ignoramus or a blankety-blanked crook. You pay your money (and time) and take your choice.

I dismiss without much ceremony the quaint notion that "exposure" to cold or damp has anything to do with joint disability. If you are so steeped in almanac lore that you think you know better than I do about such things you may go on thinking so—this is a free country.

Ditto for the concept of "gout" and gouty arthritis." The theory that retention, excessive intake, or excessive production of uric acid accounts for acute and/or chronic joint trouble was evolved long before we learned that the blood and tissues of a healthy person contain a certain amount of uric acid. Since we have had the means to measure precisely the amount of uric acid present in the blood we have been constrained to relinquish this fine old theory, for too often the patient with alleged gout shows a normal level of uric acid in the blood. This accounts for the great rarity of the diagnosis today. It is now pretty well recognized that deposits of mono-sodium urate in the tissues, the so-called "tophi" on which the old timers based the diagnosis, have no particular significance—a good many persons have such "tophi" but no history of "gout" or similar joint trouble. By the same token, an excess of uric acid in the blood is a finding in various conditions other than joint trouble. Uric acid is an intermediary product of the oxidation, combustion, utilization or metabolism of nitrogenous food material of the purine type—such foods as liver, kidneys, sweetbreads, brains, anchovies, sardines, beans, peas, lentils, mushrooms, etc. Mind, though, this does not apply to the question of the diet in cases of urinary stone.

It was probably relinquishment of the uric acid theory that made so many doctors susceptible to the idea of "alkalizing" the blood and tissues of the patient with joint trouble. Plying patients with soda and other alkalies with a vague hope of neutralizing "acid wastes" or "eliminating" them was popular for a time among medical practitioners. From newer knowledge of physiology, acquired through animal experimentation and then confirmed by tests on volunteer human subjects, we have recently discovered that this indiscriminate "alkalizing" may produce distaste for food, particularly for milk, nausea, vomiting, nervousness, headache, dizziness, light-headedness and even tetany as commonly manifested in painful cramps in the limbs at night.

In these spiels about rheumatiz I have hardly alluded to infection, that is, invasion of the joint tissues by disease germs, because such involvement of a joint or joints is generally only an incident. complication or consequence of gonorrhea, syphilis or tuberculosis and is so recognized.

The question of focal infection is seldom raised today. Too many thousands of victims of blind application of the principle of focal infection suffered the loss of tonsils, teeth and in some instances life itself, in the vain hope of curing the rheumatiz, back in the days when the "clinic" charlatans were taking them out wholesale. I do not mean to deny the occurrence of focal infection. I do say it requires deliberate study and the best judgment of doctor and perhaps dentist in consultation to decide whether a patient with rheumatiz should submit to surgical removal of tonsil or tooth as the probable source of the joint trouble. Any physician or dentist who arbitrarily advises, orders or acquiesces in the removal of all or many teeth that are serving for even partial mastication should be shot at sunrise.

All of this harangue is leading up to the view which I predict will supersede the old concepts of rheumatiz, namely, that it is in most instances an earlier or later stage of physical degeneration. The talks to follow will familiarize readers with the nature, manifestations, causes and prevention of physcial degeneration —P D, that is, Short for rheumatiz.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Whenever I come back by car over the United States border, I usually smuggle home two or three packages of lovely crisp American soda biscuits.

This morning I was helping an American friend pack up his car to return home, and on the window ledge at the back of the car, what did I see?

"Whenever I go home from Canada," said the American, "I always smuggle home two or three packages of lovely crisp Canadian soda biscuits."

The number of things an American can buy in Canada to take home from a tourist holiday is pretty small. The average tourist goes home with anything from $100 to $500 cash in his wallet, which he carried just in case.

"Except for Hudson's Bay blankets, miniature totem poles, and birch bark canoes a foot long, what else have you got for me to take home?"

I reminded him of English china. "Yes," he said "but I mean Canadian."

In the publishing field, there is immense scope for taking off some of those homing dollars. A finely illustrated book on the game fish of Canada, with color plates, written by competent Canadian university authorities, would be a best seller. The same is true of a book on Canadian mammals. A great deal of the scenic publications on Canada available to tourists are done by that type of enthusiastic amateur in the publishing field who has get rich-quick notions. Such publications, done by cold experts in the photography and writing field, who expects to get rich slowly, should have a sale to Americans that would spread over several years.

There is a gimcrack quality in much of Canada's tourist setup, both in service as well as in the availability of souvenir merchandise, which is not warranted by the enormous amount of cash the Americans bring over every year.

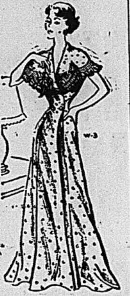
Nylon Crepe Negligee



For warm weather wear

By VERA WINSTON

DOTTED sheer nylon crepe is used for a cool-looking negligee that is easy to launder. The cape collar does nice duty as sleeve coverage, and it is bordered by a pin-tucked band edged with white lace. There are double buttons at the waist with lots of lap-over on the flared skirt. The color scheme is white dots on gray. It is a good choice for vacation use or at home as long as the warmish weather hold out.

WEDDINGS

BARRETT—MULLINS

At St. Michael's Rectory, Belleville, on Saturday, July 29, by the Rev. Father Baker, Teresa Mae Mullins, daughter of Mr. Con Mullins and the late Mrs. Mullins, was united in marriage to George Cyril Barrett, son of Mrs. Harry Barrett, of Hamilton and the late Mr. Barrett.

The bride wore a smart cocoa brown taffeta suit, with brown accessories and corsage of roses.

Mrs. John McHugh was her sister's matron of honor, and wore a biscuit shade dress with accessories to match and corsage of sweetpeas.

Mr. John McHugh was groomsman.

FOLEY—GORSLINE

A pretty mid-Summer wedding was solemnized at Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, on Saturday, August 5, at 11 a.m., by the Rev. F. R. Harback, pastor of the church, when Dorothy Jean Gorsline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald C. Gorsline, of Belleville, was united in marriage to Franklin Henry Foley, of Belleville, son of Mrs. F. B. Foley, also of Belleville, and the late Mr. F. B. Foley. The chancel was beautifully decorated with pink and white gladioli for the occasion.

Mrs. M. P. Duff, church organist, provided the wedding music, and Miss Beverly Buck, soloist, sang before the ceremony, "The Lord's Prayer", and during the signing of the register, "Because".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in her white, imported bridal gown of French Chantilly lace over taffeta, featuring a ballerina skirt and fitted bodice with three-quarter length sleeves. She wore a Dutch hat of matching lace, and carried a hand bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis.

Mrs. Bruce Bishop, of Belleville, attended the bride, gowned in a street length dress of black lace over grey satin with matching black lace hat. She carried a hand bouquet of orchid tinted gladioli petals centred by pink Rapture roses.

Mr. James Graham, of Belleville, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Donald Gorsline, brother of the bride, and Mr. Jack H. Sills, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, both of Belleville.

Following the reception, which was held in the church parlors, where the bride's mother, gowned in sea foam green faille with black accessories, and corsage of mauve orchids, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore forest grey faille with black accessories, and corsage of mauve orchids, received the many guests, the young couple left for a honeymoon trip to Lake Placid, Boston, Cape Cod and other points in the United States. The bride chose a white linen ensemble with navy accessories, and corsage of pink Cabbage roses. They will reside in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from London, Fort Eric, Essex, Napanee and Picton, Ont.

Previous to the wedding the bride was tendered a miscellaneous shower sponsored by Mrs. Bruce Bishop and Mrs. Stanley Wiggins, at the latter's home. A delightful trousseau tea was also given in the bride's honor by the bride's mother, on Wednesday of last week.

BEAUTY

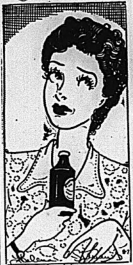
By HELEN JAMIESON

Care of white hair

When your silken crown becomes silvered it is because its color element is disappearing. Each hair is like a transparent tube. Inside it are tiny cells that determine the color— black, brown, auburn or golden.

A hair turns grey first at the roots. It is as if the pigment fluid had been turned off. A shaft can be white half the length, dark the other half.

Prematurely white hair is often inherited. It may be beautifully becoming, make a person appear distinguished and lovely, yet few women welcome it because it suggests more birthdays than one has experienced. Young women with snowy tresses complain that they are often classed with older women. They are justified in doing a little bawling about the matter.



Distributed by King Features Syndicate

Perhaps you are tempted to flirt with hair dye.

Like blonde locks, white ones call for the most fastidious care. Only the blandest soaps should be used for shampooing and, if in cake form, they should be melted. At the present time we have more offerings in the way of hair cleansers than ever before, some for dry hair, some for oily. Cream shampoos are popular and with good reason; they are more easily removed than lather.

If you are white-topped sister, begin your shampoo with a rousing brushing to remove surface dust. Use the bath spray with a strong current of water. Dip your fingers into the shampoo cream, bringing out a scant tablespoonful of the fragrant emollient. Friction it well into your scalp. It will foam up like egg white. Keep adding warm water, keep rubbing briskly. Don't be stingy with elbow grease. A thorough shampoo is a form of scalp treatment.

Use the spray again, apply more of the shampoo medium, before the final rinsing. There is no such thing as spending too much time on a head washing. You are dealing with a combination of atmospheric dust, sebaceous oil and other scalp debris. All that is not easily removed.

Careless shampooing means that white locks may carry yellow streaks; also, unless the hair is thoroughly clean, the permanent wave will expire before its time. That happens especially if soap remains on the shafts. These deposits coat the hair so that the springy coil quality disappears.

Perhaps you are tempted now and then to flirt with a hair dye. It is well to know what you would be in for. The first application does not end the project. The hair grows to the extent of half an inch every two or three months, and the new growth must be touched up.

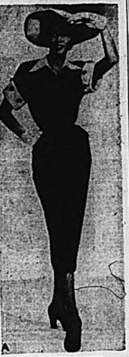
Smart Sheer



By ALICE ALDEN

SHEER delight are those town-mannered sheers, ideal for a busy day in the city. And they are smart enough, topped by a whopping big hat, to star for an informal evening of dining and dancing or a session of music under the stars. Paul Parnes comes through with a beauty, cut on dart-slim lines, and tucked in sleek, vertical ripples. Hip-curving pockets are outlined with self-welting and the narrow look is defined with a sharp line of welting to simulate a neck-to-hemline closing. Gold knob buttons anchor and edge the wide pique cuffs.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking?

Deep freezers for home use hardly need recommending at this date. More and more they are becoming a normal household convenience.

The labor of shopping and buying meat for each meal can be condensed into a single job every two or three months.

People who freeze meat for home consumption should know how to properly wrap food to keep it from drying. Studies made by L. J. Bratzler of Michigan State College showed that hamburgers wrapped in ordinary brown paper lost nearuy 40 per cent during 14 months at zero temperature.

With other wrappers, however, cellophane and aluminum foil, the meat showed no shrinkage, and in some cases showed even a slight increase in weight.

A fresh or frozen 3 pound cut of beef rump makes a juicy pot roast. A frozen cut can be cooked without any thawing. You will need two spoons to turn the frozen meat during browning since a meat fork cannot penetrate the frozen meat.

Even though it is summer, your kitchen should not become excessively hot from cooking a pot roast. The pot is covered and the meat is always simmered over a low flame.

Rump Pot Roast, Horseradish Sauce, Serves 6-8

Melt fat to a depth of 1-4 inch in a heavy saucepan or Dutch oven. Put the piece of meat in the pan and brown slowly but thoroughly on all sides. Season the meat with 2 teaspoon salt while browning. When completely browned, remove the meat and throw off the accumulated charred fat.

Add 2 tablespoons clean fat. Add 1 large onion sliced, 1 smashed and chopped clove of garlic, and simmer until onion turns yellow. Add 2 tablespoons flour, mixing well. Do not brown flour.

Add 1 can of hot undiluted consomme, and the same amount of hot water. Stir well. Add 1-2 cup tomato juice and 3 large sprigs of parsley.

Return meat to pan. Bring liquid to a boil. Reduce flame so that liquid merely simmers. Cover and cook until meat is tender, about 2 1-2 hours. Cooking time will depend on quality of meat.

Remove meat from pan. Skim off all fat from surface of liquid. Strain liquid. Add gravy color if desired. Add 1-4 cup prepared horseradish, 1-4 teaspoon worcestershire sauce, and salt and pepper to taste.

Carve meat against the grain. Pour hot horseradish sauce over meat on serving platter.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A wife at the end of her patience

"How tolerant should a wife be with an impossible husband?" asks one wife who feels that she has reached the end of her own tolerance.

Her story is that at 21 she was left a widow with a small daughter. At 24 she remarried. That was 18 years ago, and she has been in trouble ever since.

For the second husband turned out to be a heavy drinker, a hypocrite, and a tightwad. Topping it all, he appears to have as mean a disposition and as unattractive a personality as can possibly be imagined.

In the 18 years that they have been married, he has left her many times. Each time he regretted it and asked her to take him back, which she did. On the last occasion, she went so far as to get a legal separation from him, which provided that he should pay her 15 dollars a week. He never paid a penny for six months, and then came around again, begging once more for another chance. And once more she gave it to him.

Naturally, having always been able to talk her into forgiving him, he saw no reason to change his ways, except for a short period immediately following this reconciliation. So now the war is on again, and she feels she can't stand it any longer.

"I have found out that he talks about me behind my back," she writes, "and tells the neighbors that he only came back to me because he didn't want to go to jail for not paying what the court ordered him to. He brags to me about the good times he had while he was away from ~~me,~~ makes fun of me in front of my grandchildren and talks insultingly about me to my own daughter and son-in-law.

"I have all the worry about meeting bills, and I must manage on what he gives me each week, no matter how many extras he wants. He loves to invite people for big meals and show off, and always wants the best of everything. Then, every so often, he wants to know what I have saved for his old age. To anyone outside his home he is grand, and will give away anything. He even cut the cord off one of our lamps, when someone asked him for a piece of wire. I can't seem to make him come down to earth and face facts."

This wife is only 42 years old. On various occasions in the past she has gone to work when the state of the family finances indicated it would be wise. Her only child is married, so she has really nothing to tie her down.

The first thing I would advise, then, when she asks: "What should I do about this situation?" is that she find herself another job. This will have three advantages: it will put her in a better financial position; it will give her something new in which to be interested, so that she will have something to think about besides her troubles; and it will show her husband more plainly than any words of hers can do that she is perfectly able to get along without him at any time.

Presumably, in her 18 years of constant trouble, there have been acrimonious arguments between the two of them. No doubt she has told him over and over again that she would be better off without him. Her cue at present, as I see it, would be to stop all arguments, say nothing more about anything, but simply let her actions make it clear that she has the ability and the independence to look out for herself. This may wake him up as nothing else has been able to do. But if not, she will at least be in a better position to make other plans.

Hollywood Pajamas

By PRUNELLA WOOD

VERA-ELLEN is the model, showing us her new green and white tie silk lounging pajamas, which MGM has her wearing in Three Little Words. We like the narrow legs, the white grosgrain sash belt; we like, too, the three-quarter length white bengaline tunic coat which is part of the ensemble, but not shown here.

Together or separately, they are good wardrobe items for the likes of you and me who never were starred by MGM.

GOOD MANNERS

Divorcee wishes to send engraved invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am in a dilemma about sending engraved invitations for my second marriage. At my first marriage I was twenty, the bridegroom was in the Army, and we had a small wedding at home, with no invitations sent. The divorce was granted to me five years later in my favor. There were no children involved. For this wedding now, my mother and I are planning a very small church wedding and reception, with close relatives and intimate friends invited. But my husband-to-be (this is his first marriage) has a long list of names of people he would like invited, and for his sake I would like to send engraved invitations. Am I absolutely wrong in thinking this might be permissible?

2. Would you also please tell us the hours a man would correctly wear a cutaway at a wedding, and the hours he would wear 'tails'?

M. M.

1. Engraved invitations to the wedding of a bride who is a divorcee are rarely sent. However in the circumstances you state . . . that you were very young when you first married, and, most importantly, that the divorce was granted in your favor. . . if you so particularly want to send engraved invitations your parents may send them in this form:

Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Smith request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Mary Smith Martin to
etc. etc.

2. At a formal or semi-formal daytime wedding. . . at any hour of the day to six o'clock . . .the groom, best man, and ushers correctly wear cutaways coats, dark striped trousers, and appropriate accessories. At a formal evening wedding . . . at any hour after six o'clock, at the very earliest, formal evening attire ('tails') is correct.

Water glass shouldn't be used as fingerbowl

Dear Mrs. Bleeckman:

When fingerbowls are not served, is it ever proper to use your water glass as a fingerbowl after you finish your meal? I've occasionally seen this done in restaurants, and when it's done very carefully I don't think it looks as bad as it sounds What about this?

Bill H.

Well, it's not proper . . . even if it's done "with a delicate air"! There are practical alternatives . . . . if the fingers need wiping, they can be wiped on the napkin, and if they need washing, they can be washed in the washroom.

To announce the engagement even though wedding quite far off?

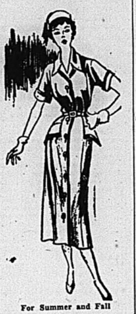
Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We have just become engaged, and have told only our families. We cannot be married for quite a few months. Do you advise us to announce our engagement now, or wait until nearer the time when we can be married? My parents say they are inclined to think that it might be better to announce the engagement now. . . but I haven't asked my fiance what his parents' point of view is.

Myra L.

I agree with your parents that it would be better to announce the engagement now, if you and your fiance will be able to see each other a great deal during these months before you can plan to be married. This announcement makes the relationship clear, and would, I think, be more sensible and practical all around.

Crepe Classic



For Summer and Fall

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

HERE'S a dress that is prepared to go through late Summer into Fall in briskly smart fashion. It is of gray crepe cut on classic lines, its simplicity softened by the deeper toned gray satin trimming on the revers and extending all the way down the front. The trim is repeated at the cuffs and the pocket flaps. The dress is buttoned from neck to hem.

Fashion Flashes

FASHION IS IN the black this summer, what with all the delightful black clothes for town, not to mention beach togs. Black rayon sheer has been worked into a nice town dress, tucked from the rounded shoulder yoke to hem, and fastened to below the waist with tiny rhinestone buttons.

OFF THE SHELF reserved for household linen and into the clothes closet goes terry cloth. To wear with a black bathing suit, one girl treated herself to a long, boxy beach coat of tangerine yellow terry cloth with matching espadrilles.

ANOTHER OLD friend, voile, has returned and is more in demand than ever. This lovely, delicate cotton is used for a charming little dress in a Paisley print, red, black, orange and green on cream. It has a scoop neck, tied at the shoulders, and a beige calf belt above a full, softly gathered skirt.

COLORFUL clothes are ahead for smart wear next season. A new color, wisteria, is used for a silk satin evening suit, the jacket with a horseshoe neckline that reveals a soft pink lace blouse. The pink lace appears under the winged collar and cuffs of the jacket.

A STEADY GROWTH in demand is seen for the hat that offers a good compromise between the tailored casual and the dressy a sort of softened casual, as it were. Deep velvet velours in a deep loganberry shade is used for a Fall hat made with a draped and tucked cushion brim, and a slightly pointed, but otherwise flat crown. Long pheasant quills add line and interest.

NEW BEAUTY marks Alaska sealskin coats for next Winter. New techniques make the skins very soft and very supple, and added to the new mutations is a rich deep taupe that somehow combines deep brown, gray and black.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Toiletries for the traveller

Will the Pappy pull up in the old family bus, toot the horn, toddle into the house to carry out the luggage? Are you starting out, up hill and down dale, for a holiday spree? Naturally. "Everybody do."

You will have no time to seek professional beauty care, nor will you be inclined to patronize shops about which you are not informed. Like most girls, you are a bit fussy as to the attentions you receive want to be sure that operators are well trained and experienced. So, you'll have to take along your various pulchritude tools and toiletries.

If you are smart—and of course you are—you will keep a list of these so-necessary items pinned inside your suitcase. If you need a nail file, you need it badly; a broken fingernail can drive you goofy. Should there be a stray hair outside the fold of your eyebrow, you won't be able to rest a minute until it is out. And, alas, you left your tweezers at home!

With the dust of the roads drying your skin, you should carry a clean-up cream. You won't enjoy dinner unless you have made yourself a new, fresh face. There are liquid cleansers, sweet-smelling lotions that whisk off atmospheric dust in a hurry. A heavy cream is nice to apply after your bedtime facewashing. Tap it in and keep on adding more; the flesh will lap it up.

Other complexion requirements are the rouge compact, lipstick, powder in a box that won't spill its contents, a cute little brush to use to remove powder from eyebrows and eyelashes. With these you are all set. If brows and lashes aren't dark enough to please your discerning eye, you should include mascara and crayon. Neither one should be black; that color is too great a contrast to the skin. A dark brown is the happy choice.

For your fingernails you will require a thin, flexible steel file for the first shaping, emery boards for a smooth finish of the eaves. Add to these the curved, needle-point scissors to snip off hangnails. Though you may never have had one of these pest in all your life, one will appear if no scissors are at hand. To clean the nails, there is the orangewood stick, to put on the gay polish there is the red veneer; and, of course, you must have a polish remover. You can dispense with cuticle cream; substitute the cream that you apply to your complexion.

Hairbrush, of course, and comb. Never use a brush? We guessed it. You should be made to stand in a corner with your face to the wall, because brushing is essential to the health of the hair and the scalp as well. If you are a curly girl, don't forget the bobby pins to fasten the ringlets after you have moistened your locks and formed the little coils.

Snug Cotton Plaid Sea Suit

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE CAMPBELLS are coming to the seashore, you might say, in this scant and sculptured bathing dress which is made of a cotton Scotch plaid. The model is boned to stay put, and its straps are a mere, detachable whim.

To make its maillot snugness less stark for the beach as separate from the water, there is a short kilt of the same fabric to button around the waistline, provided with deep carryall pockets set in the side pleats and covered by them.

NO RUN ON SHAVING

Cayuga, Ont., Aug. 5 — (CP) — There's no run on razor blades in Haldimand county.

Males of all ages have thrown them away. They're busy growing beards to advertise the 100th anniversary of the southeastern Ontario county's inception.

Three contests are being staged simultaneously — for the best-groomed, most comical, or longest beard. Each county centre has had its regional finale, with the grand champion to be chosen Saturday at Fisherville.

Beeston, England, Aug. 5—(AP)—Dennis Harratt, 27-year-old railway clerk, rode through town today on a gelding horse dressed only in a flowing gold wig and tights. He was Lord Godiva in the town pageant.

None of the village girls could get their mothers' permission to play Lady Godiva so the town fathers gave the part to Dennis.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

MOB IN PARADISE

Wasagaming, Man. — People are funny.

Here is Riding Mountain National Park, more than a thousand square miles of green forest and blue lakes, like a jewel in the hot prairie, inviting r... and relaxation for the weary and escape from the sun.

The people come like pilgrims from many miles away from all parts or Manitoba and Saskatchewan, a steady stream of them all through the summer, their dusty cars queuing under the archways that open on this holiday playground.

And what do they do? I'll tell you what. They cluster in a congealed mass in one tiny, humid corner of these green acres in a kind of commercial Coney Island atmosphere. . . and, as far as anybody knows, they enjoy every moment of it.

Wasagaming (with the accent on the second syllable) is the park townsite and a pleasant little resort town on the surface, ideal as the hub for visiting the park's many charms.

But to nine of ten of its visitors Wasagaming is beginning and end. Very few of its temporary citizens hear the cry of the loon for the heavy throb of the amplified music that vibrates over the town from the roller skating rink. Many are so blinded by the glare of neon lights that the sunsets across the lake go unseeen. Visitors seeking the peace and shade of the forest end up at the ball park, naked to the sun, lured there by the pied pipers of patrolling sound trucks.

One wedge of lawn leading down to Clear Lake on which the town is located, is a moist mass of bodies, a kind of come-to-life Gluyas Williams' cartoon of crying babies exhausted and sun-pink mothers and lovers in various stages of lamination.

Summer City

We were prepared to make some sort of mild protest yesterday when we arrived here. We entered the park from the northern end. The road was deplorable, but we are used to deplorable roads and it was fine to be in among evergreens and to sight cool water through pines.

In Wasagaming we were directed to the camping grounds described in a brochure as "situated in a beautiful grove facing Clear Lake."

We were less than happy to find in reality, a shack town of more than 600 home-made, box-like structures and tents jammed together. Each is allotted the space of a burial plot. The toilet facilities are unable to cope with the population. There are no showers and an attendant said "just use the lake."

We have found a curt and what-the-hell attitude on the part of both the park employees and the personnel in the commercial businesses the attitude you find at any summer resort with a surplus of visitors.

The whole situation struck us as cockeyed. We'd driven through miles of beautiful virgin country and seen a hundred shaded, inviting places to pull up our home on wheels. Why wasn't some effort made to spread the visiting horde across this landscape? I put that question to one of the more human park attendants.

"Reason is that the people who come here don't want that sort of holiday," he said. "They want to be where people are where there's organized entertainment for them. We have a couple of picnic grounds off the beaten track, but almost nobody uses them.

"It seems kind of futile to have a park like this" he went on. "Why there are thousands of people who come up here and never leave the limits of the town. They've just gotta be together or they don't seem to be happy. We know it's a bad situation in that camping ground. But you ask some of your neighbors if they have any complaints."

We did ask. And a typical answer from a Brandon farmer was this: "It's real nice to be so near the town and with so many nice folks."

On Display

So many people massed together may be fatiguing but not without interest to the spectator.

It's interesting, for example, to see the scores of married women who have come up here for a holiday with the kids, leaving Daddy behind in the hot old city.

They are here by the hundreds, women having an absolutely miserable time with no escape from either the brats or the drudgery of housework. And you can bet your sweet life Daddy is having a high old merry time of it back home.

The lovers are interesting, too. I don't think I've ever seen such open style wrestling. You don't like to admit reaching an age when this seems disgusting (it isn't, of course) but such immodesty on a mass scale is disconcerting. You wonder if the purely physical romancing of these clean-cut looking kids isn't confusing a pretty important issue.

As a kind of gallery of the race at play or what promises to be play Wasagaming has its points, but I think that the men with the vision to set aside these green acres for the public would be somewhat bewildered to find them merely a backdrop for the human comedy.

Danger and Countless Headaches Cameramen's Lot in Korean War

Tokyo, — (AP) — The Korean War front news photographer is giving newspaper readers the fastest play-by-play photo report they've ever seen on an Oriental war.

Danger, sweat, good luck, bad luck and countless headaches are involved.

Front-line photographers —and all their gear — have been involved in all major actions thus far.

They have to be. Photographers can't get pictures of action scenes by interviewing others who were there.

They have been so close to it that one photographer went for a ride one evening to the airfield at Suwon, then returned to find that headquarters — and all his cameras — had been burned.

Associated Press correspondent Tom Lambert, who has been doubling as a photographer, lost his picture - taking occupation temporarily when his camera was smashed as he dived into a fox-hole to escape strafing planes.

Like their writing compatriots, who seldom carry anything heavier than a pencil, the cameramen hitchhike toward the front-line action. Hopping in and out of jeeps and trucks with bags of equipment lassoed around their necks and cameras in both hands is an art developed only with practice.

Frontline negatives are rushed to Tokyo by plane — any plane.

This means another highhiking ride to the nearest airport and a persuasive sales talk to a pilot or someone else returning to Japan. If the plane's flight 's altered, the package of negatives destined for Tokyo may end up at another airport several hundred miles away.

Tokyo offices take care of such matters as tracking down way-ward packages, developing front-line negatives and sending them to the United States by Trans-Pacific Airline or radiophoto.

Radiophotos go out of here to the U. S. on the Army Signal Corps' new and modern equipment, manned by officers and enlisted men.

Pictures taken by army photographers are sent to Washington and copies are released simultaneously to American photo distributing agencies.

WOMAN HELPS

Toronto, Aug. 5 — (CP) Mrs. Robert H. Saunders, wife of the chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, Friday helped police thwart what might have been a break-in. From her living room she noticed a prowler across the street and called police. They arrested Clarence McRitchie, 33, and charged him with possession of burglar tools.

DREAM BBEING DELAYED

Toronto, Aug. 5 — (CP)—Toronto's long-standing dream of putting all power lines underground is being delayed. Hydro Commission officials said their repair crews are too busy working on the city's new subway and the province-wide frequency-conversion scheme. The original plan was approved three years ago and it was estimated it would cost $26,000,000.

BEACH BIRDS

Small Sandpipers stepping daintily along at the water's edge should be a common sight on our beaches, because they are there, doing just that. But all our beach birds are well camouflaged by Mother Nature, their mottled and streaked plumage blending perfectly into their surroundings, whether they be on a sandy, a muddy, or a pebbly shore. Their long, slender toes are especially adapted for walking on beaches where they find mollusks, crustaceans and insects; their long, slender legs are very useful for wading; their long slender bills can reach far down.

It is fairly simple to learn which are shore birds, but quite difficult to differentiate among them, they have so many similar characteristics. This is particularly hard when we see them in the autumn as they are passing through southern Canada, because some of them have changed their suits. In summer the Spotted Sandpiper, which is undoubtedly our most prolific species, can more easily be recognized than many others. About 7½ inches long, including a very short tail, this bird is olive brown above, whitish below, with a white line over the eye and a white patch on the shoulder. It is the only Sandpiper with large, round spots on its breast, like a Wood Thrush. But in the fall both adults and juveniles lack this distinguishing mark.

Even when supposedly standing still Tip-up is far from motionless, because the little body goes bobbing up and down, suggesting this nickname. Like all other shore birds, its wings are long and pointed; but its flight is absolutely unique. A few quick beats of the white-barred wings are followed by a short sail with wings curved downwards. Listen to its loud "peet-weet" as it alights on the margin of the lake or stream, then try to follow. It can lead you a merry chase, for no sooner do you imagine that you are catching up to it than it arises, curves around behind you, and lands at the starting point. Other unusual accomplishments of the Spotted Sandpiper are in the line of water sports; it can dive, swim, run under water, and look as if it were flying there, for it uses its wings as propellers when progressing below the surface.

Many shore birds are capable of very long flights in migration, and this one is no exception. Individuals that breed as far north as the limit of trees go to the southern coasts of the United States for the winter.

Professor Arne Naess of Norway gave these details in Peshawar before members of the Norwegian expedition which conquered the peak left here by rail yesterday

The new defence program is one that puts Canada closer to a wartime footing than ever before during peacetime.

It is expected the new moves will boost Canada's defence budget from $425,000,000 to $600,000,000 or better. In addition controls may be clamped on materials vital to the preparedness drive should scarcities develop.

Series of Meetings

The prime minister's disclosures came after a series of cabinet meetings. The last of these ended late yesterday with only three ministers absent — Agriculture Minister Gardiner, Works Minister Fournier and Senator Wishart Robertson, government leader in the Senate. All are away from the capital.

Mr. St. Laurent said a special session of parliament would be called in six or seven weeks, earlier if threat of war continues to grow.

In addition to opening recruiting for the new brigade, Mr. St. Laurent said Canada is "pressing on" with recruiting for other active forces including the navy and air force and for the reserve army which forms an integral part of Canada's defence system.

She also is accelerating production of her new, all-weather jet fighter, the CF-100, which in tests had exceeded expectations. She is greatly expanding production facilities for her own jet engine, the Orenda, and is stepping up production program for naval vessels, armament, amunition, radar and other types of equipment.

Not Objective To Make War

In this industrial mobilization she was working in close co-operation with the United States so that "our joint resources and facilities are put to the most effective use in the common defence," Mr. St. Laurent said.

It was not Canada's objective to make war, he said, but rather to prevent one. No one could guarantee that by the action now being taken by all free nations, a "general war" could be prevented.

"We do know no one of them can do this alone and that our best chance of doing it is by following wise and progressive international policies and by building up our joint strength with speed and determination.

"We owe it to ourselves, to each other, to our children and to each other's children, to do everything human foresight can suggest to prevent the disasters of a Third World War.,

"Under providence I hope and I trust we shall succeed."

AMERICANS ROLL

On the extreme south, the reds had struck in the rear of a U.S. 8th army regiment and a Marine regiment.

The offensive had reached to 12 miles east of burned-out Chinju, the comunist springboard for thrusts at Pusan, the main U.S. seaport in southeastern Korea.

The Marines scaled valley walls and fought over rugged country on their successful rescue mission that relieved the regiment. The unit then rejoined its battalion.

Clean Out Remnants

U.S. field vehicles in the southern offensive rolled over a roadblock that had held up the 45-ton pershing tanks, Marines there cleaned out red remnants in the hills.

The Naktong River crossing was a red thrust toward Taegu, still a prime target for the reds.

A headquarters spokesman reported reds in the vicinity of Waegwan and east of Kumchon had put new forces into the fight.

The rough country east of the river might be hard to defend.

The spokesman said there still was no indication, however, that the communists have the forces to exploit their foothold across the river although red tanks were reported near Hyopchon, 10 miles west of the river. Enemy activity in the U.S. 1st Cavalry sector, north of Taegu, was described as negligible.

The 8th army communique reported the First Cavalry Division had extended its left flank southward by 8,000 yards, drawing closer to the U.S. 24th infantry division.

Cavalry patrols ranged five miles into enemy territory west of the river but saw little.

At the extreme eastern end of the frant around Yongdok, the 8th army reported a small red attack against the South Korean left flank but said "it was contained."

In the Naktong bridgehead fighting, Col. Charles E. Beauchamp, commanding the 34th infantry regiment, said earlier the Americans expected to clean out the reds by nightfall Tuesday. He said that would put an end to the communist 4th division as an enemy force.

PLENTY OF FISH

Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP)—There are plenty of big fish in the Niagara River these days but there aren't any minnows for bait, veteran fishermen say. Bass, blue perch and pickerel are plentiful in the river and fishermen suggest they are taking such heavy toll of the minnows that few are left for the bait-fishermen who dip for them with nets.

RECRUIT BRIGADE

1. The army will be gunning for at least 10,000 men — it has about 21,000 — including 3,000 to 4,000 to fill out the regular force, 5,000 for the new brigade on terms of engagement for 18 months or longer if required, and reinforcements for the new brigade. The ban against married men is out and recruiting standards are being broadened. More thousands are wanted in the reserves.

2. There will be double recruiting—for the regular and for the special force.

3. The army won't take chances on facing the sort of criticisms that broke over the allegedly badly-trained force sent to Hong Kong in 1941. Training may be completed in Japan but there will be months of it in Canada.

4. It is hoped that distinguished soldiers from the recent war can be found to lead the new formation.

5. Veterans will get preference. It is felt a force largely composed of veterans, with officers from veteran and peace-time-trained groups, could be trained for fighting in six or seven months.

6. It is not yet known whether the brigade, if it goes to Korea, will fight in a British or American formation. This is under discussion in Washington and at U.N. headquarters.

7. Canada will foot the bill for any U.N. action it enters, pay the men at current army rates, provide pensions, care for the wounded, provide veterans' benefits on a basis decided by parliament, guarantee that the men get their jobs back.

Will Be Second Battalions

The brigade's three infantry battalion will be second battalions of the three permanent force regiments whose first battalions make up the infantry component of the airborne brigade. Thus they will be second battalions of the Royal Canadian Regiment, The Princess Patricia's Light Infantry and the Royal 22nd Regiment. There also will be artillery and other components.

The men must be physically fit, mentally alert, between 19 and 35 inclusive and 19 to 45 for tradesmen, and they can be either single or married. They could be kept in longer than 18 months "due to an emergency or action taken by Canada pursuant to an international agreement."

Under present rates of pay, a private on entry into the army receives $122 monthly in basic pay and subsistence allowance, with an additional $30 monthly if married.

Total pay for a sergeant is $161, for a warrant officer first class, $216; lieutenant, 254; captain, $286; and major, $361.

Marriage allowance, in addition to the above figures, is $30 for other ranks, $40 for officers.

$806,862 FOR RELIEF

Quebec, Aug 5 — (CP) — Premier Duplessis announced today that a provincial government relief committee formed after the May conflagrations at Rimouski and Cabano has received subscriptions totalling $806,862. More than 11 800 individual donations of cash and materials have been received.

U.S. Support of Chiang May Cause War With Red China

London, Aug. 8—(CP)—Concern seems to be increasing over the implications of United States policy in Formosa.

Although there have been few official pronouncements, it is easy to see Britain is worried that this Pacific Ocean island might provoke a war between communist China and the United States.

This fear is not news. But it has been almost feverishly intensified by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's visit last week to Formosa, and the American promise to defend it against any invaders "foolish enough" to attack.

Dangerous Move

Most observers agree that this fresh avowel of common purpose with Generallssimo Chiang Kai-Shek, though it may not have been approved by President Truman, is a dangerous move.

As portrayed in reports from foreign correspondents, Chiang is the discredited head of a Kuomintang which is just as corrupt and unpopular in Formosa as it ever was in China. If the Chinese reds invade the island, as they have sworn they will, there would probably be the usual defections from the Kuomintang ranks.

Another factor is that China is admitted by many western sources to have a case for attacking Formosa. The Independent Observer, a level-headed weekly newspaper, said editorially that Chiang's renewed bombing and blockade of the Chinese mainland give China some provocation to send armed forces "to a place from which it is being bombed, and to stop the bombing."

Generally speaking, the battle between east and west in Asia seems here to be less clear-cut that it may appear in North America. While the western powers are serenely convinced of the rightness of their actions, they may not persuade native peoples of their altruism.

In Asia's eyes, linking arms with Chiang makes the U.S. look less intent on fighting communism than in preserving an undesirable status quo. British newspapers have been stressing a theme that could be distilled into four words. Pick your partners carefully.

Could Lose Asia

The Liberal Manchester Guardian said yesterday:

"One of the millstones against western policy in this (far eastern) area is that almost everywhere we are associated with reactionary and not-too-competent regimes, some of which have been installed by doubtfully democratic means."

There have been insistent warnings that the west could lose Asia while winning Korea, and that the Asian mentality must be considered even as the battle rages. It is against thi background that India's luke-warm attitude, and Pandit Nehru's reproach against a lack of western subtlety, should be studied.

India cannot be taken for granted just because she is a member of the commonwealth.

LIBEL SUIT FILED

Calgary Aug. 8—(CP)—A $100,000 libel suit was filed Monday by two Toronto stockbrokers against the Edmonton Bulletin Ltd., H. L. Straight, publisher, and C. Vernon Myers, oil editor of The Calgary Albertan.

The brokers, A. N. Richmond and L. B Scott, last Friday filed a similar suit against the Albertan Publishing Company, Ltd., and Mr. Myers.

A statement of claim in The Bulletin suit said the alleged libel was published last March 20 resulting in the plaintiffs being "seriously injured in their character, credit and reputation. . ."

Transportation Hub Shot Up By Jet Fighters

Tokyo, Aug. 8—(AP)—American F-80 jets roared over Seoul today and shot up rail yards at the key transportation hub.

One squadron scored several hits on a pontoon bridge across the Han River, the Far East air forces summary said. It also strafed anti-aircraft positions.

Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said the red Korean flak was the heaviest and most accurate of the war.

Seoul was hit yesterday by B-29s. Fighter planes smashed red Korean battle lines and communications on the southern front in support of the American offensive.

The biggest B-29 strike was a 450-ton bomb load dumped on the arsenal and rail yards at Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

A smaller B-29 force punished Wonsan, east coast industrial area, with 80 tons of bombs.

550 Sorties Made

A far east air forces summary said a total of 550 sorties were made by all types of planes.

U.S. marine fighter pilots operated in the Chinju area on the southern front. They reported destroying 40 vehicles and a tank near Pansong a road junction east of Chinju.

U.S. bombers from two Essex-class carriers reported four direct hits on the vital west Seoul bridge.

U.S. navy fighters raked five villages northwest of Chinju harboring enemy troops.

In the last three days, the U.S. 5th air force said, five F-51 mustang pilots were lost.

Australian mustangs damaged two rail tunnels near Taejon among other targets.

GI Joe Has No Illusions About Current War in Korea

New York, Aug. 8—(AP) — Like his older brother after Pearl Harbor, the average teen-aged U.S. soldier is going off to war with no illusions about liking it—just a grim resolve to get it over with.

Generally, he joined up for what looked like a peaceful interlude of travel. Now he faces the prospect of fighting in Korea and he is stunned but not panicked.

This descriptive report comes from associated services, successor to united service organizations as a morale co-ordinating agency, which polled directors of servicemen's clubs.

The replies indicate the explosion in Korea has produced an over-all sobering and maturing effect, especially among the 365,000 teen-agers in uniform. There is a new concern with serious, practical, personal problems, and many servicemen who never went before are now attending religious services.

From an area where troops have been shipping out, came this report:

"The men shipping out are mostly teen-agers. Their general attitude seems to be that of one who is about to get a bitter dose of medicine—'might as well get it over with because it's going to happen anyway.'"

A club director at an eastern base reported:

"I note a recurrence of that same serious intensity which marked the youngsters back in '40, '41 and '42. They have that sort of catching of breath attitude of one who feels he wants to get into action but at the same time is inwardly uneasy about it."

Among the older servicemen shipping west, the chief concern is their wives and children and the hundreds of little details involved in getting them settled. Club directors reported there is worry, sometimes hysteria, among the younger wives; the older army wives, the ones who went through the last war, are more inclined to accept the situation.

Police Place Tight Dragnet Around District

Toronto, Aug. 8—(CP)—Police have placed a tight dragnet around the Toronto-Hamilton area in their search for two gunmen who hijacked a transport truck near Hamilton Saturday after kidnapping a Toronto man and his girl companion.

The girl told police the two swarthy bandits both in their late 20's, raped her three times while they stalked the truck.

The search centred in the Port Credit-Burlington area midway between the two cities Monday with reports that residents had seen two men answering the description. Police found no trace of the pair.

The trail began on the Queen Elizabeth Way just west of Toronto Friday night. The two men held up John Kopi 23 of Toronto and a Winnipeg girl as they were parked by the side of the road.

After robbing Kopi of $10, the bandits bound and gagged the couple and drove to Clappison's Corners, just east of Hamilton. Three times they stopped the car and raped the girl, police said.

At the corner, they stopped the transport truck, apparently believing it to be carrying a payroll and stole a bundle of papers from the driver. The papers were worthless shipping bills.

The gunmen drove back to Toronto, and abandoned their prisoners at the waterfront. The car was later found in the east end.

Four Evangelists Choose Jail Terms Rather Than Fines

Val d'Or, Que., Aug. 8 —(CP)— Four Baptist Evangelists Monday chose two-month jail terms rather than fines after they were convicted of obstructing traffic at a street in this northwestern Quebec mining town.

In Montreal, a Baptist Church official said he was "stunned that such a thing is possible in Canada."

Rev. L. T. Heron, pastor of Val d'Or's Baptist Church, and three assistants, each was fined $25 and costs with the alternative of two months in jail by recorder J. L. Baillargeon. They refused to pay the fines and accepted the jail terms.

Jailed with Mr. Heron were his sister Miss Isobel Heron of Toronto church deacon Malcolm Lesar, Windsor, Ont., and deacon Malcolm Purcell of Val d'Or.

The trial, held here Monday night, was the culmination of another in a series of court cases in Quebec province which have arisen from evangelistical street meetings, distributing pamphlets without a permit and similar incidents.

Last month, another group of five Baptist Evangelists were arrested at La Sarre, a mining town near Val d'Or, for disturbing the peace. The charges were dropped a week ago and town council agreed to provide protection for further street meetings.

Arrested Saturday Night

Mr. Heron and his assistants were arrested here last Saturday night as they held a meeting across the street from the home of Mayor Oza Tetreault. They were told to move on by town police but 16 minutes later, with the meeting still going on, they were taken into custody.

John R. Armstrong, secretary-treasuer of the Union of Regular Baptist Churches in Quebec and Ontario, said Monday night in a statement to Montreal newspapers that he had been in touch by telephone with Val d'Or.

He said that a police sergeant guarding Miss Heron on her way to the cells after her conviction had broken down and cried. Mr. Armstrong also said that Mr. Heron had protested to the judge that his group had not been obstructing traffic. Mr. Armstrong added that the judge, in handing down judgment, said he was not sentencing the four for obstructing traffic but for refusing to obey a police officer.

Mr. Heron was also arrested in 1949 in Val d'Or for obstructing traffic while preaching in a street.

Last April, a mob stoned and damaged a small store in Shawinigan Falls, Que., where a meeting of the Christian Brethern, another protestant sect, was taking place. Mayor Francois Roy of the northeasten Quebec city said the incident was regrettable and unavoidable.

Hill Shoots Rapids Below Niagara Falls

Niagara Falls, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Major Lloyd Hill took a three-hour battering with two brief intermissions Sunday as he shot the rapids below Niagara Falls in a stainless steel barrel.

At the end of the five-mile trip, Hill emerged smiling but said he was "pretty badly bruised up."

The 32-year-old riverman says he intends to go over the Falls in a barrel Sept. 10.

The barrel, dented when it was sent empty over the Falls last month, was battered so much Sunday that Hill said he would use another one for the trip over the cataract.

Badly-Shaped Noses Sometimes Big Cause of Unhappiness, Neurosis

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

New York, Aug. 8—(AP)—Nose itch?

It means maybe you're going to have company. Or you're going to get angry. Or that you will get a letter. Or that someone is thinking of you It all depends upon local superstition.

Sneezes have their superstitions too. One is that three sneezes in succession is a sign you'll never get married.

Dr. Harold M. Holden plastic surgeon of Los Angeles, tells of these and other things about noses in a new book, Noses (World Publishing Company, Cleveland).

A person has one of two reactions to his nose, Dr. Holden says. Either he's satisfied with it aesthetically or else it gives him some degree of neurosis.

The nose is one big cause of unhappiness and neurosis. If an over-sized, badly-shaped or disfigured nose is corrected by plastic surgery, the operation often brings amazing changes for the better in personality.

Plastic surgery of a kind has been going on for thousands of years. It was a brisk business in India 3,000 years ago, he says, when it was done by Hindu potters and tilemakers. They took skin and fat from the buttocks to mold a new nose.

Man still is trying to classify people by the shape of their noses. Aristotle thought they indicated character. A bulbous ended nose denoted swinish character to him; sharp-tipped noses irascible people; large rounded obtuse noses magnanimous people.

On the service side your nose is a good air conditioner. A person in ordinary activities breathes in about 500 cubic feet of air a day. The nose moistens, warms and cleans all of it.

Causing Barnacles to Commit Suicide Achievement of New Electronic Device

La Jolla, Calif., Aug. 8—(AP)—An electric shocking device which causes mussles and barnacles to commit suicide may someday save ship owners and seashore industries millions of dollars a year.

The inventor, Henry T. Burkey, a Los Angeles electrical engineer, believes that with a few adaptations his electronic apparatus will be sure death to the fouling organisms which cling to ships' bottoms and clog undersea pipes.

He has already successfully tested it at the Scripps Institute of Oceanography here.

The apparatus is essentially a series of vacuum tubes which generate timed electrical pulses in water. The pulses, too weak to electrocute the sea creatures, force them to suicide.

In the case of the bivalve mussels, the current causes their shells to snap shut. Continuing pulses cause a muscular reaction which keeps them shut. Death occurs when the mussel either starves or, unable to eliminate wastes, succumbs to auto-intoxication.

In the Scripps tests all of a group of 100 mussels exposed to the pulses died within two weeks. Seventy died within one week.

The single-shelled barnacles, says Burkey, are equally vulnerable. They eat by fishing about in the water with tiny feelers. Preliminary tests indicate that the pulses paralyze these feelers.

Untold millions of dollars are spent annually to scrape barnacles from the hulls of vessels ranging in size from battleships to rowboats. Burkey say his apparatus can be rigged so it will both kill barnacles already present and prevent further accumulations.

Two Described As Deserters From Picton Held

Port Arthur, Aug. 8 (CP)—Two men, described by police as deserters from Picton, Ont., army camp, were arrested Saturday following the armed robbery of the Canadian Pacific Railway ticket office here.

The men, Gnrs. G. J. L. Nelmes and J. T. Bennett, were arrested a few minutes after a bandit robbed the office of $80. Nelmes and Bennett were armed with three loaded automatics, police said.

They were arrested at gunpoint by Motorcycle Constable Herman Scarnati, who spotted them in brushland a few hundred yards from the station. Both denied any connection with the holdup.

They were charged with unlawful possession of firearms. Army authorities said they left Picton July 23, armed with guns and ammunition.

Child Witnesses Beating Father Gave Her Mother

Toronto, Aug. 8 — (CP)—Wilfred Kingsley beat his wife into unconsciousness with a hammer Saturday then hanged himself from the frame of a bedroom door.

His wife, Helen, 38, is in critical condition in hospital.

Kingsley's four-year-old daughter, Dawn, saw the beating and walked 200 yards to a neighbor's home and said: "Mummy and Daddy are dead."

Kingsley, a 40-year-old market gardener in suburban Etobicoke, left notes for his wife and children.

Police said the little girl told them: "Mummy was stirring potatoes on the stove. Daddy pushed her down. He had a hammer and he pounded her head. Mummy started to cry."

There are five children in the family. Only Dawn, the youngest, was at home. There was no explanation of the beating and suicide.

Chinese Reds Shell Freighters

Hong Kong, Aug. 8. (AP)—Chinese communist shore batteries early today fired five shells at the 4,951-ton Norwegian freighter Pleasantville. The ship was not hit.

It was the third shelling of ships near Hong Kong in three days. All three were fired upon about 15 miles south of the harbor.

The American freighter Steel Rover was fired on Sunday. A steel plate was dented. Red artillery scored two hits yesterday on the British frighter Hangsang. Shell fragments wounded two British officers.

The British officers suffered superficial burns.

The Hong Kong Marine department warned shipping firms to detour the Chinese Red-held islands near Hong Kong "In the interests of safety."

HOPE WILL TAKE FLYER

Beverly Hills, Calif., Aug. 8 — (AP) — Leslie Townes Hope, clown, took to the fairways in company with 39 other golfers today in an effort to qualify for the United States amateur tournament which starts Aug. 21 at Minneapolis.

Hope is taking up where his perennial links crony, Bing Crosby, left off. Crosby, you'll remember, entered the British amateur two months back — and lost in the first round.

Hope seems destined for a similar fate because, although he won't admit it, Crosby is the better shotmaker by about three strokes.

Huge Crowds Enjoy Splendid Program at Tweed Celebration

Tweed (Special) — Nearly 10,000 people jammed this village on Saturday when the North Frontenac Lumbermen's Picnic heralded a three-day celebration of the village's Old Home Weekend.

From all parts of the northern districts came former residents along with their wives and families. From the southern section came a large enjoyment-bent crowd to mingle with their northern cousins in what eventually proved to be one of the most successful of its kind held in years.

Lumbermen Prove Skill

The lumbermen of the north proved they are as adept at entertainment as they are skillful with their tools. They staged a colorful variety program that created enjoyment and entertainment for all. They had a beauty contest, the skirling pipes of the Toronto Ladies Pipe Band; softball games, games and contests which featured the uncanny skill of the lumberjack with saw and axe.

Open New Building

A feature of the weekend celebration was the formal opening of the new Community Building with Hon. Harold Scott, minister of Lands and Forests officiating. With Mr. Scott were Roscoe Robson, M.L.A., and Frank Follwell, M.P. The guests and speakers were formally welcomed by Reeve T. C. Graham.

The minister congratulated the people of Tweed on their splendid achievement in erecting the new building. He said it was a great credit to any community and one of which Tweed should be proud. The new community hall cost $65,000.

At 1:30 p.m. a monster parade a mile long formed up and marched to the fair grounds. Headed by the Toronto Girls' Pipe Band, the parade consisting of floats, bands, clowns and animals moved through the village streets while thousands looked on and applauded.

Miss Toronto Present

Feature of the parade was Miss Ruby Mann newly-crowned "Miss Toronto" who appeared riding on a decorated float drawn by six horses. With Miss Toronto was Miss R. McInnis, the runner-up to the Toronto beauty queen.

Mr. Wallace Johnston, of the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company, formally opened the picnic. Brief addresses were given by the Hon. H. Scott and W. Le Clair, president of Canadian Lumbermen's Association.

Hold Church Services

Special services were held in the various churches on Sunday morning. At St. John's United Church, the Rev. Redvers Brown, of Colborne, a son of a former Tweed pastor, was guest preacher.

In the afternoon a drum-head service was conducted in the Memorial Park. Taking part in the service was the Rt. Rev. G. A. Wells, former senior Protestant chaplain of the Canadian Forces, Toronto. With the distinguished speaker were Rev. F. F. Downing, the Rev. A. L. Sisco and Frank Threadgold, commander of District F Canadian Legion, Whitby. The parade to the park was headed by the Belleville Municipal Band under the baton of Bandmaster Ted Robbins.

Adrienne Northey, 15, of Tamworth, was crowned Queen of the Lumberjacks in a beauty contest. Three of the four runners-up were Toronto girls. The runners-up were: Renayne Armstrong, Toronto; Jean Fobert, Belleville, and Lorraine McLeod and Pat Clark, both members of the Toronto Girls' Pipe Band. All received cash prizes.

Judges of the beauty contest were Ruby Mann, recently chosen Miss Toronto, and Lois McInnes, judged second in the Miss Toronto contest; and W. J. Le Clair of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, Ottawa.

Sponsors of the picnic, in addition to the lumbermen's association, were the Tweed Branch of the Canadian Legion and the Tweed Fair Board.

Winner of the baby contest was 17-month-old Larry Genereaux, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Genereaux of Tweed.

Woodchopping Contest

Contests in woodchopping, logloading, logsending and power sawing, attracted large crowds to the grandstand in the Tweed Fair Grounds. Joe LaFlamme, the bearded outdoor man from Northern Ontario, was on hand with trained bears and a moose.

Two Toronto girls' softball teams played exhibition games. In one the Toronto girls combined as one team to play the Tweed men's team and lost 12-5.

On Monday morning fifty former pupils of Tweed schools met Mr. G. A. Meiklejohn, 90-year-old former schoolteacher and marched to the sit of the first school erected in Tweed. John Sills, and Albert Farrar, Trenton, headed the parade which "sat down on the grass" and heard brief addresses by Mr. Meiklejohn and Mr. Farrar.

Contests Results:

Log laading contest with mechanical loader: 1st prize, Jim Eady, August Vertch, and Clarence Vertch of the Eady and Graham Lumber Company: 1 min and 24 seconds.

2nd: Charles Delyea, Bernard Inwood and Jack Lloyd, Sawyer Stoll Lumber Company, 2 min. and 12 seconds.

Log sawing contest: 1st. Birtchal and Bernard Inwood, Cloyne, Sawyer Stoll Lumber Company, 8 6-10 seconds.

Oldest man: Arthur McConnell, Read, 83 years.

A capacity crowd attended the dance in the park pavilion at night.

Dynamite Crank Sought by Police

Kirkland Lake, Ont., Aug. 8—(CP) —Police today pressed a search for a "crank" who has a mania for using dynamite.

Yesterday a hound dog's head was blown off after someone tied a chrage under its collar Early Saturday a dynamite explosion shattered windows in a residential section.

Arthur Patterson, owner of the dog, told police that it was quiet and the killer would have no difficulty stuffing a dynamite stick under its collar.

Capt. Kenneth R. Cornell, American liaison officer with the South Korean forces, told a press conference the information came from a Korean school teacher who escaped from Seoul July 27.

The refugee estimated 3,000 persons had been killed in air bombings of Seoul up to July 27.

CITY AND COUNTRY

The general terms of the will, yet to be probated, were made known by the executors in a 1,000 word summary issued today The 6,000 word text of the will will be made public tonight.

The executors and general trustees are the Royal Trust Company, Fred A. McGregor, formerly Mr. King's secretary and recently Federal Combines commissioner, and Duncan K. MacTavish, K.C., of Ottawa.

In their statement, the executors said the great bulk of Mr. King's estate is "dedicated to public purposes."

"It will appear from the will itself," they added, "that this dedication was close to Mr. King's heart and mind for many long years before he died. The will, therefore, can be said to be in large measure the fulfilment of is life-long desire to leave his properties and investments for the benefit of his fellow citizens."

While it was not possible yet to estimate accurately the full value of the estate, they said it was believed to be "something over $750,000."

Includes Personal Savings

Besides Laurier House and Kingsmere, it includes the former Prime Minister's personal savings; investments and insurance funds; and various legacies, gifts and personal trust funds which came to Mr. King for his personal use but which the executors said he always segregated and treated as though they were personal trusts.

The $225,000 fund which accompanies the gift to the nation of Laurier House was one of these. It was originally given Mr. King by Hon. Peter Larkin and other friends to assist in the upkeep of Laurier House and meet other "personal and public needs," especially those that might develop after retirement.

The sum has remained intact in Mr. King's hands as a trust fund.

The stately old Laurier House itself was left to Mr. King by Lady Laurier, widow of the former Liberal Prime Minister.

The executores said it was his expressed wish that the home would be immediately associated with the public archives of Canada and made available to students of history, remaining as far as possible in its present condition.

Mr. King hoped that future generations of Canadians—in his own words—"will take an increasing interest and pride in the preservation of a house occupied through many years by two of Canada's prime ministers and reminiscent of an environment that was a part of their daily lives."

Much Interest in Papers

With Mr. King's death coming as he was in the early stages of preparing his historic memoirs, much interest has centred on the disposition of his papers.

All of his books, papers, correspondence, diaries and unpublished material are handed over to four literary executives who are given certain powers and duties.

The literary executors are Norman A. Robertson, secretary of the Privy Council; Mr. McGregor, who has been working with Mr. King on his memoirs for several months; John W. Pickersgill, former secretary to Mr. King and now special assistant to Prime Minister St. Laurent, and Dr. W. Kaye Lamb, Dominion archivist.

Mr. King gave detailed instructions for the preservation of Kingsmere, the rolling estate in the Gatineau Hills on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River, which he has been acquiring piecemeal during the last 50 years.

It was his determination, the executors said, to hold these lands in trust for his fellow citizens. His general wish was that the property should be maintained in its present state; that it would be developed as a parkland; form a wildlife sanctuary and continue to have the character of a natural forest reserve.

Mr. King has asked that certain rights of occupancy of the cottages on the property be continued for relatives and friends for a few years.

Administered by Board

Mr. King's scholarship requests are to be administered by a Board of Trustees consisting of Dr. L. W. Brockington, of Ottawa, rector of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont.; Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and vice-chancellor of McGill University, Montreal, and Dr. Norman A. M. Mackenzie, president of the University of British Columbia.

The executors said probate of the will is to be applied for as soon as possible.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The Belleville District Baseball League swings into playoff action tonight at the Exhibition Grounds when the Belleville Cubs meet the Cannifton Clippers in the first of their semi-finals series. In the other bracket the league-leading undefeated 6 Repair Depot squad meets the third-place Point Anne team. The Clippers won the playoff right when they defeated the Napanee squad in the game to decide fourth place. Napanee protested an umpire's decision but apparently the executive tossed out the gripe and ordered the playoffs to start. President Jack Carson said he wanted to get as many playoff games decided before the week of Aug. 14 since the Exhibition Grounds will not be available. Belleville Fair and all that, y'know.

* * *

While many of the wise gentlemen are calling the powerful Sixardee team to sweep the series, it should be remembered that anything can happen in a baseball game especially when the chips are down. Many a struggling squad that has reached the playoffs by the skin of its teeth has developed a startling reversal of form and upset the hopes of squads whose win column is greatly in excess of the defeat strip. Sixardee can be beaten and so can any of the titular aspirants. Point Anne has strength and so has the Cubs team. The championships won't be decided until the last man is out in the ninth inning of the last game. The Cubs have this in mind, and tonight they will go out there with victory in mind. We understand the semi-finals series is the best two-of-three. Game tonight at 8:30.

* * *

From beneath a blistered skin we are writing this column.

Yeah, you folks wanted a hot holiday. You had it. So did we.

Ideal weather, wasn't it? Sure, you folks who lazed around cottage and cabin, fished when you felt like it, had all the breaks. It was tops as a holiday. The only guy who squawked was he that bet the weatherman would send rain.

We sat aboard the barge, if they call it that, from which the administrative business of the Picton Gold Cup Regatta is done. The sun blazed down on this floating office. There is no protection from the elements, especially to one bald-headed representative of the press and others.

It was a grand sight as these roaring hellions of the nautical speedways, helmet-protected, slashed through the lightly-rippled waters of the Prince Edward Yacht Club course.

Ten thousand people, who packed the cliffs thrilled to one of the most spectacular shows ever staged by the Prince Edward Yacht Club.

Picton can be danged proud of the efforts of its Yacht Club. Six world's records and three Canadian marks were established on that blistering sun-drenched course yesterday.

The P.E.Y.C., if its executive had the power could not have ordered a better course. Maybe Harold Wilson and "Miss Canada IV" missed a bet here.

The Picton course was perfect. There was a four-inch ripple at 11 o'clock. It maintained that condition all afternoon. It was what the powers-that-be wanted and got.

Throughout this show when spray-waked hellions of all classes churned the quiet waters of the bay in quest of records, there crept in that thing that usually happens when sportsmen gather. It was that thing called sportsmanship.

We, suffering under a blistering sun, protected, on the bald pate, by junior's baseball cap, saw a fine example of that thing that is aped aerially by sports broadcasters, and in the print by sports writers.

* * *

"Thom" Cooper, illustrious son of one of the grandest pilots that ever planed a .225 or .135 over a roaring course, the late "Pops" Cooper won the Picton Gold Cup.

True, he won it. But he didn't win it the hard Way. And Thom Cooper was the first one to admit it.

If you were listening from that crowd-packed bank about the course, you would have heard the interview yours truly had with him.

Cooper told me and you that his Gold Cup this year, while he won it, was that he accepted it the way he didn't want to.

That is not the Kings English but it's the way a fine sportsman voiced it.

And for this reason:

Thommy Cooper won the Gold Cup. It was the third time his family has "copped" it. But he knew that Ed. Sawyer's "Belligero", his conqueror in the first heat, caught fire and could not continue.

Then came a fine gesture on the part of Cooper as was evidenced in his second heat of the .225 Div. '1' Class when he missed a buoy, turned and lost a half-lap.

New York Giants Run up Sensational Run of 16 Wins in 17 Games on Durocher Hunch

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Remember the date — July 20, 1950. It may go down in baseball history as the day the New York Giants began their amazing uphill climb that brought them a pennant.

A fantastic pipe dream? Maybe. Remember the 1914 Boston Braves. They dug themselves out of a deeper rut to win the flag and the World Series.

Win or lose, the Giants' sensational run of 16 victories in 17 games since July 20 is a high spot of the season.

How and why the streak got under way is one of the top sports stories of the year. It developed from a brainchild of Manager Leo Durocher with Larry Macphail getting a long-range assist.

Only July 19, the Giants took a couple of beatings from St. Louis Cardinals — 18-4 and 10-3 to sink deeper into sixth place. That made it 13 defeats in their last 14 games.

The groggy Giants dragged their feet into the clubhouse prepared for a typical Durocher tongue-lashing. It didn't come.

Instead, Leo just suspended all the training rules for the balance of the night. "Go out and have fun. I don't care what you do or when you get back. The curfew is lifted. Just make sure you show up at the ball park tomorrow."

Durocher was playing a hunch. He recalled a similar situation nine years before when he managed Brooklyn Dodgers. The Brooks were undergoing a similar stretch of non-winning games.

Finally, Macphail, then head of the Dodgers, told Leo to cancel the curfew for the night. Leo obeyed. Just to make certain the boys broke training, Macphail stayed up all night, telephoning his players. If they wouldn't go out and have a good time, then they wouldn't sleep either.

The result? The Dodgers went on a winning streak, overtook the Cards and captured the flag.

On Right Track

The Giants may not do the same, but they're on the right track. What they did on the night of July 19 may never be known. It is no secret, however, they murdered the Cards, 13-3, July 20. And they've been "murdering" every club they've faced since then. Only a 6-3 loss to the Cardinals in New York July 30 prevented them from racking up 17 consecutive triumphs.

For one inning it looked as if the Giants might drop another last night. They spotted Boston a 3-1 lead in the first but roared back with a 14-hit attack to win 9-3.

The triumph boosted the Giants to within 2½ games of the fourth - place Cards, who were buried under a 9-0 score by the pace-setting Philadelphia Phils.

They were the only games played in the majors yesterday.

Kramer Eventual Winner

Monte Kennedy started for the Giants but veteran Jack Kramer picked up the victory, holding Boston scoreless after relieving Kennedy in the first.

Wes Westrum led the attack against loser Vern Bickford with a two-run homer.

Ken Johnson, a Cardinal discard, hung the shutout over his former mates, limiting the Redbirds to two hits. It was the fourth victory for the lefthander.

Mike Goliat and Willie Jones paced the Phillies' 11-hit attack off Harry Brecheen and three relievers. Goliat hit a single, double and triple and drove in four runs. Jones crashed his 23rd home run with a man on base.

Stan Musial, who lost his batting lead to Brooklyn's Jackie Robinson by a fraction of a percentage point, got the old solid St. Louis hit. It was a single to right in the first inning. The other was a slow roller down the third base line in the fourth by catcher Del Rice.

Waterloo Tigers Still Clinging To Top Position

It's still Waterloo, Brantford, Kitchener and London in that order, but one day's play could upset the applecart—it's that close.

You can hardly squeeze a toothpick between the first four teams in the intercounty senior league pennant race, hottest in the league's history. Only 1 1-2 games separate Waterloo Tigers, on top, and London Majors in fourth place.

And it's just as tight at the bottom, where St. Thomas, Galt and Guelph are vying for the sixth and final playoff position. Galt and St. Thomas are virtually tied for sixth, with Guelph one game behind.

Kitchener Legionnaires made the most significant advance in heavy weekend action. They got the benefit of come classy clouting by their batters and some shoddy fielding by the opposition to score three victories.

Legionnaires whipped the Tigers 14-6 Saturday, with Freddie Thomas pounding out a three-run homer and Yank Lipka holding the league-leaders to four hits. Eight Tiger errors aided their cause no end.

Then on Monday, Legion downed Guelph Leafs 8-3 and Brantford Sox 4-2.

Senior 'A' OHA Loop May Not Operate This Year

(By The Canadian Press)

Kitchener - Waterloo Flying Dutchmen and Owen Sound Mercurys are dropping out of the Ontario Hockey Senior League for the coming season and Niagara Falls has decided against entering the loop.

Only Toronto Marlboros and Hamilton Tigers remain as starters in the league, which last year had four teams.

Owen Sound will drop down to the OHA's senior B ranks.

Both Kitchener-Waterloo and Owen Sound have indicated they will re-enter the league in 1951 "if conditions are right." Niagara Falls hopes to have a senior team organized by that time.

At Toronto Stafford Smythe, manager of Toronto Marlboros, said it would be "impossible" for Hamilton Tigers and Marlboros to try and keep the league going with only two clubs.

"We will certainly try to make a new effort to keep things going this year," he said. "With Kitchener and Niagara Falls getting new rinks next year, the league should be in a sound position. But if we fold up for a year it will take at least two or three years to build things back."

If the league did fold, Smythe said, Marlboros probably would send as many players as possible to Toronto Maple Leafs' Los Angeles and Pittsburgh farm clubs. The remainder would have to be released to other senior clubs.

Harold Wilson says in Gravenhurst he won't make an immediate bid for the world powerboat speed record in Miss Canada IV which came close to equalling the record last Friday.

Wilson decided not to make an official bid for the title at Picton over the weekend because the measured mile course was too close to shore to give his boat enough room to manoeuvre.

He'll concentrate on preparations for the Harmsworth Trophy race at Detroit next month and will try for the record of 160.3 miles per hour later. Miss Canada IV hit an estimated 159 M.P.H. last Friday.

The American pacer, Linda's Boy, will be shipped to Toronto for next Friday's $15,000 Canadian cup race. e He will face his arch-rival Diplomat, owned by Alex Parsons of London, Ont., and also Dr. Stanton, owned by Linley Fraser, of Forest, Ont.

The Mackens of Montreal took three Ontario tennis titles in Toronto Saturday and came close to winning a fourth. Brendan, oldest of the family team, took three titles. He beat brother Jimmy in the men's finals, paired with Jim for the men's doubles crown, and won the mixed doubles with sister Pat. Pat lost out in the women's singles final to Barbara Knapp of Birmingham, England.

Bill Parnell of Vancouver, British Empire games miler, tore nearly three seconds off the Canadian native mile record at the British Columbia open track and field championships in Vancouver Saturday.

Parnell stepped off the distance in four minutes, 14.8 seconds. Previous Canadian native mile record of 4.17.6 was set by Art Clark of Montreal in 1937.

Veteran heavyweight Tommy Farr of Wales is "after the Americans" in his come-back attempt.

"I am back in the fight game and I bar nobody—that includes Joe Louis." 36-year-old Farr said in an interview in London.

Proximity, the world's top money-winning pacer, set a track record of 2:06 4-5 for the mile Monday in an exhibition at the Stratford Turf Club before 6,000 harness-racing fans.

Driven by Clint Hodgins of Clandeboye, Ont., proximity sliced 2 1-5 seconds from the former trotting mark of 2:09 set by Mr. Van in 1938.

British Columbia and Ontario Monday were easy winners in the opening day's play at the Dominion cricket tournament at Winnipeg. B.C. defeated Alberta at three wickets and one run; Ontario took Manitoba by 82 runs.

A rank outsider in the betting, Canada Direct finished with a belated rush to win the feature pacing event at Thorncliffe raceway in Toronto Saturday.

Owned by M. Starey of Peterborough and expertly driven by Wilmer Hillcock, Canada Direct won by a head from Williamsburg and J. L. Van. He paid $60.50 for $2.

Young Mor Norman, playing out of Kitchener Rockway Club, put together cards of 71-74-76 to win the Kawartha Golf and Country Club's annual 54-hole invitation amateur tournament at Peterborough Monday.

Norman finished two strokes up on veteran Phil Farley of Toronto, who had 74-72-79 for a total of 225.

Six World's Records Set At Colorful Picton Regatta, Cooper's Son Wins Gold Cup

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sport's Editor)

Picton—World and Canadian speedboat records crashed by the board on this sun-drenched Bay of Quinte course here Monday afternoon.

Six world's records and three Canadian marks were established in competitive and course trials during the 10th annual Prince Edward Yacht Club regatta

Thom Cooper, of Kansas City, Mo., son of the late famous "Pops" Cooper, who lost his life racing on the Picton course, two years ago, roared through to a new world record for 135's establishing a speed of 88.1255 M.P.H.

Sherman Critchfield, St. Petersburg, Florida, crashed two world records in his "Hell's Angel" racing E runabout, speeding 70.175 M.P.H. over a measured mile and hitting 63.875 in competitive racing over a five mile course.

Broke Own Record

George Trimper, Buffalo, in his "Mischief" hit 51.724 M.P.H. for the measured mile record while Mrs. Trimper driving "Baby Loon" broke her own record for Class E Service runabouts at a speed of 51.799 M.P.H.

Dr. Water Robinson, Alexandria, Bay, well-known speedboat driver, established two world's records in a new class. Driving the new Canadian-owned design boat "Mrs. Docket" the popular physician driver set a Canadian measured-mile record of 44.554 and in 5-mile competition made a world's record of 43 M.P.H.

Paul Sawyer, South Harwich, Mass., drove his "Eldorado" to a new .225 division 2 class world's record at a speed of 75.147 miles per hour.

Won Gold Cup

Thom Cooper driving "Pops VII" won the Gold Trophy, the third time for the illustrious speedboat family of the late 'Pops' Cooper of Kansas City, Mo.

Cooper showed splendid sportsmanship in the first heat when he missed a buoy, turned and rounded it losing a chance in winning the heat.

Paul Sawyer's "Belligero" won the first heat, but caught fire in the second and was forced to withdraw.

10,000 Present

Over 10,000 spectators dotted the slopes of the tree-fringed nautical amphitheatre that borders the Picton course. The weather was perfect. A blazing August sun shone down on a colorful picture. The Royal Canadian Navy (R) ships "dressed" with gay bunting, policed the course.

Craft, from the snooty cabin cruisers, and sail-furled yachts, to the humble canoe, putt-putting outboards and teen-occupied canoes lined the course.

But there was a noticeable lack of craft crowding the course. The regatta was run off in a smooth sequence of events, which plus ideal weather conditions, drivers and others, co-operation resulted in one of the finest regattas ever staged by the Prince Edward Yacht Club.

In fact, Commodore Frank Harris, Wellington, expressed his pleasure at the way in which the regatta was conducted.

Splendid Regatta

"This has been one of the finest regattas I have ever attended," he said, "and that is not because I am the commodore..

"We had the finest co-operation we have had in years, from drivers and others connected with the regatta. The different events were run off without incident. We had no interference and it was all these factors that made it in my opinion, this year's regatta one of the best in history.

Wings Appear Likely to Win Int. Loop Flag

(By The Associated Press)

It's been 10 years since Rochester won an international league pennant, but the Red Wings appear to be a shoo-in this season.

With little more than a month of play remaining, the Wings hold a six-game bugle on runner-up Baltimore Orioles. Montreal, in third place, is 6 1-2 out. Then comes a big gap to fourth-place Jersey City —11 games off Rochester's pace.

Prospect of the Red Wings folding in the stretch is remote. They've got by far, the hardest-hitting outfit in the loop, and their pitching rates with the best.

They blasted Baltimore 7-2 last night. Shortstop Dick Cole featured a 10-hit attack on two Oriole moundsmen with a three-run homer in the seventh. It eased George Copeland's seventh victory. Bill Kennedy suffered his fifth loss against 12 wins.

Montreal meanwhile, trimmed Springfield 10-2. Jack Banta scattered eight hits in registering his fourth triumph compared to five setbacks. He lost his shutout in the ninth when Bob Thurman hit a two-run homer. Bob Spicer was charged with the loss.

Jersey City, sparked by Chet Laabs, walloped Buffalo Bisons 8-3. Laabs cracked his 21st circuit clout in the third inning with a mate on to clinch Roger Bowman's 11th success.

Syracuse and Toronto split a doubleheader. Syracuse won the opener 2-1 on Elbert Flint's eighth-inning single, but the Leafs rebounded in the nightcap to win 3-0 on Ken Trinkle's four-hitter.

MEMOS WIN IN 10TH.

Brockville, Aug. 8 (CP)—Bob Turner's 10th inning homer gave Brockville Memos a 3-2 victory over Batawa Shoemen in a Central Ontario Baseball League game here Monday. Batawa had come from behind with single runs in the eighth and ninth innings to tie the score.

Batawa 000 000 011 0—2 8 5
Brockville 000 000 200 1—3 10 2

Hambletonian Most Open Race In Many Years

Goshen, N.Y., Aug. 8. (AP)—The old pros of the grand circuit, usually ready enough to pick their Hambletonian choice and back it with dollars, won't go out on the limb this time.

The silver anniversary of North America's three-year-old trotting classic rolls around tomorrow at Goshen's Good Time park with at least half-a-dozen horses getting top attention. These are too evenly matched to make a pick, say the drivers.

A check showed anywhere from nine to 14 starters.

It costs $500 to start, and several owners have decided that's a pretty good chunk just for exercise. Thus, instead of the $85,000 gross value that had been figured, it probably will be $10,000 less. If it hits $75,000 it still will be a record for the race. The 1926 inaugural was worth $73,451.

The half-dozen leading contenders are Star's Pride, Florican, Lusty Song, Lord Steward, King's Ransom and Darn Flashy.

Del Miller of Clemmons, N.C, has driven Lusty Song and Star's Pride. He'll be in Lusty Song's sulky tomorrow.

"Both are perfect racers, extremely evenly matched," he said. "The breaks will count."

Lusty Song, owned by the Hayes Fair Acres stable, Duquoin, Ill., went the mile in 2:02 2-5 during a workout last Friday. That is the fastest time for any three-year-old this season in either a race or work.

Florican is owned by E. R. Harriman of Arden, N.Y. Harriman also is half owned of Star's Pride, who will start coupled with Florican in the betting—and the probable favorite. L. B. Sheppard of Hanover, Pa., is the co-owner.

Tom Berry, 68-year-old Hambletonian veteran, figures the top three to be Star's Pride, Florican and Lusty Song—and not in that order. He has a dark horse in King's Ransom.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Batting: Mike Goliat, Phillies—Hit single, double and triple, driving home four runs, in Philadelphia's 9-0 romp over Cardinals.

Pitching: Ken Johnson, Phillies—Held former mates to two singles in winning fourth game without a defeat.

NAPANEE RIDER WINS

Gananoque, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP)—Ivan Wager of Napanee, almost a newcomer to motorcycle racing won two events Monday in Gananoque's second annual motorcycle race program.

On a machine he has owned less than a week, he raced home in the semi-final and final of the senior under-30-cubic inches division.

Bruce Hickey of Drummondville, Que, retained the championship he won last year with victories in the unlimited class and the open race for machines over-30-cubic-inches.

Kitty Touchers

Never in the history of the Corbin Gold Cup was the committee greeted with such beautiful weather for their annual tournament. A bright sun flooded the greens, with a cool breeze being enjoyed by the bowlers.

The 'Spider' competition which opened the tournament was won by Bill Wright of the local club. The money obtained from this competition is used to promote bowling and buying equipment in the military hospitals throughout the province.

During the opening ceremonies Mayor H.J. Allin and Ald. Claude D. Tice, chairman of Tourist and Publicity, welcomed the bowlers on behalf of the city. A. E. Wonnacott, president of the local club conducted the ceremonies giving the official opening of the club later. Turning over the 'mike' to Cliff Argue, general chairman of the tournament. He called on L. E. McLean, whose company donated the trophy and who won it last year, W. D. Connor, general chairman of the Ontario tournament and Howard Hanton, secretary treasurer of the Corbin Tourney. Each hoped for all a fine day of bowling.

The women's section of the bowling club made an outstanding contribution to the success of the tournament. Mrs. William Gilbert and her entire commitee and membership served hot meals during the entire day. The meals were delightful and served in a graceful manner and the bowlers expressed their appreciation of their efforts.

On the first round the Belleville rinks won four out of eight games. Wilfrid Price was defeated by Donahue of Teeswater, 16-9; A. E. Wonnacott won from Whiteman of Montreal 21-11; L. E. McLean, winner of the trophy last year, defeated Harry Williams of Port Hope 25-9; Austin Watkin was defeated by Harry Curtis of Kingston 15-8; Ernie Vanner lost to J. Smart of Niagara Falls 19-10, while Fred Harper was defeated by the same score by Downey of Peterborough and Clarence Clapp won from E. McFayden of Cobourg 15-14.

In the second round A Hosie of Cornwall defeated J. W. Davison 12-11, W. E. Conn of Brighton defeated Ernie Vanner 18-15; Art McConnell of Brighton beat A. E. Wonnacott 15-8; Austin Watkin won from Bert Jefferies of Peterborough 16-11, Sam Netley of Brighton took Clarence Clapp 17-9; Tom Askwith of Ottawa won from Wilfred Price 19-7 and L. E. McLean won his second game from Morley Gault of Kingston 23-8.

In the third round Wonnacott beat McGee of Montreal 15-5, Davision was beaten by Ashman of Toronto 30-7; Price beat Bowling of Kingston 17-9; Clapp was beaten by Watson of Madoc 12-10, Harper lost to Myers of Campbellford 10-9; Vanner beat Harrison of Kingston 26-6 and Austin Watkin was beaten by Mathison of Havelock 16-15.

CLOSER TO ANTWERP

St. John's, Newfoundland, on the Atlantic coast of Canada, is closer to Antwerp, Belgium, than to Vancouver.

Batawa Shoemen Hold Brockville To 14-Inning Tie

Pandemonium not only reigned it poured Saturday evening as the Batawa Shoemen and the Brockville Memoes struggled through a 7-7 14 inning contest that was called at ten minutes to twelve because there was no Belleville by-law permitting Sunday sport.

Cause of two near riots were close plays in the bottom of the ninth inning as the trailing Shoemen came to life to score four runs to tie the ball game. Earl Bush led off the inning taking first on an error to the Brockville shortstop. Gord Muffitt singled with Bush going all the way in when the centrefielder bobbled the ball. Muffitt took second on the throw-in to the plate. Rankin walked and the two runners advanced on a passed ball. Semark struck out and Mac Carson rapped a sharp one to short, which was missed as Muffitt scored and the runners were safe all round. Cec Solmes then drilled one to third. Rickey came up with the ball and threw to second but Carson slid in under the attempted tag and the riot was on. Brockville players swarmed around base-umpire Red Townsend like angry hornets but as usual came out second best. Brockville manager Ben Oakey continued to protest so loudly and at such length that he was finally tossed out of the park.

Score Tying Run

When some semblance of order was restored the Shoemen had three runs in, with Carson at second, Solmes at first, and one out. Dick Bridgeman hoisted one to second for the second out and then Mac Watson slammed one into left field and Carson came sliding in with tieing run .The throw to the plate eluded the catcher and Solmes broke for home. He went in sliding as the pitcher took the relay. The stands and the Bata team went wild thinking that he had scored but went even wilder when plate umpire Ray McClure called Solmes out.

The lid blew right off the Batawa tempers at this one with everyone in the park but Umpire McClure ready to take an oath that Solmes was safe, with the ultimate result that Solmes was out and the ball game was tied.

Called For Curfew

Both teams resumed the struggle amid the gnashing of teeth and played on grimly for five more innings until plate umpire McClure called the game at ten to twelve because there was no by-law in the city permitting Sunday sport.

Hank Dul went all the way for Brockville walking four, striking out eight and being nicked for nine hits and seven runs. Peacock started for the locals and in one and two thirds innings walked three, struck out five, and gave up four hits for five runs. Gord Muffitt went the rest of the way in relief walking two, whiffing nine, and surrendering five hits for two runs.

Furgol Leading Field at Chicago By Two Strokes

Chicago, Aug. 8. (AP)—Ed Furgol, golf's gamest pro, today was on the track of his first major title in six years of tournament play.

He led the field by two strokes with 211—five under par—into the final round of the $15,000 All-American meet at Tam O'Shanter.

The first prize is $2,500—a jackpot which would boost 1950 earnings for the lame-armed player from Royal Oak, Mich., nearly twofold if he wins.

Five others far down the financial list also are contending in the "Poor Man's Showdown".

At 213 are Skip Alexander of Knoxville, Tenn., and Dave Douglas from Newark, Del.

At 214 is young Fred Hawkins from El Paso, Tex.

At 215 are South Africa's Bobby Locke, Skee Riegel of Tulsa, Okla., and Lloyd Mangrum. Only one stroke behind them is Sam Snead, the 1950 top money winner.

Mangrum, defending all-American champion, sped into contention yesterday with a 68 while Furgol, Alexander and Locke posted 69's.

Furgol is the sentimental favorite.

'I'm just a 33-year-old guy with a lot of mileage and a crooked arm," he says. He has had to groove a swing with tremendous body action to compensate for his shrivelled left arm, result of a fall from a playground climbing bar when he was 12.

Furgol won the All-American amateur title at Tam O'Shanter in 1944 and soon afterward turned pro. He finished third in the 1947 All-American pro and collected $3,300, his biggest single money win.

While the pros enter their final today, British amateur champion Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., and Wilford Wehrle of Ormond, Fla., meet in an 18-hole amateur playoff. Stranahan rallied for a closing 69 yesterday to total 291 —a figure matched by Wehrle with a final par 72.

MUST END GAMING

Tallahassee, Fla., Aug. 8 —(AP) — Governor Fuller Warren has clamped a 30-day deadline on gambling in Florida. He gave sheriffs and constables until Sept. 6 to end gaming under a threat of summary suspension.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Let me bite my initial on a bridge ruling charmful: When it's not beneficial let your lead be least harmful.

Just when I seem to get singleton leads over to an audience, Akoolap Oxhead throws me a dead fish. He wants to know why I keep avoiding the mention of where to class the lead of a lone king.

The lead of a singleton king does not deserve the dignity of being mentioned in the same breath with self-respecting lead rules. Of all the undesirable leads, the lead of a singleton king is worst.

When it is not an ace, the lead of any singleton is bad enough. Because a singleton lead comes in the last group of lead choices. But a singleton king lead drops to the bottom of that last choice.

South is in four spades and it is your opening lead from this west hand:

♠9 6 2
♥A 9 7 4 2
♦K 8 6 4
♣K

Do not lead a suit bid by opponents. So, refrain from leading spades. Do not lead away from an ace or a king against a suit bid. So, refrain from leading one of your red suits.

The lead of a club would thus be indicated. But not if it is a singleton king. Almost anything but that. In preference, do one of the other undesirable things.

Hold your hand close to your chest and wait for someone else to lead the club suit. Declarer will no doubt finesse that suit and you will trick with the lone king. At any rate it is not unlikely.

The lead of a king is in the choice group known as tops. It is led only when top of a sequence or when accompanied by the ace and one or more others. Never should it be led when alone.

Of course, it is sometimes possible to find partner with ace or queen of that suit. But the lead of a singleton king is usually into the jaws of death.

Partner, partner, if you can't help me then please don't help that bear.

Toronto Soccer Team Defeats Belleville 2-0

East York United from the Toronto Senior Soccer League beat the Bay of Quinte All Stars yesterday afternoon by two goals to nothing at the Fairgrounds in Belleville. Owing to the other attractions being held in the district the crowd was rather disappointing but those who did turn out were treated to a grand exhibition of the soccer art by the East York squad.

Some delay was caused at the start of the match as both teams were scheduled to play in the same colors and the local boys had to muster up alternatively strips from Trenton. East York won the toss and elected to start with the wind and sun advantage. They attacked strongly from the start and had Blaker and the Quinte defence on their toes in order to keep their goal intact. The local boys were some little time in settling down.

The first goal came after about fifteen minutes of play and was scored by Holmes on a cross pass from Cameron. Cameron on the right wing was responsible for East York's second goal which came within about a quarter of an hour of play remaining in the first period from a very good individual effort. Cameron, by the way, is the coach of the visiting team and has only been in this country a matter of months. Apparently he has played soccer in very good company for years gone by as he was a professional with Huddersfield Town of the English First Division and with several top class Scottish clubs.

In the first half the local boys definitely had the edge and came near to reducing the lead on several occasions but were thwarted by the fine display of goalkeeping by Lavender in the East York net. Gemmel had bad luck with one shot which was parried by the visiting goalie, and Eric Helyer had one shot which was marked goal all the way turned over the crossbar by the East York goalie. In the latter stages of the game Gemmel missed from a spot kick that he shot into Lavender's hands.

Jack Jones was the referee and put up a very sound display. Chalky Whyte, the All Star right back, played his usual good game in the defence.

After the game the visitors were entertained to dinner by the Bay of Quinte F.A. in the Queen's Hotel.

The teams:

Bay of Quinte All Stars —Blaker (Belleville Utd.); Whyte, Kendall, (Trenton Flyers) Rimer (6 R.D.); Mueller (Batawa); Lane (Belleville Utd.); E. Helyer, (Trenton Merchants); Gill (Batawa); Gemmel (Belleville Utd.); T. Timsa (Batawa); Ellis (Vets); Subs: Cox (Belleville Utd.); F. Jones (Navy).

East York United — Lavender, Knowles, Bingham, Ritchie, Clarke, Rickarby, Cameron, Brett, Holmes, James, Barker. Subs: Noseworthy, Lowden.

MARMORA

Havelock Loses To Marmora By 5-2 Score

Marmora — Owing to falling light, the second half of the seventh inning in Marmora's T.V.L. game with Havelock on the latter's grounds on Friday evening could not be played when Marmora was leading by the score of 12-2. The winners' score therefore had to revert back to the standing at the end of the fifth, victory being theirs by the score of 5-2. Both Darrah for Marmora and Nobes for the losers turned in good games on the mound. The former had six strikeouts and his first experience of getting three in one inning—the fourth. Brown, Killian and Brooks got two baggers for their team in the innings which counted. Glenn, Thompson and Buchanan were effective for Havelock. The teams meet again in the final scheduled game at Deloro on Monday evening, this game being a postponed one from July 27th when Havelock failed to raise a team.

Teams— Marmora — Jones lf; Brown ss; Drummond 1b; Killian 2b; Dikun cf; Hetkey rf; Borland c; Brooks 3b; Darrah p; Sweet rf.

Havelock —McCabe 2b; Thompson cf; Cosgrove 3b; Smith c; Heath 1b; McMullen rf; Hill ss; lf; Buchanan lf, rf; Nobes p; Glenn ss.

Score by innings		R.H.E.
Marmora	300 20x	5 5 1
Havelock	110 00x	2 3 1

FRANKFORD

Don Boyle Hurls Frankford to 11-1 Win Over Hastings

Frankford— Frankford handed Hastings an 11-1 setback at the Frankford park Friday night. Behind the neat three-hit pitching of Don Boyle, Frankford had Hastings blanked until a walk, a single and a costly error brought in Hastings' only tally, unearned, to spoil Boyle's shutout. Although Frankford got only six hits, they were greatly assisted as the Hastings defence booted the ball around nine times. For the visitors, West pitched a good game, and deserved a much better fate than he suffered with the lack of defence behind him. Despite the lop-sided score, Hastings played right down to the wire, and provided plenty of laughs for the spectators with their good natured ribbing of the Frankford players.

Line Score
Hastings	000 000 001	1 3 9
Frankford	015 400 10x	11 6 1

Hastings: West and Fife; Frankford: Boyle and Murphy.

A meeting of the Sidney Softball League executive was held in Frankford Friday evening to discuss two disputed games between Wallbridge and Johnstown. After weighing the facts, the one game was thrown out as no contest. The other game was awarded to Johnstown on the grounds that the Wallbridge team had refused to continue play after a disagreement had arisen over an umpire's decision. The next game of the semi-final series will be played Tuesday night either in Johnstown or Frankford.

Fool-Proof Lock Designed by Man In Penitentiary

Vancouver, (CP)—He's given them a bit of trouble in his time, but now he's the fair-haired boy of local locksmiths.

That's 62 - year - old Frank Dewey, who recently walked out of the federal penitentiary in New Westminster for the umpteenth time, with an invention that may lose him some of his best friends—a pick proof lock.

Frank says it's impossible to pick the lock and locksmiths here who spent half an hour's labor on the invention—operating with delicate burglar tools—say he's right. Only a once-in-a-million fluke could do the trick, they say.

But Frank, who has spent only seven and a half years out of jail since 1924, says he never doubted his brain child's success from the moment he completed a working model of it in the penitentiary blacksmith shop.

The lock was turned out by the stock, cheerful convict in spare hours during a three-year sentence given him in 1947.

Lifetime Job

The burglar's bugbear—Frank's "twin master lock"—contains the customary pins or tumblers, which cause the opening action upon being juggled by the correct key.

What makes the lock well-nigh fool proof are "thousands of combinations," which Frank says would take a burglar's lifetime to run through.

A would-be Jimmy man's task is made even more difficult by the lock's failure to open until the cylinder turns a preliminary 30 degrees. And at 30 degrees certain pins are sealed from probing picks, preventing the lock from opening.

During a brief respite from prison in the mid-forties, Frank patented another lock with the backing of a Vancouver specialty baker, but it was never put into production.

This time Frank is hopeful of making enough on his invention to buy a fishing boat and stay out of trouble for good. Vancouver police would appreciate the effort.

FLIERS BAIL OUT

Muroc, Calif., Aug. 5 — (AP) — Two fliers bailed out safely as a United States Navy AJ-1 attack bomber crashed yesterday in the first reported failure of the plane designed especially to carry an atomic bomb.

Pilot Daniel Darnell, Jr., 30, and co-pilot Charles E. Poage, 27, testing for North American Aviation, makers of the plane, parachuted from 15,000 feet when the plane's right engine was torn away.

The navy is spending more than $12,000,000 on the development of the twin-engine AJ-1.

African Bushmen Greet Cameramen With Rare Amity

Pretoria, Transvaal — (CP) — Bushmen have little love for white men and few Europeans have seen this primitive, dying race in its natural surroundings—the arid bush-covered Kalahari desert.

On a recent photographic trip to the Kalahari, George Michael, a Pretoria camera enthusiast, was fortunate enough to find a family of eight bushmen friendly enough to allow him to spend two hours with them and to take a colour motion picture.

He heard of the family from a native guide and travelled by jeep far into the desert in search of them. After five hours they found a few crude igloo-shaped grass huts.

An aged bushman met the visitors with a sturdy 30-inch bow and a number of sharp metal and bone-tipped arrows in his hands.

Through the native interpreter who had to use sign language, Michael intimated that he had come in peace.

"The bushman stood less than four feet six inches, and his only clothing was a tattered leather moochie," said Michael. "He must have been about 60, but his lithe, sinewy body was that of a man of 25 in excellent physical condition."

Soon after, two women and five children appeared from the bush. The children had distended bellies, but the women were slim and wiry and even shorter than the male.

After exchanging greetings, Michael gave the children candy. To indicate that it could be eaten he put a piece in his mouth and chewed it. The children did the same and seemed delighted.

The bushmen hunt small game with snares made from leather thongs or plaited grass, but larger game is hunted and killed with poison arrows. A farmer in the district said the bushmen are incredibly fast runners and have enough stamina to chase a buck all day until the animal is so fatigued that the hunter can come in close enough to kill it with a poisoned arrow or spear.

Water in the desert is precious and is used only for drinking purposes. No bushman would dream of washing his body.

Before he left Michael gave the old bushman a hunter's pocket knife. As a gesture of gratitude which he could not express in words, the bushman broke into a fast-tempo dance, stamping his feet in short sharp hops, slapping his thighs and clicking his tongue with pleasure.

Corruption Among Bureaucrats Becoming Serious Problem in Russia

Stockholm, (Reuters)—Corruption among bureaucrats is becoming a serious problem in Soviet Russia, according to newspapers from Moscow and other parts of the country reaching here.

It seems to be worst in the building trades and on the collective farms.

Big newspapers are reporting abuses and deficiencies but local censorship seems as tight as ever.

Foreign diplomats arriving in Stockholm say that newspapers from Kiev, Kharkov, Tomsk and other provincial towns are not allowed to be sold in Moscow. Some of these provincial newspapers are reaching Stockholm, however.

Nikita Krushiev, recently appointed communist party leader for the Moscow province, complains in a full page article in "Pravda" that farmers are breaking the collective farms law by selling land to private individuals and embezzling farms property.

"Labor discipline," he said, "must be strengthened to fight these vagabonds who are causing heavy losses to the public."

Hinting that farm managers are most often the guilty ones, he called for fewer bureaucrats.

"Izvestia" quoted the case of the public prosecutor in remote Tomsk who "took seven good horses from a collective farm and left in their place seven others of such poor quality that five fell dead in a short time."

A comrade Nison of Tomsk, interviewed by the same newspaper, expressed the view that it is "almost impossible to stop these thefts."

"Purging" Suggested

Similar "embezzlements," as the Russian press calls these offences, are taking place in Estonia, incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940.

The principal communist newspaper "Rahva Haal" reported that "Bourgeois nationalists have sneaked into the collective farms and are trying to sabotage the spring sowings.

"Some have even become farm leaders or farm bookkeepers," it added. "They must be unmasked and purged."

"Izvestia" reported that "state funds are being embezzled and squandered" in war-damaged Kiev.

"The building board," the newspaper declared, "swarms with cheats and embezzlers."

As an example, it quotes a bill for 557,000 roubles (about $150,000) for repairing two blocks of flats in the city.

"The total value of the work done did not exceed 200,000 roubles," it said. "The rest was stolen."

"Izvestia" gives examples of how it was done. The repairs board submitted a bill for 8,000 roubles for repairing iron grills in the two buildings, though, "a very inexperienced eye could see that the grill was very old and had been only slightly repaired and painted."

In the same way, the board received 4,500 roubles for new brickword on 94 chimneys. "But there were only 65 chimneys and not one of them had been touched," Izvestia stated.

The Gentle Heart

By Kay Hamilton

He looked startled. "Oh, nothin' I guess."

"No can do," she told him in good nature. "It you are nothing, you are not. You don't exist."

"Well," a reluctant smile tugged at the corners of his mouth, "I'm not sure yet. But I think I'd like to be a civil engineer. You know, roads, and bridges, and dams and things."

"That would be interesting work" Jenny acknowledged. "And the sort of thing which would give you a real feeling of accomplishment. You could always look at the road or the dam, and say 'I helped make that.' Yes, that sounds like a real career."

Dick swelled a little under Jenny's indirect praise, and soon thereafter offered to go to bed. "I got to get up early. Pete's going to take me over to he high school here."

If she was surprised at his calling his father "Pete" she did not show it. "The high school is quite a jaunt from here. The township is large and Green Ridge pupils have to go to Ackroy. But it's a good school, I understand.

His face was back in the sullen mask again. "Prob-ly some hick joint," he muttered and left the room.

"Good night!" Jenny called. But he did not answer.

Natalie turned to her sister with a worried air. "Is he going to be difficult, do you think? He seems so cold and rude."

"He isn't though," Jenny said, remembering the lonely figure outside the Torres house on the dark street. "He's neither difficult, nor cold, nor rude. He's simply unhappy, poor kid."

Brent had a proposition for the two girls. "Look," he said, "I can start hunting for a studio right away, or I can stay on here. And I don't mind telling you I'd rather stay here, if you'll have me."

Natalie twinkled. "It's mutual," she said. "You're really quite a comfort, Brent. I find I work better with a little company in the studio. And besides, I'll soon be going into New York to the museum and rustling around for new ideas, and you can have it to yourself for a good part of the next two weeks. Also," she added frankly, "we can use the forty dollars very well."

So it was settled that Brent would stay. Now that he knew he had a job, he was working very hard on his paintings for the bus company series. Almost every day his models arrived at the studio door—young, brawny men to pose as farmers or fishermen or factory workers; middle-aged women of the housewifely type; young girls pert, or pretty, or serious looking; elderly men with watery blue eyes and gnarled, mishapen hands.

It was like living in the old days Jenny thought happily. The days when her father had worked in the same studio on much the same sort of illustrations. Brent had learned his lessons well at Jerome Mayhew's feet. He had an economy of line, a natural flair for characterization, and a genuinely decorative sense of composition. The sketches grew until there was a fat portfolio bulging with them.

Ruthven had often served as a model for Mr. Mayhew, and he was used to posing. "Don't seem right," he had murmured the first few times he had done it, "to take money for sittin' still." But he had a lively imagination and could throw himself into the part demanded better than the most professional models. The word got around, and several of Mr. Mayhew's friends who lived in the neighborhood had tried to engage him, but Ruthven had refused.

"Nope," he had said with decision, "got to work for my money or my ma'll turn over in her grave." And he would not be persuaded. But Brent Evans was practically a Mayhew in his opinion, and he made an exception for him.

Jenny had asked Dick how he liked the school when he returned after his first day. "All right," he had answered briefly, and would not enlarge on this. Jenny sensed that things were not "all right" and made an excuse to run over to the Torres' that afternoon. She was shocked at Elsa's pallor and look of near exhaustion.

"Here, sit down with me a few minutes," she said. "I'm as good an excuse as you'll get to stop work, so make use of me. And tell me about your trip home with Dick," she had added.

Elsa sat down with a sigh of complete weariness. "Isn't it queer," she said meditatively, "how you can go along in a comfortable rut for years and years, with never a thought of change, and then from one minute to the next your whole life is altered? That's what happened to Pete and me when we got the letter about Dick. From that moment on, we have been tearing around, working like a couple of madmen, and worried sick, to boot. If I thought this sort of thing were going to last, I'd go out and jump in the Sound!"

Jenny laughed. "Your bark is worse than your bite. And I've known you to 'tear around' before when you had a big order for one of your Westport clients that had to be done in a jiffy."

Elsa sniffed. "That wasn't work," she protested; "that was doing what I like to do. And besides," she said seriously, "I've always been able to be independent in my designing. If I didn't feel like rushing, I could simply turn the order down. And I often did. But you can't take on a fourteen-year-old boy one week, and toss him out the next, simply because you don't feel like having him around. No, this is different. This is a job that I can see stretching ahead of me for years and years. And, Jenny, I'm frightened."

"Frightened? Why?"

"I feel so inadequate. What do I know about boys? I was an only child. I never knew boys except as 'dates.' I don't know anything about them, really."

Jenny said, with a confidence that was largely assumed, "All you have to remember is that they're human."

But Elsa shook her head. "Human Sometimes I doubt it. If you could have seen a couple of the displays Dick put on when we were coming home, the scenes he made in public, the—the horridness of him! He was definitely subhuman, if you ask me."

Jenny's heart sank. What an unfortunate start for the three of them as a family unit! She asked curiously, "Do you dislike him?"

Elsa looked surprised. "Why, no, I don't. I should think I would, but really I feel sorry for the kid. I can't forget his mother, and her completely callous relinquishment of him. I'm glad you reminded me, or I might have been acting like a heel."

She took Jenny upstairs to the unfinished room above where her sewing paraphernalia had been deposited "Just look at this mess," she sighed. "I've got three orders on hand, too. Fortunately, two of them are for Faith, and I'm working on them at her home instead of here. I just had to. This place is a madhouse right now."

Mention of Faith reminded Jenny of something. "When is her mother-in-law coming?" she asked. "Has she heard yet?"

Elsa waved one long-fingered hand in a wide gesture. "Didn't you know? She came last night. Faith ran over to tell me this morning."

"Last night?" Jenny cried. "I suppose we were too excited with Dick's advent to notice."

Elsa shook her head. "It wasn't that early. You were probably asleep when she came. Some ungodly late train, nearly midnight, because she missed the one she should have taken from Grand Central. And, of course, Max was there when she came!"

"Oh, dear!" Jenny was dismayed. "And after all the plans Faith had made to have their engagement kept secret! Do you think Mrs. Owen - - -"

"Guessed?" Elsa grinned. "Faith says she was so tired and nervous, she didn't seem to notice anything. And when she heard he was Ken's friend, she was so glad to meet him, she kept him talking for another hour before they could get her off to bed."

Jenny was relieved. "Well, I'll have to scoot," she said. "Ruthven is washing the windows on the outside this afternoon, and I said I'd do them on the inside, so I'd better get going. It's late."

She found that Dick had spent an ecstatic afternoon exploring the attic, and that evening he ventured into the studio. His patronizing air soon disappeared before his real curiosity about the various gadgets. He spent a solid half hour trying to work the camera lucida, and finally gave up in defeat. "Gosh, I bet I'm cross-eyed!" he had declared when he tried to see normally again.

The lights and reflectors, Lulu, the life-size figure the paper cabinets, the T-squares and triangles and compasses on Natalie's drawing table all interested him even though he tried occasionally to disguise his interest lest it be construed as a sign of weakness. But he obviously had more respect for the profession of illustrator when he had finished his inspection.

STRONG YANK ATTACKS FORCE RED RETREATS

Western Delegates Map Plan to Break Red Stranglehold

Security Council of U.N. Stopped in Its Tracks

By A. I. GOLDBERG

Lake Success, Aug. 9 — (AP) — Members of the United Nations Security Council mapped strategy today to break Russian President Jakob Malik's one-man stranglehold and filibuster which has stopped the council in its tracks.

The Russians were not invited to informal conferences which occupied most other delegations. The council recessed yesterday until Thursday afternoon after getting nowhere.

Taking the floor when he wished as Soviet delegate, Malik threw a resolution into the council seeking to condemn the United States Air Force for bombings in North Korea. He charged the U. S. is the aggressor in Korea, dictating the role the U. N. is playing.

Warren R. Austin, U. S. delegation chief, retorted:

Who hasn't co-operated with 53 other U. N. members in the Korean action? Who could call off the North Korea invaders? What member of this Security Council is assisting the invaders in the Security Council?

Refused Resolution

In each case, he answered himself: "The Soviet Union."

But Malik refused to allow Austin's resolution of July 31, denouncing the North Koreans and demanding that aid for them be outlawed, to come up for discussion. He refused to seat the South Korean representative unless the council agreed to hear a North Korean.

Malik wanted the council to meet today and talk about the bombing of North Korea but was voted down 9 to 1, with one abstention—Yugoslavia.

After the meeting Ernest Gross a U.S. delegate, said a number of courses are possible to meet Malik's obstruction.

Could Change Rules

The most extreme, he said, would be to change the rules of the council of electing a president and make them effective immediately virtually throwing Malik out of the chair.

Another extreme move — he stressed these are possible but not probable—would be to have no more meetings this month.

Another would be to transfer the problems to a specially-called session of the general assembly where Russia doesn't have a veto. Secretary-General Trygve Lie said Monday a session could convene in 4 hours if conditions warranted it.

Gross said there has been no question of trying to expel Russia from the U.N. for not carrying out its obligations.

Montreal-Toronto Trip Made in Thirty Minutes

Montreal, Aug. 9 (CP) — The CF-100 "Canuck" zoomed at an average speed of 638 miles an hour last night to establish what is believed to be a Toronto-Montreal speed record, completing the 325-air-mile jaunt in 30 minutes and 10 seconds.

An experimental jet fighter, the "Canuck" was flown here to take part in trials today before Defence Minister Claxton and Senior RCAF officials at suburban Dorval airport.

The CF-100, a long-range reconnaissance and night jet fighter, was sighted over Dorval airport at 7:34:10, exactly 30 minutes and 10 seconds after it took off from Toronto's Malton airport.

RCAF officials here said it was undoubtedly a record but could not immediately find previous marks with which to compare times.

(An RCAF spokesman in Ottawa said the speed of the fighter was "no surprise." But he could not supply any immediate comparisons.)

Bill Waterton, a former RCAF Squadron Leader, piloted the aircraft. The Edmonton airman has been test pilot since the CF-100 was built by the A. V. Roe Company of Toronto and will fly the plane in the demonstrations.

The show was called to test the first Canadian-built F-86 (Sabre) jet fighters which holds the official world speed record of 670 miles an hour. The RCAF plans to adopt this day fighter as a first-line plane and Canadair, Ltd., here already have begun production of 100 of the planes.

Waterton described the flight as "quite uneventful."

The Edmonton native, now living in England, has been on loan to the A. V. Roe Company of Toronto, builders of the CF-100, since January for test flights.

Waterton said he flew at an altitude of 22,000 feet. "Visibility was not too good at that altitude," he said, "and a couple of times I found myself a bit south of my course."

$64,000 Grant For Hastings Home for Aged

Toronto, Aug. 9 — (CP) — Representing half of the cost of construction completed to date, the Ontario government today granted the Hastings Home for the Aged $64,000. Total cost of the project is estimated at between $350,000 and $400,000 of which the government will contribute half.

The grant was made under legislation passed in 1949 in which the government agreed to share equally with municipalities the construction of accommodation for the aged.

"Good county homes eases the pressure on our hospitals both general and mental by being able to look after aged people," Welfare Minister Goodfellow said. Three such homes were in process of construction while one at Sault Ste. Marie had been completed.

The minister said that a similar home would open in Belleville shortly and that the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry were building one near Cornwall. Ontario county will build near Whitby.

The minister said that eventually provision would be made for the care of married couples without the necessity of separating them.

CABINET FACING MANY DECISIONS IN DEFENCE PLANS

Billion Dollar Budget For Defence Possibility

Ottawa, Aug. 9 — (CP)—Cabinet meets today for one of a series of meetings that will map out a defence preparedness program without parallel in Canadian history.

Its first objective is the program to be placed before the special session of Parliament to be called within six or seven weeks. But the full effect probably won't be felt until next year when its financial reflection could be the first $1,000,000,000-a-year defence budget peace-time Canada has known.

Design and scope of the program will be governed, it is indicated authoritatively, by two major factors — the international situation and the government's gauge of Canadian public opinion.

Ottawa's official approach to the international crisis raised by Korea has been one of serious caution geared to those two factors. It already has led to dispatch of sea and air aid for the United Nations' effort in Korea, to announcement of steps to recruit a special army brigade for service in Korea or elsewhere and to moves to step up armament production sharply over a wide field.

Public reaction to those moves is being watched closely from the East Block. In the meantime, some people in authority feel communism's aggression in Korea has elements of a blessing in disguise.

May Meet Every Week

Cabinet's meeting today is expected to be followed by regular gatherings at least once or twice a week from now until Parliament is recalled. Defence preparations will be their dominant issue.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, his summer holiday already interrupted five times by trips to Ottawa, is planning to leave for his summer home at St. Patrice, Que., for brief, sporadic visits in the weeks ahead.

He will be on hand here for most or all of the cabinet meetings that are expected to jell a program that eventually will include higher taxes, certain controls, Canadian arms aid for Europe, a role as part of North American production team and possible declaration of a state of emergency that would give the government sweeping powers.

Canada's defence budget for this fiscal year, ending next March 31, so far is $425,000,000. That will be sharply increased but informed opinion is that the increase won't be as high as $250,000,000 because recruiting and war production can't be speeded that fast.

But by this time next year, production of warplanes, radar and other vital equipment will be in full stride, and Canada may be helping fight a U. N. war and the bills could mount to a record $1,000,000,000.

American Soldiers Now Convinced 'The Gooks' Are First-Rate Fighters

With U.S. Troops in Korea, Aug. 9 (AP) —After being pushed back steadily for five weeks, the American soldier has decided that what he calls "the Gooks" are first-rate fighting men.

United States soldiers first held the North Koreans in complete contempt as a jokester army. They regarded them as a rabble of barbarians in arms, who would crumble and run at the first shock of real battle.

The two below-strength infantry companies which first made a contact with the communists by artillery fire July 5 were left dazed and unbelieving by the resulting reaction.

They had expected to be heavily outnumbered. What they hadn't expected was to be outnumbered by a trained group of fighters with more tanks, anti-tank guns and automatic weapons than the Americans had.

The situation continues, and the American soldier hasn't yet got over it. He still hasn't adjusted to the fact that "the Gooks" are ready, willing and able to fight two types of warfare—guerrilla warfare from the hills and modern scientific armored warfare in the valleys.

The American soldier today is confused and baffled by the fact that so far in Korea he hasn't been able to meet the communists on equal terms. Only the United Nations forces' big edge in the air kept the Korea venture from becoming a disaster.

The American ground soldier is rather resentful that his country wasn't geared to give him tools in quantity and quality to overwhelm "these gook-suit hillbillies."

Thinks 12 Allied Divisions Would Hold Russian Attack On W. Europe For Year

Paris, Aug. 9 —(AP)— A high French official said today six American and six British divisions stationed in Germany would keep a Russian attack away from Western Europe for at least a year, and perhaps permanently.

In that year, he said, Europe could go a long way toward establishing its own adequate defence forces — providing all-out American aid was given.

The official, who asked that his name be withheld, said the actual presence of more American troops would remove one great European fear — the belief that a Russian attack would result in quick occupation of all of Europe before the United States came to the rescue.

The presence of American soldiers, he continued, would convince the Russians even more than U.S. action in Korea that aggression in Europe would mean immediate war with the U.S.

But the French remember that American aid came in the First World War only after France was nearly beaten, and in the Second War only after the country had

Briton Calls For Germany's Participation in W. Defence On Equal Terms With Others

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 9 — (AP) —Robert Boothby of Britain called today for Germany's participation in western defence on equal terms with other countries.

In the first major statement in the European Consultative Assembly from a member of the British Conservative party, Boothby claimed that Western Europe's defences are "for all practical purposes still non-existent." and urged immediate action to meet the threat of totalitarian communism.

Reliable sources here previously predicted that Winston Churchill, conservative party leader, would propose the Germans be armed to help Western Europe's defence when he speaks to the assembly tomorrow.

Churchill's followers said his speech would be of world importance.

"Either Germany is in our Western European union on equal terms or she remains out and occupied," said Boothby. "We have to make our choice and we have to make it now."

Boothby said that unless Germany is brought within this defence framework, the western countries are not defensible.

"If Germany comes in, then she will have to make her full contribution to our joint defence on the same terms as everyone else," said Boothby.

He did not elaborate whether he meant a German army, or only German contingents in a European force.

Boothby said that Germany, too, has a choice to make, and he added:

"My most fervent hope is that she will choose to come with us."

In this event, he said, "she will be entitled to point out that she is closest to the potential aggressor, and to ask for assurances that we are all in it together from the start, if there should be a start

"We shall be equally entitled to reply that, with modern weapons, 100 miles one way or the other makes little difference, that it is better to fight for freedom than to submit to slavery, and that, if she is attacked, we will fight by her side."

He referred bitterly to the Brussels Treaty and Atlantic Pact, saying, "the only visible result of those pacts to date is a number of committees and in a straight fight between tanks and committees, tanks are apt to win."

Sources close to Churchill confirmed he will speak on Western European defence, but they would give no details.

Other reliable sources, however, said Britain's wartime leader would propose the formation of German divisions, within the allied occupation forces in Germany.

U.S. WILL PLACE 'HUGE' ORDERS FOR 3.5 INCH GUNS

Canada May Also Sell Clothing, Vehicles, Ships

Ottawa, Aug. 9 (CP)—Canada and the United States are planning heavy programs in the construction of naval guns for employment on escort vessels and the decision already has been reached to place these orders in Sorel, Que., munitions plants.

This was gleaned from authoritative sources after Hubert E. Howard, chairman of the United States Munitions Board, disclosed to the Canadian Press last night that the U.S. has decided, among other things, to place "huge" orders for 3.5-inch guns in Canada.

Mr. Howard, here for the Canada-United States Industrial Mobilization Committee meeting, said the U.S. also was considering the purchase in Canada of heavy supplies of aircraft and aircraft parts, some clothing, vehicles and ships.

A Canadian source later amplified Mr. Howard's disclosure. He said the biggest part of the guns der would go to the U.S., but that Canada would obtain a small share for her own navy.

As the plan unfolded, it appeared that Canada would embark on a program of accepting American pattern equipment for her troops as a means of getting modern equipment at low cost.

Eliminate Tariffs

Contracts for the guns, he added, would be arranged under the current Canada-U.S. arms reciprocity arrangement, completed after the authorities found a loophole in the restrictive Buy American Act of 1934. The arrangement calls for the purchase by each country of about $25,000,000 worth of equipment. This arrangement would be stepped up under principles reached at the mobilization meeting.

Recommendations reached at the day-long meeting, it was disclosed, included these:

1. Elimination of high tariffs on Canadian armament sales in the U.S.
2. Joint action on economic controls needed to obtain raw materials and complete defence contracts on time.
3. Non-discrimination in the allocation of scarce materials among factories in both countries.

The meeting was completed in agreement on all points, officials said. No new plans were made for another session of the committee, but it was indicated that sub-committees would be kept continuously at work in Ottawa and Washington, completing details of decisions reached at the meeting.

CAT GOOD GUARDIAN

Toronto, Aug. 9 — (CP) — Two teen-aged boys who fled after a bloody encounter with "Cinders" will agree the 20-pound "watch-cat" is as good as most dogs.

When a North Toronto woman scared away two youths who were attempting to jimmy a window early today, the lads fled through a yard where Cinders was tethered on a 15-foot rope.

Red Press Campaign Raises Fears Russians May Blockade Berlin Again

Berlin, Aug. 9 (CP)—A new communist anti-American press campaign raised fears today that the Russians may be getting ready to try again to force the Allies from Berlin.

They failed with their blockade of the city last year.

The new propaganda drive centres around charges that a United States plane, with the identification number "S-45," dropped fire bombs over a town near the Elbe July 27.

(In Washington an army official said American planes do not bear "S" identifications and he had not heard of the alleged incident.)

The drive is fashioned on the same lines as the potato-bug campaign three months ago in which Allied planes were accused of dropping Colorado beetles on east German potato fields.

Russia's official newspaper in Germany, the Taegliche Rundschau, published an interview with an east Berlin communist worker today. It quoted him as saying "the Soviet government should be asked to close the air space over the (east) German democratic republic to American planes. It can not be allowed that some day our whole crop goes up in flames."

Western observers regarded the Taegliche Rundschau's article as a calculated threat by the Russians.

Berlin's only reliable lifelines are three air corridors—each 20 miles wide—connecting the city with west Germany. They were set up under the old four-power agreement.

Because the Soviet Union refrained from closing those corridors, the Allied air lift enabled 2,000,000 Berliners to survive the 11-month Russian blockade.

U.S. air force headquarters at Wiesbaden declined to comment today on the Soviet newspaper's hint of a future air blockade.

Airmen Report Enemy Preparing To Flee Chinju

Allied Successes Ease Pressure on Central Front

Tokyo, Aug. 10 — (Thursday) — (CP) — North Koreans today retreated before United States onslaughts on the southern and western fronts and airmen said the enemy was preparing to flee his southern base at Chinju.

U.S. patrols were only seven miles east of that bomb-wrecked city 55 miles west of the main supply port of Pusan. Chinju is the apparent objective of a U.S. counter-offensive on the south coast.

Gen. MacArthur's war summary said American forces farther south had run into heavy opposition in their attempt to trap North Korean troops by linking up with the main body east of Chinju.

This pincers southeast of Chinju last was reported within seven miles of closing.

Three Miles Average Gain

Gains averaging about three miles were reported along the southern front.

The summary, covering fighting of the last 24 hours, said two enemy battalions— possibly 1,600 men— supported by tanks were "eliminated" from one bridgehead on the Naktong River.

But the enemy still was trying to breach the river line, which protects Taegu, front-line city and refugee South Korean capital 55 miles northwest of Pusan.

The enemy was putting the pressure along the northern front —the roof of the shrunken allied position in southeast Korea.

South Koreans were forced to make a two-mile withdrawal at unspecified points on the northern sector, the headquarters summary reported.

The North Koreans also were building up their forces in the Yongdok sector, on the east coast end of the front.

Every Action Successful

Serious threats to the important Taegu area on the central front were eased by the Allied successes in the central sector. A communique issued by the U.S. Eighth Army reported: "Aggressive-minded United Nations troops carried out successful action in every engagement with the enemy alon gthe entire 140-mile front."

The communique said the communists in the southern sector apparently were withdrawing toward Chinju. U.S. patrols were within seven miles of the burned-out city.

Bayonets played a big part in the southern drive. One American unit was said to have killed 40 North Koreans in a fierce, hand-to-hand engagement.

Field dispatches from the central front told how U.S. troops chased a North Korean battalion in the hills two miles south of Waegwan, 15 miles northwest of Taegu, the South Korean Republic's emergency capital.

Police Seeking Two Suspects For Dog Killing

Kirkland Lake, Aug. 9 — (CP) — Arthur Patterson yesterday shot his other dog.

The first dog, a female deer hound, had its head blown off Monday when an unknown person placed a stick of dynamite under its collar. Patterson destroyed the second animal in fear of further "reprisals." He did not elaborate.

Meanwhile, police seek two suspects for the killing and for an explosion of seven sticks of dynamite behind an apartment building last Saturday.

"We know who we are looking for," said Police Chief Reg Pineger.

King and Queen Return to Palace To Await Birth

London, Aug. 9 — (Reuters) — The King and Queen and Princess Margaret have returned from the country to Buckingham Palace to await the birth of Princess Elizabeth's baby, expected within the next few days.

Buckingham Palace is just across the road from the 24-year-old Princess' residence, Clarence House. The King and Queen visited the princess last night.

Sir William Gilliatt, the royal family gynaecologist, and Sir John Weir, the family physician, are likely to move into Clarence House today or tomorrow. They have been making daily calls.

The royal midwife, Sister Helen Rowe, already is installed there in a room near the pincess' bedroom. Sister Rowe also attended the birth of Prince Charles in November, 1948. Prince Charles Princess Elizabeth's first child, is next in succession to the throne after his mother.

SMALL CHILD STEPS IN FRONT OF TRUCK

For the third time in a week, a small child was hit by a vehicle on city streets yesterday. Robert Perschick, 3, of 295 Pinnacle St., stepped in front of a truck on Front St. Tuesday afternoon and suffered only slight shock.

The accident happened in front of Loblaw's store, and the truck, owned by Truck and Farm Supply was driven by Donald Smith, of Wellington. Police said that the child, accompanied by his mother, stepped out on the road from between two cars. The boy broke away from his mother and stepped out in front of the truck. He was knocked to the pavement, but his injuries were limited to shock.

Police Sergeant R. Milligan investigated.

COAL SUPPLY GOOD BUT PRICES MAY RISE

While there are adequate coal supplies on hand to take care of present orders at summer prices, there is no assurance of what the future holds, a city dealer said today.

He predicted a rise in prices later on due to the definite possibility of increase in cost at mine-heads and the probability of a rise in freight rates.

Many who cannot attend the fair during the day can see all the displays in the evening, even some judging of horses under the floodlights.

BURNING MOTORS CAUSE OF RUNS

Firemen had a quiet day yesterday, with the only disturbances coming from burning motors at two different places. Little damage was caused at either Ridley's Grocery on Catherine St. or in the basement at Milady Shoppe on Front Street.

VAPOR FORMATION THOUGHT FROM PLANE

A ribbon-like cloud or vapor formation which bicseted the heavens from east to west as far as the eye could see, excited the curiosity of several city residents early last evening.

The filmy white formation lasted several minutes before disappearing. Several conjectures were made as to the origin of the "ribbon" but is believed it was the vapor trail caused by the jet fighter plane which flew from Toronto to Montreal last evening at an average speed of 638 miles per hour. The plane negotiated the 330-mile run in 30 minutes.

$200 Damage In Collision At Intersection

An estimated $200 damage resulted from an accident involving an automobile and a motorcycle last night at N. The front of the motorcycle was badly smashed and the door on one side of the car was damaged.

Gray is believed to have been turning from Highway 14 on to College St. E. While he was making the left-hand turn, the motorcycle which was going north on Highway 14 ran into the side of the car.

Provincial Constable John Hurrie investigated.

Films on Wind And Electricity Shown to Club

The Belleville Kiwanis Club went back to school for a brief time yesterday afternoon when they were shown two very educational pictures. In a color picture entitled "Winds and Their Causes" they learned that the cause of wind is not a guest speaker but an uneven heating of the atmosphere. They also learned about "Easterlies" and "Westerlies" and why they blow that way and why clouds form and why thunderstorms always come on a nice warm day and many other interesting things concerning wind.

A black and white film on "Power in Our Rivers" took the members on a fast tour of hydro electric power projects and let them in on what a wonderful thing electricity is and what a hectic life we would all lead if the generators suddenly stopped.

Both pictures were thoroughly enjoyed by the club.

Prior to the program five members took turns at leading the club "Out to the Ball Game" in a melodic way of course, until pianist Leo Riggs, serving time with the Kiwanis Choristers while Phil Huddlestone recuperates on his holidays, stepped in with a piano solo to soothe jangled nerves.

Charlie Mott won the attendance prize donated and drawn for by Ed Logan. President Taylor Franklin did his best to control an hilarious meeting.

Several Items of Business Transacted at Special Meeting Of City Council on Tuesday

City council, in a special meeting Tuesday morning, cleaned up several items of business that have been hanging fire for some time. In order, they informed a legal representative of householders on the south side of Victoria Avenue in Parkwood Heights, that the city solicitor would meet with their solicitor and a committee of council to attempt the drafting of a by-law to restrict commercial ventures in that area; refused a grant of $300 to the Belleville Bowling Club in connection with the Corbin Gold Cup tournament; voted to purchase a street sweeper at an estimated cost of $13,000, and agreed to the resurfacing of Front St., Dundas St., and Highland Ave.

In addition, council asked, through Aldermen Haig and Lattimer, that the auditor of the Belleville General Hospital audit the books of accounts, revenues and expenditures and submit a report of the financial standing to city council.

No By-law Restricted

Protest of the Victoria Avenue householders in the Parkwood Heights area that the city has not drafted a by-law restricting commercial ventures in that district led to the first council move. The city solicitor, R. W. Pringle, told council that the Municipal Board would agree to any by-law that the residents of Parkwood Heights would sanction, but informed the members that there seemed to be a lack of unanimity between the householders and those who wanted a commercial effort in the area.

"The Municipal Board," Mr. Pringle said, "would not agree to having a commercial area opposite any residential area, and the only plan submitted so far for the district requires that some landholders give up their land in order to expedite the commercial arrangements." He emphasized that the final restriction is in the hands of the Municipal Board, not the city council's.

Grant Refused

In the matter of the grant to the Bowling Club, Alderman A. M. Haig, chairman of the finance committee, stated that to his knowledge no other organization received such treatment, and even though it had been an almost annual act of council's to help the club, he was opposed to it.

Alderman Claude Tice, who had introduced the motion, replied that the people who had come to the tournament—"from Verdun to Windsor, left a lot of money in this city over the weekend." He continued to say that the amount had already been put in the estimates for this year, and for that reason it should be paid. Mayor H. J. Allin concurred. Alderman C. L. Hyde advanced the theory that the grant was not subsidization, but payment for publicity—"and cheap publicity at that," he said.

In the final count, the motion was defeated by a vote of eight to five, with Alderman Butler and Potter absent. Favoring the motion were Aldermen Armstrong, Hyde, Thomas, Tice and Mayor Allin, and opposed were Aldermen Allen, Argue, Clarke, Deacon, Duffy, Haig, Lattimer and Liddle.

Arguments Against Both

Amidst arguments for the merits of both machines, the Elgin and the Wayne, the council voted six to five at first to buy the Elgin sweeper. Then, when the by-law came up for reading, there was dissension again as some members wanted to vote for a sweeper and not for the Elgin. Difficulties were solved when the name of the sweeper was deleted from the by-law and the vote went eight to three, with four absent, for the purchase of a sweeper.

Difficulties were also met when some members tried to establish the final price of each machine, and whether or not the machine was absolutely essential this year. Alderman Haig objected to the manner in which the two companies had been able to haggle and juggle their prices after tenders had been let. Final resolution of the problem came with an estimation of the cost and the forwarding of the proposed by-law to the Municipal Board.

Members Divided

On the resurfacing question, members were again divided. Alderman Hyde opposed with resurfacing of Front St., because "it's still in fine shape." Alderman Thomas answered with statements from the engineer's department that the concrete base of Front St., if it is not reinforced with new asphalt this year, will commence to crack.

"In that event," Mr. Thomas said, "the final cost of fixing the street might approach $75,000, instead of the present $20,000." Mayor Allin, while agreeing that Dundas St. and Highland Avenue should be done, said that he felt that Front St. should be let go, and that he objected to it being included in the same by-law as the others. Finally, the vote was taken, and it was nine to two, with four absent, for the resurfacing. Those opposing were Aldermen Argue and Hyde.

Motorists Must Remove Gewgaws From Windshields

"Drivers who insist on placing dancing dolls, monkeys and other objects in the windshields of their cars are running the risk of possible prosecution," Inspector Hayes of the Belleville police department said Tuesday afternoon. So far, no prosecution has been launched in the city, but police are warning any drivers they see.

The practice of hanging the dolls and other articles on the windshield is not confined to Belleville alone. Cities all across the province are suffering a rash of plumed birds, feathered monkeys and assorted other nuisances. The day of the pennant as an article of adornment in automobiles seems to have faded with the introduction of the new fad.

Obstruct View

Not only do the gewgaws obstruct the driver's view, authorities say, but they distract oncoming drivers. The bouncing babies and swinging birds are annoying pieces of work to the man whose eye is caught by them on the road.

One Belleville policeman claims to have stopped 50 cars in a short period of time over the weekend, warning them all to remove the offending decorations or suffer the consequences. Provincial authorities have taken notice of the fad, but as yet no definite move has been made by Highways Minister Doucett or his department.

Obstruct Rear Window

Officials profess wonder that some of the drivers don't go cross-eyed in the attempt to see the road in the cracks between the dolls. Some of the doll-happy drivers have not been content with fouling up only the front windshield, and have moved to the rear window to further display their acquisitions.

It is possible that a great percentage of those driving cars do not realize the danger they invite when they put such ornaments in their line of sight, and it is for this reason that the Belleville police are attempting to cut down on the practice.

Brig. Rockingham Will Command Special Brigade

Ottawa, Aug. 9 (CP) — Brig. John M. Rockingham, C.B.E., D.S.O., 38, of Victoria, has been appointed to comand Canada's new special brigade for United Nations service and is expected in Ottawa tomorrow for conferences, Defence Minister Claxton announced today.

Brig. Rockingham is a native of Australia who won his present rank in the Second World War when he was given command of the 9th Infantry Brigade—the famous Canadian Highland Brigade—during the Normandy campaign.

After the war he returned to civil life in Victoria as an official of the British Columbia Electric Railway Company but carried on his military career as a member of the reserve army. Since 1948 he has been officer commanding the 15th (reserve) Infantry Brigade at Vancouver.

Several Items of Business Transacted at Special Meeting Of City Council on Tuesday

City council, in a special meeting Tuesday morning, cleaned up several items of business that have been hanging fire for some time. In order, they informed a legal representative of householders on the south side of Victoria Avenue in Parkwood Heights, that the city solicitor would meet with their solicitor and a committee of council to attempt the drafting of a by-law to restrict commercial ventures in that area; refused a grant of $300 to the Belleville Bowling Club in connection with the Corbin Gold Cup tournament; voted to purchase a street sweeper at an estimated cost of $13,000, and agreed to the resurfacing of Front St., Dundas St., and Highland Ave.

In addition, council asked, through Aldermen Haig and Lattimer, that the auditor of the Belleville General Hospital audit the books of accounts, revenues and expenditures and submit a report of the financial standing to city council.

No By-law Restricted

Protest of the Victoria Avenue householders in the Parkwood Heights area that the city has not drafted a by-law restricting commercial ventures in that district led to the first council move. The city solicitor, R. W. Pringle, told council that the Municipal Board would agree to any by-law that the residents of Parkwood Heights would sanction, but informed the members that there seemed to be a lack of unanimity between the householders and those who wanted a commercial effort in the area.

"The Municipal Board," Mr. Pringle said, "would not agree to having a commercial area opposite any residential area, and the only plan submitted so far for the district requires that some landholders give up their land in order to expedite the commercial arrangements." He emphasized that the final restriction is in the hands of the Municipal Board, not the city council's.

Grant Refused

In the matter of the grant to the Bowling Club, Alderman A. M. Haig, chairman of the finance committee, stated that to his knowledge no other organization received such treatment, and even though it had been an almost annual act of council's to help the club, he was opposed to it.

Alderman Claude Tice, who had introduced the motion, replied that the people who had come to the tournament—"from Verdun to Windsor, left a lot of money in this city over the weekend." He continued to say that the amount had already been put in the estimates for this year, and for that reason it should be paid. Mayor H. J. Allin concurred. Alderman C. L. Hyde advanced the theory that the grant was not subsidization, but payment for publicity—"and cheap publicity at that," he said.

In the final count, the motion was defeated by a vote of eight to five, with Alderman Butler and Potter absent. Favoring the motion were Aldermen Armstrong, Hyde, Thomas, Tice and Mayor Allin, and opposed were Aldermen Allen, Argue, Clarke, Deacon, Duffy, Haig, Lattimer and Liddle.

Arguments Against Both

Amidst arguments for the merits of both machines, the Elgin and the Wayne, the council voted six to five at first to buy the Elgin sweeper. Then, when the by-law came up for reading, there was dissension again as some members wanted to vote for a sweeper and not for the Elgin. Difficulties were solved when the name of the sweeper was deleted from the by-law and the vote went eight to three, with four absent, for the purchase of a sweeper.

Difficulties were also met when some members tried to establish the final price of each machine, and whether or not the machine was absolutely essential this year. Alderman Haig objected to the manner in which the two companies had been able to haggle and juggle their prices after tenders had been let. Final resolution of the problem came with an estimation of the cost and the forwarding of the proposed by-law to the Municipal Board.

Members Divided

On the resurfacing question, members were again divided. Alderman Hyde opposed with resurfacing of Front St., because "it's still in fine shape." Alderman Thomas answered with statements from the engineer's department that the concrete base of Front St., if it is not reinforced with new asphalt this year, will commence to crack.

"In that event," Mr. Thomas said, "the final cost of fixing the street might approach $75,000, instead of the present $20,000." Mayor Allin, while agreeing that Dundas St. and Highland Avenue should be done, said that he felt that Front St. should be let go, and that he objected to it being included in the same by-law as the others. Finally, the vote was taken, and it was nine to two, with four absent, for the resurfacing. Those opposing were Aldermen Argue and Hyde.

Motorists Must Remove Gewgaws From Windshields

"Drivers who insist on placing dancing dolls, monkeys and other objects in the windshields of their cars are running the risk of possible prosecution," Inspector Hayes of the Belleville police department said Tuesday afternoon. So far, no prosecution has been launched in the city, but police are warning any drivers they see.

The practice of hanging the dolls and other articles on the windshield is not confined to Belleville alone. Cities all across the province are suffering a rash of plumed birds, feathered monkeys and assorted other nuisances. The day of the pennant as an article of adornment in automobiles seems to have faded with the introduction of the new fad.

Obstruct View

Not only do the gewgaws obstruct the driver's view, authorities say, but they distract oncoming drivers. The bouncing babies and swinging birds are annoying pieces of work to the man whose eye is caught by them on the road.

One Belleville policeman claims to have stopped 50 cars in a short period of time over the weekend, warning them all to remove the offending decorations or suffer the consequences. Provincial authorities have taken notice of the fad, but as yet no definite move has been made by Highways Minister Doucett or his department.

Obstruct Rear Window

Officials profess wonder that some of the drivers don't go cross-eyed in the attempt to see the road in the cracks between the dolls. Some of the doll-happy drivers have not been content with fouling up only the front windshield, and have moved to the rear window to further display their acquisitions.

It is possible that a great percentage of those driving cars do not realize the danger they invite when they put such ornaments in their line of sight, and it is for this reason that the Belleville police are attempting to cut down on the practice.

AIRMEN REPORT

The communists had forded the Naktong River in the night and taken up positions on a 1,200-foot ridge commanding the road to Taegu.

Drive Invaders Back

North of Waegwan, South Korean troops drove the invaders back to the Naktong River. One hundred fleeing communists were mowed down by their own comrades when they tried to get back across the river from the Allied east bank.

Some of the reds who had crossed the river six miles south of Changnyong, 23 miles southwest of Taegu, were driven out of the high ground they had seized by American troops.

ROBINSON MAKES WEIGHT

Jersey City, N.J., Aug. 9 — (AP) — Ray Robinson, world welterweight champion, resorted to a steam bath today in order to make the 147-pound limit for his title fight with Charles Fusari tonight.

Robinson, four ounces overweight on his first try at the scales, knocked off two ounces for the second weighing and on third attempt he came in a fraction of an ounce under 147.

Fusari weighed in at 145 1-4.

Abe Greene, National Boxing Association commissioner, gave Robinson two hours to make the weight, but he needed only 30 minutes.

Stirling Minister Offers Some Suggestions for Village Improvement

Stirling, Aug. 9—Recently the minister of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, Rev. A. E. Baker, received a signed letter from a prominent citizen expressing the "dream" that every man, woman, and child of Stirling and its environs would put the 'stir' in Stirling by striving to improve and beautify it in every possible way. This prompted a "stirring" civic message on Sunday.

Mr. Baker commended the leadership of the municipality in relation to action taken or underway with respect to improved water supply; street name signs; tree examinations; sanitation and sodding for war-time housing area; street marking and parking facilities; care of cemetery and war memorial grounds; weed cutting and a new public school. Nevertheless he found many additional items which might engage the 'stir' in "Stirlingites."

Mr. Baker said he had no intention of "by-passing" the need for a 'stir' in the church but would leave its more detailed applications until another time. In the meantime he would welcome observations from both friends and critics.

"Sunday Sickness"

The minister was aware, he said, of "Sunday Sickness" which was too prevalent, especially in the holiday season, and reminded his congregation that the devil was never on vacation. The attempt of a small coterie, he asserted, to give booze consumption in the village respectability reflected no credit on them. The absence of a gaol was the natural outcome of no liquor vending establishment. Lawlessness always accompanied the sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages. If men did not break man's law they broke God's law, the minister asserted, when they imperilled others.

In presenting his list of observations Mr. Baker did not claim personal credit for them neither did he specifically fix the onus of responsibility upon the individual tenant or property owner or upon public servant or public body be it municipal, county, provincial, or Dominion.

He confessed he did not expect too much "stir" immediately but likened ensuing action to Leopold's reported abdication "slow motion". The recognition of needs, the minister said, was the first step towards meeting them.

Some Recommendations

Here are the Civic Sunday recommendations to put the "stir" in Stirling:

1. A window cleaning, replacing, and repairing campaign. (Too many windows replaced by cardboard or shingles, or held together by adhesive tape, buttons or bolts. Some not cleaned for years.)

2. Painting of public property including fences, railings, light pillars, bridges, road signs and guide posts, public buildings.

3. Cleaning and replacement of street lights when necessary.

4. Planned tree planting to provide for the replacement of "pensioners".

5. Extension of weed cutting to include removal on both public and private property.

6. Provision for harvesting surplus school garden products for charitable institutions.

7. Replacement and painting of eavestroughs and a general "face lifting" of buildings that have not been painted for a decade or more.

8. Construction of a modern cemetery vault. (The present one looks like a glorified root house.)

9. Better care of graves in the old cemetery property.

10. Use by citizens of free parking lots.

11. Better and more road signs.

12. Road and walk repairs.

13. Letter boxes in all buildings.

14. Community letter boxes.

15. Traveller and tourist overnight accommodation. (A wit said the village of Stirling was called Bethlehem-like because there was no room at the Inn.)

16. A horticultural society.

17. A musical festival.

18. High school entrance and secondary school scholarships.

19: A girls' club.

20: A Loyalist Association.

21: Flags on the many fine (when painted) flagstaffs.

22. Free textbooks and school supplies for underprivileged children.

23: Fire and police number stickers for telephone books or other handy mediums.

24: A village clock tower and daily time signal.

25: A maternity hospital.

26: Provision for the dental inspection of all school children and medical examination with particular reference to hearing, sight, heart and tubercular diseases.

27: The examination, cleaning, and repair of lights in all public buildings.

28: Repairs to dangerous chimneys and entrances.

29: More publicity for this lovely village including the appointment of a Centenary Committee.

The minister added that while the list did not by any means exhaust the field of good citizen and corporation enterprise it might provide some ways and means of achieving the "stir" in Stirling.

Announcement of Interest

Mr. Baker, also made an announcement of interest to residents of the district. During recent months he has been making an exacting study of the history of Stirling, a municipality which was largely founded by second generation United Empire Loyalists about the middle of the nineteenth century.

The Hon. Leslie M. Frost, Premier of Ontario, has accepted an invitation to visit Stirling about the middle of October. It is expected the gathering will be representative of all types of citizens and the most representative dinner meeting ever held in this historic village. Mr. Frost will be accompanied by the Hon. William Goodfellow Minister of Public Welfare. The gathering is being held in connection with the anniversary observance of St. Paul's Church which is the successor to the earliest congregation in the community—a company of early Methodists mostly second generation Loyalists. It is expected that every Union Jack in town will be displayed to welcome Ontario's first citizen and Mrs. Frost been thoroughly beaten and long occupied.

What France wants this time is cash in advance — in the form of American troops already on the spot. Evidently this was emphasized at the recent meeting of Atlantic Pact deputies in London.

In return for this committment of American troops to European soil, France evidently would accept an American commander over all forces in Germany. These probably would include many of the 15 new divisions France had agreed to form. If an attack comes, France wants the initial major blow to come between the Elbe and the Rhine, not between the Rhine and the Seine.

French officials still have much confidence in the security offered by American possession of the atom bomb.

A TRIBUTE LONG OVERDUE

The construction of a monument to the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell, onetime prime minister of Canada, is now approaching a state of reality. With the erection of the monument on the grounds of the Belleville Armouries, recognition long overdue Sir Mackenzie as a former leader of this country is becoming fact.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, born in 1823 in Rickinghall, Suffolk, England, was educated in local schools after his emigration. While still a lad of ten or eleven, he started to work in the office of the old Belleville Intelligencer, and through the years rose to be its editor and proprietor. In the year of Confederation, 1867, he was elected as a member in the House of Commons for Hastings. Eleven years later he was appointed Minister of Customs in Sir John A. MacDonald's government.

Sir Mackenzie continued his political life by being appointed Minister of Militia in Sir John J. Abbott's government, which was in power from June, 1891, until December, 1892. Following that, he became Minister of Trade and Commerce in Sir John S. D. Thompson's regime, which was from the last-named date until December, 1894.

When Sir John Thompson died in 1894, Sir Mackenzie Bowell became Canada's sixth prime minister. Later, he succeeded by Sir Charles Tupper, who took over from him on May, 1896. Sir Mackenzie, who died in 1917, did not let his political life lag after stepping down from the top Canadian slot. He was called to the Senate, and served there in the capacity of opposition leader until 1906.

In 1847 Sir Mackenzie married Harriet Louise, the daughter of Jacob Moore, of Belleville. Mrs. Bowell died in 1884, and in 1895 Sir Mackenzie was created K.C.M.G. It has been through the efforts of another Belleville man, Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., that the monument on the Armouries lawn is to become a reality. Mr. Mikel approached the late Honorable W. L. M. King, and with Mr. King's concurrence, plans were started to honor Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

Sir Mackenzie achieved his position as prime minister of Canada not because of wealth or influence, but as historians have put it, "by industry and integrity." He was held in esteem by newspapermen of that time, and generally was considered one of the foremost editorial writers in Ontario.

Possibly the occurrence that brought Sir Mackenzie into the limelight more than any other one thing was his active campaign to expel Louis Riel, the rebel from the Northwest, from his seat in Parliament. Riel had been elected to a seat by a Manitoba constituency and was prevented from taking it by the efforts of Sir Mackenzie.

Sir Mackenzie's greatness is not measured entirely in his parliamentary life, however. The fact that he rose from a barefoot boy in Belleville to lead his country is the finest example of his character. Belleville should be proud that a monument to this fine Canadian man is going to grace the city, but also just a trifle ashamed that such a move had not been made before this time.

MAGIC OF OIL

British shipyards are feeling the magic touch of oil. More than half the merchant ships under construction are oil tankers. World-wide demand for the black gold is indirectly filling pay envelopes of thousands of British shipyard workers. It is helping ward off the feared recession in the shipbuilding industry.

On a spring visit to the Tyneside, Princess Margaret launched the first of 10 giants of 28,000 tons, the largest tankers ever built in European shipyards. Experts see the day not far off when oil tankers of up to 50,000 tons will be hauling petroleum from the pipe-line termini to refineries in industrially developed areas.

Keeping pace with tanker construction, big new refinery developments are going forward in Britain. At a cost of $387,500,000, refining capacity is being expanded eightfold from 2,500,000 to 19,500,000 tons a year. Each of the new 28,000-ton tankers will make eight round trips a year to the Persian Gulf and bring back annually some 200,000 tons of oil apiece. Six of the monster tankers, which cost about £1,250,000 each to build, are for the British Tanker Company, shipping organization of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company. Four are for the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company of the Shell group.

The contracts are being divided among the United Kingdom's four main shipbuilding areas, Tyne, Clyde, Mersey and Belfast.

CARS NO LONGER LUXURIES

It is pretty obvious that cars are no longer considered luxuries by the average Canadian. This feeling has been in evidence for many years in the country to the south of us, where Will Rogers once said, "America is going to the poorhouse in an automobile," but only recently did Canadians begin to feel that way. Thus in another way Canada grows more like the United States. — Lethbridge Herald.

NO SHOW-OFF

This is what bothers parents most
Who have a son or two or three:
A clever tot, at home, but not
A show-off when there's company.

At home, the rascal does his tricks
The instant that the word is said.
The parson calls. For him he squalls
Or sucks his thumb or hangs his head.

"Sing for the ladies," mother begs,
"The song you often sing for me."
But not a note comes from the throat.
A stubborn, silent songster he.

A smart child to his Ma and Pa.
But when to visit neighbors come,
'Tis truth I pen, no show-off then.
Merely a boy who sucks his thumb.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

We take it for granted that the human form does not alter much from generation to generation. If we give the matter any thought at all, we assume that we look pretty much the same as did the people of Henry the Eighth's time or Julius Ceasar's.

Our haircuts, our whiskers, hats, coats are different, as a glance through an old family album will show. But we suppose the frame and the features underneath the outward trappings remain the same.

Up here at the summer place where I have spent the past few days, there is an ambulance of young females from teen age to what you might call young maternity. And one thing has struck me almost as a blow: and that is the astonishing glare of their teeth.

Every one of them has a great, square-rigged mouthful of big bold, beautiful flashing teeth. They all bare their teeth from molar to molar, not only when they laugh, but even in ordinary conversation. When they throw back their heads in laughter as they all do, you look into a chasm rimmed and ranged with barriers and barricadoes of massive ivory. They look, to tell the truth, as if they had six or eight teeth too many. When I return from the steamer wharf after getting the noon mail and lie down for my afternoon siesta, I have nightmares full of gnashing.

Now, recollection does not bear out that the previous generation to this had such flagrant teeth. I do not believe their mouths were so big. As recently as 1925 girls prided themselves on the smallness of their mouths, and a smile was something to measure out with care. Girls were as modest with their teeth as they were with their knees.

It may be girls talk and holler more than they used to. It could be the female mouth is actually growing bigger from use. Do we look like our ancestors? Take a look at Mona Lisa or at any of the raving beauties Romney or Gainsborough painted one and two centuries ago. If they had teeth, they didn't show. Or maybe they were just a kind of brown.

Strength for the Day

EMOTIONS

A glance at the headlines of almost any newspaper reveals trouble and unhappiness of all sorts: strikes, crimes, accidents within our nation—warfare, imprisonment, and death abroad. Add to these the domestic problems and private worries of which most people have at least a few, and the picture looks black.

An all too common reaction to this picture is to become emotionally upset about it. Millions of people worry about their problems night and day, and argue heatedly about them with others. Such people live in a state of constant emotional disturbance.

What are the results? No solution, surely, for nothing is ever solved by losing control of one's emotions. But there are many harmful results, physical and mental. Stomach disorders, nervous diseases, and heart trouble are often caused by emotional upsets, even when nothing is organically wrong with us. The constant overcrowding of our expanding mental institutions reflects the rising number of emotionally unbalanced persons.

Two safeguards against the conditions are available to all. The first is self-control: personal refirm refusal to be drawn into straint of one's emotions, and the heated arguments or morbid meditation. The second method is to have greater faith—not so-called "blind" faith, but the informed and cheerful faith of the man who believes because he knows, and knows because he loves.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

THE GERM TURNS

For as long as I can remember, my Uncle Charlie has been complaining of good health—not his own, mind you, but my Aunt Frieda's. For 40 winters, to hear him tell it, he has been an easy mark for colds, catarrhs and rheumatic pains, while his wife has never developed so much as a sniffle.

Last February, when I dropped in to see them at their Allen Street flat, Charlie was in bed, runny-eyed and carmine-nosed.

"What gives!" I asked.

"What always gives?" said my uncle. "Your aunt loses the flu, I find it. She's got a constitutional like a horse."

Frieda was in the kitchen warming up a plaster.

"Like a pastrami sandwich she treats me," said Charlie. "I'm all over mustard. Every reasonable woman lays down in bed once in a while. But not her—she won't give me the satisfaction. . ."

My favorite relatives came to this country around the time Teddy Roosevelt was elected, and the voyage over, according to Charlie, was the roughest in the history of navigation. It took 23 days and even the captain was seasick. Frieda was the only one on board who ate regularly, and she gained an average of a pound a day. When the helmsman took to his bunk—still according to Charlie—it was she who took the wheel. As for my uncle, he spent the entire trip with his head sticking out of a porthole and the weather being what it was, it was a miracle he wasn't drowned.

Because of this apparent immunity to disease, Frieda has always been one of the favorite daughters of the East Side, especially when any of the neighbors are ill. For years now, she's been carrying soup and solace to their homes, tending their kids and lecturing family doctors on their therapeutic shortcomings. "Herself, she don't get sick, but to me she brings back the germs," is the way Charlie explains her.

A few days ago, however, my uncle telephoned and, without bothering to suppress the triumph in his voice, said "Frieda is flat like a pancake. She's got a flu, with complications yet."

"I'll send my doctor down," I said, "and I'll be around in the morning."

But when I walked up the three flights to their apartment the following day, the door was opened by an obviously in the pink Frieda.

"What are you doing out of bed?"

My aunt motioned me in, and in the bedroom, propped up on pillows as usual, was Charlie.

"What happened?"

"What should happen?" said Frieda. "Your uncle got overheated running up and down the stairs like a chicken."

"I thought you had the flu."

"Oh that," said Frieda. "I fixed it with a guggle-muggle."

For the benefit of the uninitiate, a "guggle-muggle" is an old East Side remedy composed of warm milk, egg, honey, cinnamon and whiskey.

"Wish your uncle happy returns," said Frieda. "It's his birthday."

"Yea, it's my birthday," groaned Charlie, "and for a present she gave me her flu."

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

WITH YODELS

Winnipeg, Man.—One of the most indestructible phenomena in Canada is a 45-year-old, toupee wearing ex-cowboy named Wilfred Carter, known to a large and intensely loyal set as "The Yodellin' Cowboy from Calgary."

Anywhere in Canada — and particularly in Alberta, and Saskatchewan it is almost impossible to go through a day without hearing the plaintive and slightly nasal, transcribed baritone of Mr. C. in musical tribute to his Little Grey-haired Mother in the West or his pop "Daddy dear old Daddy, you've been a real pal to me" or any one of 300-odd sentimental ditties he's written and recorded.

Wilf is not merely hard to avoid, but a great many thousands of his followers go to great pains to seek him out in person.

In Amherst, Nova Scotia, where Carter recently began a coast-to-coast tour, more than 4,000 of the yodellers' fans stood in line for two hours, several of they paying their idol the extreme compliment of fainting dead away.

In Ottawa — of all places! — he was mobbed and souvenir-hunters tore off sections of his fancy shirt, revealing their hero's hairy chest (the real thing).

Here in Winnipeg where another 4,000 paid $1.75 a head to pay their respects, the audience broke into a spontaneous cheer when Mr. C. sang his "Swiss Moonlight Lullaby," written before most of them were born.

This affection is by no means on a merely national or even continental basis. In Tasmania for example, Mr. Carter headed a recent radio listener's poll as Tasmania's favorite male singer. scoring a clean victory over another baritone named Bing Crosby.

With Heart

Crossing the plains we got such a dosage of daily Wilf Carter administered by car radio that I was beginning to build up a tolerance for his style. My daughter Judy, on the other hand has a definite case of cowboyphile. So we went to see Carter's show here, and afterwards, we had a little talk with Wilf in person.

He is a tall, fleshy man with a small, girlish mouth tucked up under a long nose and a manner of supreme self confidence and affability (the autograph on the picture he gave me was "to a grand old pal").

Carter on Carter: "This tour has been terrific, I dunno. People seem to have stopped thinkin' of me as a cowboy singer. Now they think of me as a kind o' legend. 'Course I started back in 1924. You might say I was the first of my kind of singer. They tell me I got the biggest distribution of records in the world."

Carter on the reasons for his continued success: "A lot of people think a cowboy singer is anybody who puts on a big hat and a pair of high boots. But it's sincerity that counts in the long run.

"I was a cowboy myself. Still own a ranch near Carstairs. And I tell you, it's the hardest meanest, cruellest life there is. When I write my songs and when I sing 'em I'm tellin' about real experiences I know. Heart. That is what does it."

Whatever it is, Wilf has come a long way from the days when he was a wild-cow milker in the Calgary Stampede.

He travels about in aqua-marine Cadillac (described as my little old jalopy" when Wilf favors his fans with a monologue), lives in a beautiful 10-room fieldstone country home ("my little old log shack") in Clinton, New Jersey, just 50 miles from New York and the chartered accountant who master-minds the Carter's considerable income.

The two Carter girls four-year-old Carol and seven-year-old Sheila remain behind in New Jersey, but "Daddy" has pictures of them which sell briskly at 25 cents the copy.

The Big Hit

The Carter fans, as observed in Winnipeg, are a curious clan, most of them 'teenagers who deride anything "corny," but sigh at the broadest sentimentality of their idol, who delivers each song in a straightforward matter-of-fact manner.

Carter himself is unable to explain the success of one of his biggest hits "The Ice Worm Song." This is a delightfully humorous tune. The lyrics of one verse go:

There's a husky, dusky maiden in the Arctic.
In her igloo she's waiting there in vain.
So I guess I'll put my mucklucks on and ask her
If she'll wed me when the ice worm nests again.

And the final verse:

When all the blinking icebergs pound around us
She'll present me with a bouncing baby boy,
And the polar bears they'll do a rhumba around us
And the walruses will click their teeth with joy.

When the yodellin' cowboy steps up square to the mike and sings these words in his direct plaintive, unblinking way he gets the highest tribute from his followers. The humor in the lyrics changes not a flicker the rapt and slightly mournful expression of those faces.

BEWARE THE PAY CLINIC

Reader with a hernia (rupture, breach) has noticed that I recommend ambulent (office injection) treatment in preference to the major operation (hospital) treatment, and also, remarkably enough, that I warn persons with hernia to make sure the injections are administered by a competent physician.

That last detail is just as important as the choice of injection treatment instead of operation. But somehow it seems that a good many readers fail to notice it, either because I do not emphasize it enough or perhaps because that part of my copy is deleted before it gets into print.

Before the war I had compiled a fairly comprehensive list of physicians in all parts of the United States and Canada who were skilled in the ambulant or injection treatment of hernia. With that list I endeavored to assist readers who sought this modern treatment in finding physicians who were competent to give it. When war came most of the doctors on my list went into service and the task of searching out capable substitutes among the old-timers who still carried on was so great and so unproductive that I had to give up that part of my service. I have not attempted to renew it, for two reasons: First, the time and expense involved in maintaining such a list is beyond my capacity, and second, few readers who received the treatment and had satisfactory results ever bothered to tell me about it—unless incidentally when they happened to write again to obtain advice about something else.

The reader who noticed that I advise persons with hernia to make sure to consult a competent physician lapses into the furtive mood to continue:

"I have been recommended to the (Squedunk Medical Clinic by a Dr. (Shadyman) who has charge of a department of the Clinic. Please advise whether you consider the (Squedunk) Clinic competent..."

In reply to this query I must say first that I have no knowledge of the (Squedunk) Medical Clinic. However, I may add a general remark which should answer the reader's question and many similar questions.

A clinic is an institution, usually conducted by a hospital or medical school for the examination, study and treatment of patients and the instruction of medical students or physicians. Patients who consent to be examined, studied or treated in a clinic do not and certainly should not pay for it.

If a doctor or a combination of doctors set up in business as The (Squedunk) Clinic, and nick the customers for any service rendered, well, my advice is this: Beware the pay clinic. If a doctor is good he practices under his own name. If he is unable to build a practice of his own he can always go into the clinic racket and, thanks to the elastic medical ethics of this era, make a good thing out of it. As Barnum said..

On written request (no clipping, please) accompanied with stamped self-addressed envelope I'll send any reader a pamphlet on Hernia.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WHERE JOY RESIDES

Common to us all is the urge and the desire for reasonable joy and peace of mind. But these states of mind cannot come about by any rule or diagram to be followed. Both come from extracting the honey of hope from the passing moment, be that place and moment merely where you may be. Largely it is a matter of will and a preconceived philosophy of life.

Joy resides where we feel it, whether that time and place be an isolated one, or among the throng of moving humans. For hours I watched, from time to time, a boat of fishermen a long distance away. I kept my eye upon them with my field glasses. There was little movement to the boat, but I knew that each man in it was residing within the inner circle of joy itself, or perhaps it was anticipation, which is akin to joy.

I am sure that joy resides within the heart of every flower that blooms, for as I look into any variety, that joy leaps to my consciousness. You never see an unhappy face belonging to a flower, no matter how lowly or isolated it may be. With pride and satisfaction it looks out into the world, and is content to bud, bloom, "waste its sweetness' from the spot where it was seeded, and brought to life, finally to wither and die. Its brief moment, however, was undoubtedly one of joy, because it gave out all the beauty that it owned!

Joy resides in the unworried mind. It has wonderful creative power, and is infectious. It can alter the events of a day. Once given contact with others, its source is vastly increased. Selfish joy soon dies, leaving nothing but withered dreams behind.

Joy resides in every act of kindness, in every enacted impulse of generosity and good will. No one can predict its length of life, but if it is genuine, that length is considerable. Mothers can get what I mean—so can every sponsor of the success and happiness of someone else. It's the only way to happiness. And it is so simple that many miss its route. Every useful discovery gives birth to personal joy—and often it becomes world-wide!

First Time in 45 Years Bridge Opens When Firemen Called to Fire on East Side

Trenton (Special) — On their way to a fire on the east side of the river Sunday noon, the Fire Department was held up about eight minutes because the Trent River bridge had just swung open to let a boat pass through.

Fire Chief Harry Fillion said that this was the first time in the 45 years he has been with the fire department that they have been prevented from answering a call by the bridge being open. "We have been caught coming back several times but never before when we were on our way to one," he said.

Fortunately, the fire was just a small one and was easily extinguished before it got out of control. Firemen said the fire started in a woodpile owned by M. Baldini, 115 Princess Street. However, Fire Chief Fillion said, "That eight minutes would have made a big difference if the fire had been in any kind of a frame building. If the bridge had been just starting to open we would have possibly been held up for 15 or 20 minutes."

All the fire fighting equipment is on the west side of the river and the Dundas Street bridge which is the only highway bridge across the Trent in the town, opens frequently during the summer months to allow boats through. It is a constant fear with the firemen that they will get an urgent call from the east side of the river and be delayed by the bridge being open.

The Fire Chief pointed out that just because this was the first time it had happened in 45 years did not mean that the same thing could not happen at any time. However council has not yet seen fit to establish a sub station east of the river.

Grease Explodes; Causes Fire

About 2 a. m. Monday morning, the fire department was called to the home of Edward Shepherd, 342 Front Street where a pan of grease had exploded in the oven. Firemen Gerald Lewis and Bob Mitts thought they had extinguished the blazing pan with chemicals but when they tried to remove it and throw it out of the room, the fire flared again and exploded all over the floor, stated Lewis.

Curtains on the windows were burned and the blazing grease smeared the walls but firemen report that only slight damage was caused before they were able to extinguish the "flash fire."

Both firemen were slightly burned when the grease exploded, particularly fireman Mitts who received several painful burns to his face and neck but did not require medical attention.

Since the stove was said to be out at the time, it is thought that defective wiring inside the electric range was responsible for causing the grease to overheat and explode.

MARMORA

Jumps Into Water To Get Lunge After Line Breaks

Marmora — The lull in the local fishing reports was broken on Monday at 10 p.m. when Elmer Gibson, of Bowmanville, who is occupying one of William Bonter's cabins at Crowe Lake, was using a Heddon Crazy Crawler as surface bait, got a bite about 9:30. After battling with the fish about 20 minutes, the line broke. Out of the boat jumped Elmer and with his bare hands subdued the mascinonge which measured 44 inches and weighed 18 1-2 pounds. It was the angler's first real success in six years of fishing.

Assault Charges Bring Sentence Of Three Months

Trenton (Special) —Convicted on two charges of indecent assault involving two nine-year-old girls, Maitland Hutton, 47, was given two sentences of three months each, the sentences to run concurrently, by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Trenton Police Court yesterday.

After considering the arguments of defence counsel Louis Maraskas, that two statements given to police should not be admitted as evidence, Magistrate Wills decided not to admit the first statement but ruled that "the second was voluntary and admissible as evidence."

Magistrate Wills said he could not help being impressed by the testimony of the two officers who took the first statement, neither of which would swear that Constable Ivan Jensen (who typed the statement) did not use language that Hutton might have interpreted as a threat.

Defence Counsel Maraskas submitted that the first statement was therefore not voluntary and should not be admitted. Mr. Maraskas also contended that since the second statement followed from the first, that it should not be admitted either.

Admits Second Statement

In admitting the second statement, Magistrate Wills said that all the "cases cited by defence counsel to back up his arguments involved repeated and continual questioning by police." Magistrate Wills said he did not have sufficient confidence in Hutton's statements to believe that this had occurred in this instance.

"It is quite obvious that I must find the accused guilty on the evidence but I do not think the evidence in the confession goes nearly as far as one might have been led to believe," said the Magistrate.

Pleading for suspended sentence for his client, Mr. Maraskas said that "Hutton had more than learned his lesson. This is his first implication and he has already been punished by the adverse publicity in the newspapers. He realizes he did the wrong thing and regrets it very much."

In sentencing Hutton, Magistrate Wills said "There is no justification for a man of his age to behave as he did in dealing with two nine-year-old girls. The matter is serious enough that there should be some exemplary punishment."

Mrs. G. Dunlop, Trenton, Receives $5,000 Bequest

Ottawa, Aug. 9. (CP)—Personal bequests which may run to more than $100,000 were left by former Prime Minister King to relatives and friends, it was shown in his will made public, Tuesday night.

The largest personal bequest was of $5,000 a year for life to Mrs. H. M. Lay of Barrie, Ont., the former prime minister's sister.

The other annuity —$2,500 a year—is to be paid jointly for life to Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey B. Patteson, of Ottawa, friends of Mr. King for more than 50 years.

Largest cash gift—$10,000 apiece —go to Fred A. McGregor and J. Edouard Handy, long-time associates of Mr. King. Mr. McGregor, former private secretary, later was federal Combines Commissioner under Mr. King and, at the time of the former pirme minister's death, was helping him with his memoirs.

Mr. Handy for 17 years was personal secretary to Mr. King, serving him up until he died.

Rev. Ian Burnett, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church here, which Mr. King attended, was left $2,000.

Miss L. F. Zavistke of Renfrew, Ont., received $3,000. She was assistant secretary for many years at Laurier House.

Messenger Remembered

Miss Lillian Breen, of Ottawa, assistant secretary when Mr. King died, and Miss Florence M. Moore, of Ottawa, a former assistant secretary, are given $500 apiece.

John S. Nicol, of Ottawa, who retired two years ago after 30 years as confidential messenger, was willed $1,500.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kelly, caretakers of the Kingsmere country home across the Ottawa river from here, received $1,000 between them.

Hugh Armstrong, gardener at Laurier House, is given $250.

Mr. King willed $1,000 to Margaret Nevins, who is in the service of his sister, Mrs. Lay of Barrie.

Mr. King also specified that Laurier House employees at the time of his death, not otherwise mentioned in the will, were to receive $250 for each year of their employ and also three months' wages. About four persons will be affected.

Bequests to Relatives

In addition there were these bequests to relatives:

Sums of $5,000 apiece to Miss Rosabel Lay of Barrie, a niece; John Lay, of Toronto, a nephew; Mrs. Gordon P. Dunlop, of Trenton, Ont., a niece; Harry M. Lay, of Ste. Adele, Que., a nephew; Mrs. D. Macdougall King of Denver, Colo., a sister-in-law; Mrs. W. Lyon M. King, of Toronto, widow of Surgeon-Lieutenant W. Lyon M. King, a nephew, and Arthur Macdougall King of Toronto.

Commodore Horatio Nelson Lay of Washington, $1,000, and Robert Lay, of Ottawa, $1,500.

The full amount of the personal bequests are to be paid to the legatees, with the residue of the estate taking care of the succession duties.

Mackenzie King's Estate Surprise Even to Himself

Toronto, Aug. 9—(CP)—A close friend of Mackenzie King said Tuesday night that even the former prime minister was "shocked" to learn that his estate was valued at about $750,000.

"The size of Mr. King's estate will surprise many people," said Leonard W. Brockington, an Ottawa lawyer who is administrator of part of the estate. "It was for long unknown to him and at last was a shock even to himself."

During almost 50 years of public life, Mr. King "carefully husbanded his own resources and was never extravagant in his personal life," Mr. Brockington said in a dominion-wide CBC broadcast.

He explained the will—which leaves most of the estate to the Canadian people—at the request of the executors.

Much of Mr. King's estate was made up of "honorable gifts and bequests" received during his lifetime. Lady Laurier, widow of another prime minister, Sir Wilfred Laurier, left him Laurier House, a private home in Ottawa.

A group of 17 friends had presented Mr. King with a $225,000 fund for his personal use and to assist in the upkeep of Laurier House. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had given Mr. King $100,000.

"Mr. Rockefeller once told me," said Mr. Brockington, "that next to his own father, the late prime minister was the most powerful influence in his life."

Mr. King had dealt with all these gifts "not as though they belonged to him personally but as though they were trusts imposed upon him for the benefit of his native land."

American Ship Strikes Mine In North Sea

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 9 — (AP) — The 8,250 ton freighter American Planter struck a mine in the North Sea today, German shipping authorities said, and is being towed to Bremerhaven.

There were no reports of any casualties. The ship normally carries a crew of about 50.

A spokesman for the vessel's owners, the United States Lines, refused to confirm that the ship hit a mine. The company said cause of the accident would be investigated when the American Planter reached port.

The U.S. Lines said that, although there are accommodations for passengers none were aboard.

The vessel was en route from Hamburg to Dunkerque, France. It left New York July 26.

A spokesman said the accident occurred near the island of Heligoland.

Easy Matter To Drop Bomb On Sault Locks

Detroit, Aug. 9—(CP) — The danger of sabotage in Great Lakes shipping was stressed Tuesday at a special meeting of American Federation of Labor Maritime Union leaders here.

The meeting was called to implement a recent pledge made in Washington by A.F.L. and C.I.O. Maritime Unions, permitting the government to bar arbitrarily any crew member. It was attended by Union leaders representing 6,000 American and 12,000 Canadian Great Lakes sailors.

Speakers at the meeting said it would be "an easy matter" to drop a time bomb into the Sault locks.

They also stressed that shipping could be tied up by vessels scuttled in narrow straits at Port Huron on the St. Clair River, the Livingstone Channel in the Detroit River and at the Welland Canal.

Two resolutions were drafted at the meeting. They ask:

1. Establishment of a screening committee of representatives of management, unions and U.S. naval intelligence.

2. Abandonment of a Second World War executive order permitting Canadian ships to carry cargoes between United States ports.

The union leaders noted that Canadian crews are only superficially checked by United States immigration authorities.

Russell Smith. Canadian A.F.L. organizing director, said Canadian ore carriers could enter steel plants in the United States "and unload a group of possible subversives who could blow the place sky high."

Max Pierotti, Canadian A.F.L. representative, charged that the chief danger was among crew members of the leftist Canadian Seamen's Union.

Steel Procurement Major Proplem

New York, Aug. 9 — (AP) — Steel procurement will be a major problem for most manufacturers for a long time, the Iron Age, metalworking trade weekly says today.

Buyers, the publication reports, are taking every ton of steel they can get their hands on and reaching for more.

But it adds: "There is practically no chance that consumers will be able to boost their steel quotas for peacetime production. With steel items already on informal allocation by the mills, the only way a consumer can get more steel from the mills is by obtaining defence or essential orders or by showing a history of steel buying far out of proportion to his present quota."

The trade weekly says steel orders for defence have been "surprisingly slow in coming," although it reported a few inquiries for specialties, shell steel and tubing for aircraft and tank treads.

New strength was registered in the scrap market this week with sharp price spurts, the Iron Age says. It places steel making operations at 101 per cent of rated capacity.

Read.—A very pretty wedding was solemized on Saturday morning at 9 a.m. on July 22nd., in the Church of St. Gregory the Great, Oshawa, when Miss Margaret Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Fenton, of Oshawa, became the bride of Michael James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Denis Kehoe, of Read, Ont. The altar was beautifully decorated with rose and white peonies and the nuptial ceremony and Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Paul Dwyer, P.P., of Oshawa.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a charming gown of rich black lace over yellow bengaline, with wide picture hat of yellow straw, and yellow accessories. She carried a shower bouquet of red roses.

The bride's mother received the guests, gowned in a flowered silk jersey dress with grey accessories and a corsage of white carnations. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, wearing a grey crepe dress, grey accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Later, the young couple left on a trip to Niagara Falls and Muskoka. On their return they will reside at Oshawa.

Mr. W. Hanley, soloist, sang "Ave Maria", "Panis Angelicus", and "Jesus Come to Me".

Given in marriage, by her father, the radiant bride wore a becoming bridal gown of white slipper satin featuring molded bodice with nylon yoke and embroidered bertha collar encrusted with seed pearls, tight-fitting sleeves, ending in lily points over the hands and full skirt ending in a slight train. Her long veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a headdress of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

The wedding breakfast was held at Golden Acres Inn, and in the afternoon, a reception for the relatives was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was beautifully decorated with gladioli and streamers. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake, and appropriate floral decorations.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

Mr. Irwin Pierce, of Los Angeles, California, appreciates blackberries. When he recently opened a jar of blackberry jam which his mother had given him 80 years earlier, he said the fruit tasted fine.

Blackberries should be completely black to be good. If there are green spots or caps, it indicates the berries were picked too soon.

Like other berries they should never be served dry but always dripping either in the juice of a pie, with heavy sweet cream or with another fruit sauce.,

Blackberry pudding is baked in custard cups, then inverted onto the serving plates with the fruit on top, in the same manner as an upside down cake.

The peach sauce below is sweetened strained fruit combined with whipped cream. For a real hurry-up sauce, let peach ice cream soften somewhat, beat slightly and pour over the pudding.

Red or black raspberries may be substituted for blackberries, if desired.

Blackberry Pudding, Peach Sauce

Grease 6 custard cups lightly. In each cup place 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons brown sugar and 1-4 cup washed fresh blackberries.

Beat 2 eggs well. Add 1-2 cup milk and 1-2 cup granulated sugar to eggs, and stir to dissolve sugar. Add 1-2 teaspoon vanilla.

Add 2 cups white bread crumbs to the egg mixture. (If white bread crumbs are not on hand, heat 6 slices of white bread in a very slow oven, 250 degrees, for about 1 hour or until bread becomes dry. Crush bread between towels, using a heavy rolling pin. Sift the crumbs.)

Pour bread crumb mixture over blackberries in custard cups.

Place custard cups in a moderate oven 375 degrees for 30-40 minutes.

When ready to serve, unmold by running a paring knife around bread mixture, inverting custard cups over serving plates and shaking to unloosen.

To make sauce force through a sieve or colander 1 cup of stewed or canned drained peaches or 1 cup of thawed drained frozen peaches. Beat 1-2 cup heavy cream until thick. Sweeten with 2 tablespoons sugar. Fold peach pulp into whipped cream. Spoon whipped cream over pudding just before serving.

GOOD MANNERS

Two bridesmaids . six ushers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In my wedding party I am to ave: two bridesmaids and six shers. At weddings I've attend- d having a similar party I've en: (1) the bridesmaids walk in n t of the church alone; (2) he desmaids walk in alone and valk out with ushers; and (3) the oridesmaids arrive at the church vith ushers, and walk in and out ogether with the ushers. Which rocedure is correct?

G.M.

Definitely, incorrect is the third rocedure. . . the bridesmaids to rrive at the church with ushers nd to walk with ushers in both he processional, and in the reces- (In the processional, the ushers hould walk together, and no sher should walk with a brides- aid.) The second procedure. . . he bridesmaids to walk alone in he precessional, and in the reces- ional, two bridesmaids paired vith two of the ushers . . . is ermissible, but not really the est plan. The best plan is the irst procedure you mention. . . he o bridesmaids to walk together or in single file, n both the processional and re- essional.

The processional: first, the six shers, two by two, the shortest eading; next, the two brides- naids, either together or in single ile; next, the maid (or matron) f honor; last, you and your fa- her. The recessional: first, ride and groom; next, maid (or natron) of honor, either alone or vith the best man; next, the two ridesmaids, either together or in ingle file; last, the six ushers, in airs.

Divorcee plans her wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am divorced, and am plan- ing to re-marry in the last part f next month. (1) I know I can- ot wear a white wedding gown nd veil at this second wedding. ut several friends have also told e that it is incorrect for me to ve gown of pastel shade. If hi true please tell me what vould be correct for me to wear, d my bridesmaid too. If we wear reet-length dresses and picture ats, may be carry bouquets? (2) lay it be a church wedding, or ust it be a home wedding? (3) lay it be a double ring cere- ony? (4) May I have two at- endants, that is, two bridesmaids? 5) May I have a reception after e ceremony, the same as after y first marriage? And as I have o relatives here, would it be cor- ect to have the reception at the room's home?

H. B. B.

(1) Indeed you may correctly ear a dress of pastel shade, the hade most becoming to you, and hoose for your bridesmaid, the hade most harmonious with the hade of your dress. Wear an af- rnoon dress, long or short as you refer. You and your attend- nt may, if you like carry small, nformal bouquets (the small old- shioned bouquets, if you wish), r may wear corsages. (2) You ho inquire if your church has n strictions regarding the re- arriage of divorced persons. (3) es. (4) Much better, under the ircumstances, to have only one ttendant, your official witness. 5) Yes, you may have a re- eption, if you plan it to be a imple one, with few guests. If ou do plan to have a reception, ake your own arrangements and ay for every detail. It isn't cor- ect for the groom's family to give his reception. Better to have no eception after the wedding, and hen, when you return from your edding trip, the groom's family ould charmingly give a reception n your honor.

Fashion Flashes

A REAL investment is the tailored suit of very light weight worsted, since it can be worn during all but the very hot weather, under a coat or on its own or with furs,. Expensive, yes but well worth it, since such a suit lasts and lasts, and always looks right.

DAINTY DIMITY is one of the thin cottons that is popular this season. Red dimity printed in irregular white dots, makes a neat little dress. The cowl collar, banded in white pique, dips to a deep V in back where the pique bands tie in a big bow. Short sleeves have pointed pique cuffs.

COMING IN again, is black satin, used in very light weight for midsummer town dresses. Black paper satin makes a nice dress, its deep keyhole neckline outlined in black velvet. ~~The slim~~ skirt has a full apron panel.

ALWAYS GOOD, the combination of black and white looks extra good and new on smart summer handbags. White calf for a pouch bag, the frame covered in black patent leather, black patent piping for all the edges and for the narrow twin handles.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Eye strain a menace to good looks

Play with the make-up kit, glory in a new hair-do, go stalking smart drygoods, do everything possible to make yourself attractive, but don't overlook two basic needs: care of your teeth and eyes. If they need professional attention see that they get it even if you have to mortgage the old homestead and rob the teapot of old age savings.

The woman who goes around whimpering about her eyes being tired, and complaining because her glasses don't seem exactly right, is doing herself an injustice if she postpones seeking help. Impaired vision brings byproducts in the way of health troubles and beauty ills. It can cause headaches and it can give one the jitters, having a deplorable effect upon the nervous system.

Your eyes are on the job every waking hour

It is the common cause of frown lines between the eyes; the lids—endeavoring to protect the soul windows from bright lights—will partially close, causing the surrounding flesh to crinkle. That means that a flock of squint lines will rebuke you whenever you look in the mirror.

The human eye has a self-oiling, self-washing mechanism. In a healthy state it needs little care other than bathing twice a day; first with warm water, then with cold. If the day has been dusty and the eyes feel irritated, use a boric acid lotion that you can get from your druggist. If there is a definite inflammation, the slightest signs of pus, it is time to hurry to a doctor for relief. Sometimes the lids show small red eruptions; these also call for the attention of a physician. Unless the condition is corrected, there is a possibility of impairing the growth of the eyelashes. Styes will deplete the silky fringes that ornament your soul windows.

Don't fancy that there is any magic that you can put in your eyes to make them sparkle. Good health and animation will do that.

Don't read or sew in a dim light; if you do your poor eyes are bound to suffer. Eventually you will pay a high price for abusing them.

If you must use something to darken your lashes, let it be mascara instead of a crayon. The crayon may cause tiny, dusty particles to invade the premises.

Remember this: your eyes are on the job every waking hour. They move about constantly. Whenever the opportunity comes, afford them a few moments of rest. Stand at a window, look far away, changing the distance of vision.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

More fun as you grow older

Not long ago, one of the older readers of this column complained to me that so much attention is being paid these days to the needs of young people, that nobody has any interest in, or time for, those in later years. As a result, and as the older group of the population increases, the number of men and women who are lonely and without interests gets larger every year.

Apropos of this, interesting news comes from Cleveland, Ohio, that the 30th Golden Age Club has just been opened in that city under the sponsorship of its Welfare Federation. The only requirement for membership in these Golden Age Clubs is that applicants must be at least 60 years old. James H. Woods, director of this recreation project for older people, tells me that the average age of the members is between 72 and 74.

Total membership in the 30 clubs is now about 2,000 older men and women, and the range of activities made available to them in this way is wide. Some of the clubs afford opportunity to acquire hobbies. Others include in their programs concerts, informal lectures on subjects of special interest to older people, panel discussions on pertinent questions of the day, on books, on employment opportunities for those no longer young; theatre parties, amateur theatricals and choral groups, money-making projects, and a host of other things, all aimed at making the later years as useful, interesting and productive in their own way as those that have preceded them. Besides each club having its own varied program, the members of all the clubs get together every once in a while for large-scale activities which give men and women a chance to enlarge their circle of acquaintances and find out what others are doing.

One of the things that interested me most in the club project is the way in which these groups are formed. "In many cases" the director says, "the initiative is taken by some interested individual."

While the interested individual is often, of course, some community-minded person who sees the need of older people and wants to do something about it, it may just as well mean some alert older man or woman who has felt a personal need for a fuller and more active life, and so has approached someone in a position to help start a group of this kind. That being so, why shouldn't more of the older people themselves get busy along these lines in other cities and towns? All they would need to do would be to go to any established organization such as the Y.M.C.A., the Y.W.C.A. or other group of this type, a church, the local Red Cross, or any other community agency, and ask if something if the sort couldn't be done.

I hope some of the older people who have written me of their need for more friends, more interests and more activities, will think all this over very carefully, and consider whether or not they might not be the moving spirit in their own town on a project similar to Cleveland's Golden Age Clubs.

Actually, there is no reason why those who are getting on in life shouldn't have as good a time as anybody else. Let's see if there aren't some volunteers to help bring this about.

CANADIAN CITIZENSHIP: "I was born in Canada, one of a large family. A midwife was the only attendant, consequently my birth was not registered. However, I do have my baptismal lines. Is this sufficient to have me granted Canadian citizenship?"

The Clerk of the Peace office at the City Hall says you must go to the Registrar of Births, Parliament Buildings, and have your birth registered now. However, that only holds if you were born in Ontario. The best thing for you to do is contact the Registrar of Births in the province in which you were born, explain the situation to them, and they will give you full details.

MALE STENOGRAPHER: "I am one of these peculiar males who actually like typing and office work. I shall be ready to accept a position in October. What is the maximum salary I may expect?"

Your starting salary, if you are really good, will range between $30 and $32.50. After that the rate of your increases depends entirely on you. One interesting fact is this. Plenty of men employers prefer a male stenographer.
